So they sort of paused to listen to the discords that they made,
And the men that blew their bugles won the game that they had played.

This world is not exceeding wise; we're not so very clear
If it's a heavenly anthem or a discord that we hear,
And so we listen sagely to some bugle as it yells
In a doleful jubilate that its owner's glory tells;
And many an artist's honored because his bugle blew,
And many a poet's lauded for his self-laudation, too
Oh, I tell you o'er and o'er, for I've watched this earthly groove,
That the man that blows his bugle is the fellow we approve.

Don't deem me pessimistic, for this thought in me has birth,
That somewhere is a standard that will place us at our worth.
Our human judgment erreth, and we're apt to judge a bird
By the feathers that it weareth, though we shouldn't, I have heard,
And while this fact is still a fact we'll be inclined, I know,
To "size" the bugler's merit by the vigor of his blow,
And so I'm still insisting, for to me it's very clear,
That the man that blows his bugle is the fellow that we hear.

The Adventure of "Lone Boy."

By FRANKLIN WELLES CALKINS.

WHEN he was yet a small lad he had earned the name of "Lone Boy," because of solitary tramps which took him a long way from his own Sioux village. He was, in fact, best content when wandering among the breaks and canons of the Smoky Hill River.

At eleven years he met with an adventure which gave him another name among his people.

He had learned to set snares for wild animals, and one day discovered the fresh path of a doe and two fawns, which were in the habit of going to drink at a certain point on the river.

After several attempts Lone Boy succeeded in snaring one of the fawns. But when he came up with his game a pair of bald eagles had already attacked and killed the fawn.

The young Sioux was very angry. He had intended, if he should take a young deer alive, to carry the animal home for a pet. For some time he had known where this pair of eagles—at least, as he believed—had their nest. He had indeed planned to watch the growth of the young ones, and to lie in wait to shoot them upon their first unwary descent from their aerie. It was sometimes quite easy to secure the much prized tail feathers of the bald eagle in this way.

However, there was always the risk that another hunter might be on the watch, and so secure the prize at the opportune moment. Upon reflection, Lone Boy determined at once to attempt a capture of the young eagles, and so to revenge himself upon the parents birds for the killing of his young deer.

More than once, from an opposing height, he had marked the position of the eagles' nest. The huge pile of sticks was built upon a cleft rock near to the top of a cliff which overhung the sandy bed of a canon.

This cliff was nearly a half-day's journey up the river, but Lone Boy set out at the coyote's gait, and before noon had reached the crest of the height directly above the nest.

Here he seated himself beneath a pine and watched. Presently he saw both the old eagles sail away into the blue ether.

Then Lone Boy rose and began the descent—a perilous business. Hitherto he had refrained from attempting it only because of the apparent impossibility of bringing the birds back, even should he succeed in reaching their perch. Now he had determined to descend upon them if he could, and to pitch them off into the canon, where he could pluck the coveted feathers at his leisure.

To go directly down the face of the ledge was impossible; so he made his way along the seams and crevasses of the crowning rocks, keeping in view as much as possible the top of a leaning pine which stood beside the eagles' nest.

For some lengths of his body the descent was easier than the lad had thought, and he was already calculating with much satisfaction that he could really bring those young eagles up, one at a time, when he came to a horizontal crevasse which he knew to be the main obstacle to success.

Eagerly he stretched his length upon a sharp crown of rock and peered down upon a shelf some yards below, where the leaning pine had its root. Near the tree was a heap of sticks, bones, feathers and refuse, and two great squabs of birds, feathered yet downy, sprawled upon the pile.

It was such a little way to drop, and yet, crane his head as he might, Lone Boy could see no shrub nor projection which he might lay hold upon.

He crawled along the rim of the crevasse, looking down from every possible point of view; but everywhere the incline digged inward, the edges of the rocks projecting like the lim of a basin above the eagles' aerie.

Finally, almost despairing, the lad let himself down, clinging with both hands to the edges. Then cautiously he felt with his moccasined toes the face of the ledge, seeking for some niche or coign of vantage.

While he was thus dangling over the rim of the ledge he heard a shrill, piercing scream directly overhead, and looked up to see both the old eagles hovering along the scarp, not a bow-shot above his head.

One of them had poised, flapping its great wings, the tips of which almost brushed the rocks, and he could see the craned neck and angry red eyes of the bird as it stooped for a swoop.

The lad made a frantic effort to draw himself upward, and in the same instant the eagle shot downward like a hurled missile, with a hissing scream that set Lone Boy's nerves all a-tingle.

He had drawn himself half-way up, and was about to fling a knee upon the rim of the rock when he got a fierce buffet from the eagle's wing. He was flung backward, and his hold upon the rock was broken.

Like a falling stone he dropped to the shelf below, and would have tumbled headling into the canon but for the friendly leaning pine, which stretched some limbs across the path of his descent.

For a moment Lone Boy hung, clinging to these boughs, half-suspended over the depths; then he scrambled to safety under the sheltering pine. He did this just in time to escape a fresh onset from one of the eagles, which swooped at him, screaming wrathfully.

The leaning pine had grown a network of small limbs, and its foliage was very dense. Crawling under the drooping boughs, Lone Boy was able to hide himself completely even from the keen eyes of the eagles. Yet the birds continued to wheel about their aerie, noisily excited for a time.

The lad lay very still within his shelter, peering from under cover at the pair of newly fledged eaglets, which had flopped awkwardly off their pile of sticks when the intruder dropped upon their perch.

These young birds now hugged the rock ledge with bodies flattened and wings drooping, evidently much depressed by the descent of this strange creature and by the worried screams of the parent birds.

However, as Lone Boy continued in hiding, the old eagles became calmer, and after a time seemed to have forgotten altogether the cause of alarm. They finally sailed away in search of fresh prey.

Lone Boy now crawled cautiously out of his hiding place. His first move, boy-like, was to pounce upon the young eagles, giving them no opportunity to flop off their perch and into the canon.

In a brief time, sitting astride the two, the lad had cut strings from his buckskin leggings, and made fast a leg of each bird to pine shrubs which grew close to their nest. He tied them just far enough apart so that they could not become entangled.

When this was done, he began to take account of his situation; and very soon, upon keen scrutiny of the ledge above and below, he discovered that without rescue by some passing hunter or person in search of him, there could be no hope of escape.

He was trapped as the wolf is trapped, or even as he had snared the fawn. The narrow shelf upon which the eagles' nest had been built, and from which the leaning pine had grown, was only some ten steps in length, and but a pace or two in width at the widest. It was a hollow trough, enclosed by a basin-like rim, and was filled with pine cones, needles and other rubbish. And this little shelf suspended in mid-air was half a bow-shot above the bottom of the canon.

In vain Lone Boy scanned the face of the ledge from which he had dropped. There was no possible hand-hold within reach, and the bushy pine had leaned so far out to catch the sunlight that its flimsy tops ca near the rock dim above.

If within a very few days should pass within hailing there would be a chance otherwise not.

Again the lad crawled tent-like shelter of the pine a time he watched the eag flop about and peck at the strings which hampered the night the old eagles return of them bore a cock sage g talons.

Lone Boy was near to the dead bird was depos nest, for the tied eag spitefully, jerking the quarry forth, flapping their wings against each other for pos the meantime the old eagle solemn look of inquiry upon and finally flew away, parent disgust.

THE PULPIT.

A BRILLIANT SUNDAY SERMON BY THE REV. W. S. BAER.

Subject: "Christian Life."

Brooklyn, N. Y.—The Rev. Winfield Scott Baer, who came from Grace Church, Sandusky, O., to assume the rectorship of St. George's Church, is a man of attractive personality and an excellent speaker. His subject Sunday morning was "Christian Life." His text was from Psalms cxxii:1-2: "I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills from whence cometh my help. My help cometh from the Lord, who made heaven and earth." Mr. Baer said:

It is from the heights that we gain our widest vision. It is from the heights of human attainment that we see life most truly. To gain these heights we need to go where Christ has climbed. There are certain incidents in His life which preserve to us the intimate connection between the truth of His life and the place where it was revealed in its fullness. Let us lift up our eyes unto the hills, from whence cometh our help.

Up into a mount, with a few chosen disciples, He went by night to pray. In the darkness of the night those who accompanied Him beheld a vision. Before them was the Son of Man, transfigured, with shining face and garments all aglow. Then there came a voice from God, "This is my beloved Son, hear Him."

How often in the days to come must they have recalled that vision with joy. How often in the night of their perplexity, when they questioned what to do, must they have heard the voice, "This is my Son, hear Him." Their brethren saw not the vision, heard not the voice. In the valley below they slept. They had not been asked to go with their Master, and they did right to rest their wearied frames for the work of the morrow. But those who went with Him saw the vision and heard the voice which declared to them that whatever other teachers were, or had taught, the perfect now was come, and the imperfect was done away. The glory of the morning star is swallowed up in the light of the sun, which it foretells. So, day by day, these men saw in Him the transfiguration of humanity, the glory of a life lived with the Father; they heard the voice of that Father saying, "This is my Son, hear Him," and knew in Christ the perfection of sonship as God intended it to be.

Is this a vision of past history? A page torn from the biography of Jesus of Nazareth? Is this a day when there is no vision, and no prophet; is this the mount of God far away, and must one journey to the Holy Land to see it? Nay; since He trod the earth, all lands are holy, and we may go into the mount, may gain a vision and hear a voice. For the glory of Christ is not dimmed, nor the voice of God stilled. As one looks back through the vista of centuries and asks for the force which has uplifted man, there dawns upon him for answer the vision of the transfigured Christ. As one seeks for the highest inspiration of brush and chisel, again, clearer or dimmer, as he may see, there stands before him the vision of the transfigured man. As he gazes at glorious cathedrals, wondering at the greatness of the work and the beauty of the art, again the Son of Man appears as the Alpha and Omega, the beginning of the inspiration, the end of all the faith.

Ah, yes, and one need not go to masterpieces of art to discern the transfigured man. Closer and nearer is He to us in life than in canvas or in stone. Wherever man kneels down in prayer, wherever in thought he lifts up his heart to God, wherever in time of meditation he goes apart to be with the Father, there comes a vision of transfigured man, glowing with the glory of God. The young man looking out into the world, the old man waiting his summons home, each may have his vision and must have it, if he would do his work aright. How sad our life as Christians would be if all we did was daily round of duty on the treadmill of existence. How long the days would be; how joyless the task, with our song at best a stoic chant. How glad when weary work was done, and weary eyes were closed, and weary hands were folded on the breast. But that is not the Christian life. It is life and more abundant, with its outlook and its hope. In study of the Scriptures, in musings when the heart is too full for speech, in hours of worship when hearts and voices are upraised to God, there may come to us a vision of strength, of truth, of the better man to be, the answer to all our panting and throbbing desires to come into the fullness of life. It may be dim, because our eyes are dull. But as our eyes grow brighter, the indistinctness fades away into the glory of the transfigured man Christ Jesus. The vision of man is given to us in Him. We long, too, for knowledge of God; as we creep up "the great altar stairs which slope through darkness up to God," far, far above us we see the light of the eternal glory. And as we draw nearer, the light resolves itself into the face of the transfigured One: "We have the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ," in whom God graciously veiled His brightness that our weak eyes might see.

Our fullest vision of God and our clearest vision of man are had in Him. We may see Him in life of noble man and pure woman as we walk through the streets. We may suddenly be brightened in the darkness of a home of sin by a glimpse of Christ shining through the life of one who lives with Him. Let us ever seek for that vision of Christ in the life of our fellows, and if we seek, we shall find. But let us remember that it is well to take time with Him in worship, in family prayer, where two or three are gathered together, in our own communing with the Father, as we go apart in the mount of prayer, which is the mount of vision, the mount of glory.

Another vision, not now on mountain high, apart from others, with veil of night drawn down, but in light of day on little knoll by side of road where throngs from the city pass. Three crosses reared black against the sky, and the form of Him in the midst is as the form of Him who was transfigured on the mount. When He came down from the mount of transfiguration He met His disciples at the foot of the hill surrounded by a curious and disputing crowd. There was a strife of tongues; there was need and sorrow of man; there was weakness of His followers. The call was made on Him, and the demon was expelled, sorrow was done away, the distressed through His strength was restored to peace. This was the epitome of His life. Then He set His face steadfastly to go to Jerusalem. From vision to service; from communion with God to service of man; from transfiguration to crucifixion. His life was a life of service. He came not to be ministered unto, but to minister; He was a teacher, a preacher, a setter forth of God and man in word and life. He ministered to men's bodies; He enlightened their minds; He cleansed their souls; He strengthened them to realize the ideal which His whole life was pouring out for man in sacrificial love, as He humbled Himself and became poor that we might become eternally rich; He gave Himself up to death for us miserable sinners that we might have eternal life. The depth of sin shows the height of His love. The Cross of Calvary is the offering up of self for others.

As we know well there is wondrous strife of tongues. From every quarter there are questionings. Old forms of belief are losing power, but the old belief, we know, is not. It still inspires and uplifts, because it is life in God. Change is on the face of the earth; new and strange things are taught, sometimes even as the gospel of Christ; the seething waters of life rush to and fro, and at times one is tempted to believe that there is a reversion to chaos in spiritual things. We pass from this church, where we are gathered to worship God with the voice of thanksgiving and melody, the sound of prayer and praise, or we go from the quiet silence of our meditation, which was all filled with God's voice, into our life with other men. They may have no interest in these things, or best it may be an intellectual or speculative interest. They are very critical.

In that babel to whom shall we listen, what voice will still the deep and make a great calm? What but the old voice of the Transfiguration: "This is my Son, hear Him." Study His words to ascertain the truth to meet the inquiries of man's mind. But with all the study that we can give it we can never come to the truth of that which He taught until in our life we live the life of service, as He; He served; therefore is He great. It is a blessed privilege to be on the mount with God, but the vision must pass into service, as we go down, and by words and life declare the vision which we have had of truth and love. It will mean cost. If He found that service of others meant cost, bitter trial and weariness of body and mind, can we expect that as His followers we shall have naught to endure? May there not be for us misunderstandings, temptations from fortune and power and ambition? May there not be hardships for us, does service cost naught? It cost Him the cross. And the disciple is not above his Master. The nearer we come to realizing the vision of the perfect man the closer we draw to Calvary in the offering up of self for others. This mount of service and sacrifice is not far away, inaccessible peak capped with the everlasting snow. The service is here, where throngs of men pass to and fro; it is a lowly mount, the mount of service; in the turmoil and dust of the streets, among busy men thronging the city of man, which should be the city of God. It is lowly, yea, but hard to climb. Easier far to go up on mount of prayer and gain the vision of what we ought to be than in life of service to be what we ought. But thanks be to Him who is with us on Calvary as on Transfiguration. His spirit strengthens and helps us and enables us to offer ourselves a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God. "My help cometh from the Lord."

Is this all—vision, service, death? Nay. Christianity is not a law of death, but a law of life. Buddhism may hope to escape life, but Christ came that we might have life, and have it more abundantly. Christianity is life, not death. A few weeks after the crucifixion, on another mount, was a gathering of men with loving eyes fixed on Him who was the centre of the group; and His form was as the form of Him who had been nailed to the cross, the same, yet changed. Giving them His command, and His benediction, He ascended into heaven. Vision, service, life—not vision, sacrifice, death. Through His obedience to what He knew to be right, through His translation into a life of service of the perfect vision, which He had, He had come into the higher life, and is seated on the throne with God. It was the fitting end and glorious consummation of such a life, the crowning with the glory of manhood, fulfilled and ennobled to its greatest height. The law of sacrifice is not the law of death, but the law of spiritual life. He that loseth his life for My sake, findeth it. He that humbleth himself is exalted. He that bendeth down in love, ascendeth up in glory.

For the truth of the Mount of Ascension is a higher life for man into which he comes through vision and through service. Is it wrong to wish to use aright those powers which we feel within; is it wrong to long for a fuller life than that which now we have; must we be content with what we are in spiritual attainment, in character? Nay, if we be Christians, we cannot be content, as we behold the hills of Transfiguration and Calvary, of vision and sacrifice, and on the hill of Ascension behold manhood crowned by God in a fuller and larger life than that which earth affords, with clearer range of vision, with larger realm of service, with richer glory of the man, as He comes more and more into the likeness of His Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ.

Love.

Nothing is sweeter than love, nothing stronger, nothing higher, nothing broader, nothing better, either in heaven or earth; because love is born of God, and, rising above all created things, can find its rest in Him alone. —Thomas a Kempis.

Do I really love Jesus? Have I ever told Him that I love Him? Let me tell Him now. Do I know Him as my friend to whom I can always go? When I am weak, do I think of His strength? When I am sinful, do I think of His purity? When I am in doubt, do I think of His wisdom? When I am tired, do I go to Him for rest?—Floyd W. Tomkins.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

INTERNATIONAL LESSON COMMENTS FOR MARCH 11.

Subject: The Tongue and the Temper, Matt. v., 33-48—Golden Text, Psa. cxli., 3—Memory Verses, 44, 45—Topic: A Study of the New Life.

I. Christ's teaching on oaths (vs. 33-37). The Saviour has been showing and now continues to show "the relations in which His gospel stands to the previous dispensation, as being the fulfilment and confirmation of true Judaism and the reformation of degenerate Judaism." 33. "Hath been said." By the Jews when they received the law and in their interpretations of it. "Forswear." To swear falsely; to perjure. "But shalt perform." We know from Matt. 23:16-22 that the scribes and Pharisees declared oaths to be binding or not binding, according to the supposed sanctity of the object sworn by. "Unto the Lord." The teaching was that only such oaths as were made "unto the Lord" or in the name of the Lord were sacred and needed to be kept. "Oaths." An oath is a solemn affirmation or declaration. 34. "But I say." The emphasis here is on the "I." "Swear not at all." Profane and common swearing, with all light, irreverent oaths, such as are not required by the civil magistrate, are intended in our Lord's prohibition. "Neither by heaven." None of the oaths which our Lord adduces as specimens are judicial oaths. "God's throne." "Swearing by heaven either has no meaning or derives its meaning from the fact that heaven is the residence, the court, the throne of God."

35. "The earth," etc. See Isa. 66:1; Psa. 48:2.

36. "By thy head." A common form of oath in the ancient world. 37. "Yea—nay." Let your statements be in accordance with facts; let your language be simple, and let your answers be Yes or No. "Cometh of evil." All swearing, genteel or otherwise, "comes of evil."

II. On the law of retaliation (vs. 38-42).

38. "Eye for an eye." As a legal remedy the law of retaliation was probably the best possible in a rude state of society. 39. "But I say." Christ introduces a different method of dealing with an assailant. "Resist not evil." "Resist not him that is evil." "Turn—the other." It is the preparedness after one indignity, not to invite, but to submit meekly to another, without retaliation, which this strong language is meant to convey.

40. "Coat—cloak." The coat was the inner garment, the cloak was the outer and more costly one.

41. "Compel thee," etc. Officers and couriers in the service of the Roman Government traveling through the provinces had authority to impress any man or his beast into service for the purpose of carrying them and their baggage on their journey. 42. "Give—turn not thou away." This cannot mean that an industrious man is to give at the call of every idler, but it does mean that we are to be large-hearted, generous, ready to help others and grant favors. We are here exhorted to patience and forgiveness: 1. When we receive in our persons all sorts of insults and affronts (v. 39). 2. When we are despoiled of our goods (v. 40). 3. When our bodies are forced to undergo all kinds of toils, vexations and torments (v. 41). He that avenges himself must lose the mind of Christ and thus suffer an injury far greater than he can ever receive from man.

III. On loving enemies (vs. 43-48). 43. "Love thy neighbor." The rabbis interpreted the command, "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself," in Lev. 19:18, as referring to Jews only. They therefore believed it to be right to hate the rest of mankind. 44. "But I say." Jesus opposed this narrow, wicked view of the case and "extended our neighborhood over all mankind." See Luke 10:25-37. "Love your enemies." (Rom. 5:5). It has been said that this one precept is a sufficient proof of the holiness of the gospel on those who call down upon you God's curses. "The best commentary on these matchless counsels is the bright example of the One who gave them. See 1 Pet. 2:21-24; Rom. 12:20, 21; 1 Cor. 4:12; 1 Pet. 3:9."

45. "May be the children," etc. To act as Christ commands here would be to act like God, who blesses those who curse Him and are His enemies by the gifts of sun and rain. This is divine. "Sun to rise," etc. He imparts to all alike, but all do not receive alike.

46. "What reward." If you have only loved those who love you, you have only come up to the standard of common sinners. "Publicans." Taxgatherers employed by the Romans and hated by the Jews.

47. "Brethren only." The prominence of salutation in the social life of the East gives a special vividness to this precept. To utter the formal, "Peace be with you," to follow that up with manifold compliments and wishes was to recognize those whom men saluted as friends and brothers. But this the very heathen did ("heathen," rather than "publicans," being the true reading); and were the followers of Christ to be content with merely copying heathen customs? Christians must do to their enemies what the heathen did to their friends. "What do ye more than others." 1. Disciples have to do more than others. (1) They maintain the Christian life; (2) they extend the cause of Christ. 2. They are able to do more than others. (1) They are in alliance with God; (2) they have more moral power. 3. More is expected of them than of others. (1) By their Saviour; (2) by the world; (3) by their own consciences. 48. "Be—perfect." Complete; perfect in love. Take God as the model instead of publicans.

The bitterness of our way may be the best part of His wisdom.

Wu-Ting-Fang, formerly Chinese Minister to the United States, justified the boycott, and said there was no serious anti-foreign feeling in the country.

A more hopeful feeling seems to prevail at Algeciras regarding an agreement on the Moroccan questions.

Mont Pelee, Martinique, was again in violent eruption, according to a special cable dispatch from Barbados.

The Reichstag, at Berlin, Germany, by a large majority passed the bill granting conventional tariff rates to the United States.

TWO OPEN LETTERS

IMPORTANT TO MARRIED WOMEN

Mrs. Mary Dimmick of Washington tells How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Made Her Well.

It is with great pleasure we publish the following letters, as they convincingly prove the claim we have so many times made in our columns that Mrs.

Mrs. Mary Dimmick

Pinkham, of Lynn, Mass., is fully qualified to give helpful advice to sick women. Read Mrs. Dimmick's letters.

Her first letter:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"I have been a sufferer for the past eight years with a trouble which first originated from painful periods—the pains were excruciating, with inflammation and ulceration of the female organs. The doctor says I must have an operation or I cannot live. I do not want to submit to an operation if I can possibly avoid it. Please help me."—Mrs. Mary Dimmick, Washington, D. C.

Her second letter:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"You will remember my condition when I last wrote you, and that the doctor said I must have an operation or I could not live. I received your kind letter and followed your advice very carefully and am now entirely well. As my case was so serious it seems a miracle that I am cured. I know that I owe not only my health but my life to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and to your advice. I can walk miles without an ache or a pain, and I wish every suffering woman would read this letter and realize what you can do for them."—Mrs. Mary Dimmick, 59th and East Capitol Streets, Washington, D. C.

How easy it was for Mrs. Dimmick to write to Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass., and how little it cost her—a two-cent stamp. Yet how valuable was the reply! As Mrs. Dimmick says—it saved her life.

Mrs. Pinkham has on file thousands of just such letters as the above, and offers ailing women helpful advice.

Eruptions Appeared on Chest and Face and Neck Were All Broken Out —Cured by Cuticura.

"I had an eruption appear on my chest and body and extend upwards and downwards, so that my neck and face were all broken out, also my arms and the lower limbs as far as the knees. I at first thought it was prickly heat. But soon scales or crusts formed where the breaking out was. Instead of going to a physician I purchased a complete treatment of the Cuticura Remedies, in which I had great faith, and all was satisfactory. A year or two later the eruption appeared again, only a little lower, but before it had time to spread I procured another supply of the Cuticura Remedies, and continued their use until the cure was complete. It is now five years since the last attack, and have not seen any signs of a return. I have more faith in Cuticura Remedies for skin diseases than anything I know of. Emma E. Wilson, Liscomb, Iowa, Oct. 7, 1905."

A Chicago Alderman Owes His Election to Chamberlain's Cough Remedy.

"I can heartily and conscientiously recommend Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for affections of the throat and lungs," says Hon. John Shenick, 220 So. Peoria St., Chicago. "Two years ago during a political campaign, I caught cold after being overheated, which irritated my throat and I was finally compelled to stop, as I could not speak aloud. In my extremity a friend advised me to use Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. I took two doses that afternoon and could not believe my senses when I found the next morning the inflammation had largely subsided. I took several doses that day, kept right on talking through the campaign, and I thank this medicine that I won my seat in the Council." This remedy is for sale by Upchurch Drug co., Clanton; A Horn, Thorsby.

One would think the Laxative idea in a cough syrup should have been advanced long before it was. It seems the only rational remedy for Coughs and Colds would be to move the bowels and clean the mucus membranes of the throat and lungs at the same time. Kennedy's Laxative Honey and Tar does this. It is the Original Laxative Cough Syrup, the best known remedy for Coughs, Colds, Croup, Whooping Cough, etc. Tastes good and harmless. Sold by Upchurch Drug co.

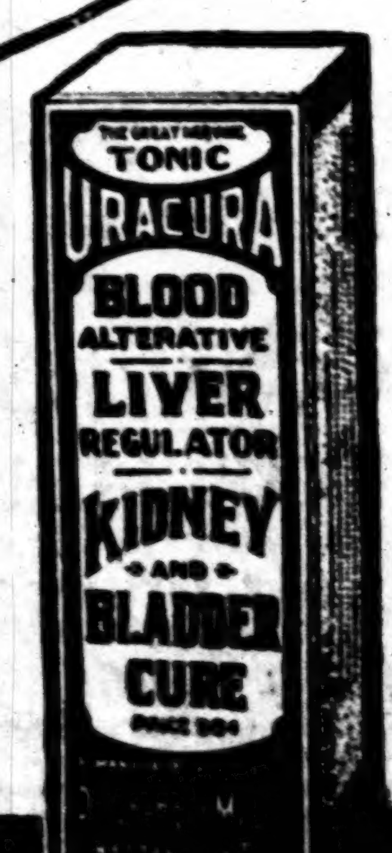
FOR 5 REASONS

If you are a sufferer from Liver, Kidney or Bladder Trouble, you owe it to your precious life to

TAKE

URACURA



First—It is a perfect tonic and cure for Kidney and Bladder Diseases.
Second—It regulates the Liver.
Third—It purifies the Blood.
Fourth—It restores Strength.
Fifth—It renews Vitality.

We know beyond doubt that it is a cure for any of these terrible diseases, no matter how slight or how serious the case maybe. We have proved this by our own experience and the testimony of thousands who have been cured.

It is a peculiar and dangerous feature of Kidney and Bladder Troubles that their symptoms are seldom alarming until they have you well in their clutches. They are indeed the most insidious diseases known to medical science. A few seemingly harmless pains in the back and side; sometimes a headache and nervousness with no apparent cause; occasional hot flushes; swelling of the hands or feet; very light or very dark colored urine—often too frequent—one or another or all of these symptoms, scarcely noticeable unless you are warned and on the lookout, mean Kidney or Bladder trouble. Study yourself—do not let another day go by without finding out about the health of your Kidneys and Bladder. Review your symptoms and check the disease in its early stages.

A 50c. Bottle of Uracura Will Begin the Good Work

After even a few days treatment you will notice that the urine will be of a very dark or reddish color with a strong odor of the medicine—this is not only a sign that there is disease but also that Uracura is doing its duty. After two or three days the urine will be clear; you will begin to feel less pain about the Kidneys and the pains in your back will leave. Your nervousness will disappear and you will feel stronger and better in every way. A consistent and continued treatment will absolutely eradicate the disease from your system and you will feel like a new being. A great Nervine Tonic, Blood Alterative, Liver Regulator and Kidney and Bladder Cure. Restores strength, renews vitality, purifies the blood, relieves biliousness and constipation and produces a healthy appetite and sound digestion.

MAN ON THE CORNER

Of the Sights He Saw, and Some He Saw Not.

lanton, at the present time, and every prospect of continuing e same line, is a veritable hive uilding industry. It is doubtf there is another town of the size in the State, and indeed, y larger ones, that are so in iously occupied in increasing umber of their dwellings and houses. Last year was a good for the building trades, but promises to far exceed 1905 in number and value of buildings.

e addition to the court house aring completion and is assur- a handsome addition to the s of Chilton county, while the jail is also a building of which county may be proud. The hotel built for W. M. Wilson, h is to be occupied by that lar caterer, O E. Latham, is ly finished, and shows up well the depot. These are public dings which reflect credit not upon the town of Clanton but upon Chilton county. It 's progressive spirit and a re to be "up with the times." public schoolhouse, recently pleted, is another evidence of spirit of progress t that is only a beginning. ll sides buildings are going up, there is no end to those in pective. Judge Adams will retain range grove in Florida, but make his home here and we ily welcome him back to ton.

. D Spigener is receiving bids a dwelling on his recently ht lot, and will build as soon rangements can be made. W. Adams is also figuring on build- a new residence. Dr. V. Card of Thanks

Clanton, March 12, 1906

Editor Banner—Please allow me space in your paper to say to the neighbors and friends that were so kind and faithful to my dear mother during her illness that I cannot express my gratitude to them for their indefatigable care for her. They did all they could for her until the great monster death seized her, last Frinay and bade all stand back, when all human help failed. But we are sure that the angels of God were present to escort her spirit to the land of rest, sweet rest. So we weep not as those who have no hope, but earnestly solicit an interest in the prayers of God's children that we may live such a life of consecration to God and our fellowman as she lived before us, and finally meet her on the banks of sweet deliverence where there will be no more parting. ROOSTER.

Death of Mr. T W. Weldon.

A familiar figure on the streets of Clanton was that of Mr. T. W. Weldon, and only a few days ago he was circulating among his friends here in his customary jovial manner. Tuesday morning, feeling unwell, he sent his son for a doctor, but before the medical man could get to the Weldon place, one mile west of Clanton, Mr. Weldon had breathed his last. He was a man of genial temperament and good disposition, full of fun and frolic. Born and raised in Chilton county he was well known and had many friends. He was 44 years of age. A widow and eight children survive him, to whom the deepest sympathies of friends and neighbors are tendered. The funeral took place at Liberty church Wednesday morning.

Our school is progressing nicely under the skillful management of Miss Lottie Johnson.

These beautiful mornings fill our hearts with enthusiasm, and we go to school with a determination to study and make women and men of ourselves while we have the glorious opportunity of going to school. But it darkens our hearts when we think that our school just lacks two weeks being out then we will have to say goodbye to our dear friends and schoolmates.

When I think of the few days that we have together in school, it makes me shrink with a broken spirit, and I yearn with a heart sincere to bring them back again, for what is fairer that school days where everyone is met with the same sweet smile and loving words. But we will not go about with a sad heart, we will look forward to the next school that not a face shall be missing among us.

Sincerely,
SCHOOL GIRL.

TIM M'BRIDE IS ACQUITTED.

Was Tried in Savannah for Murder of "Babe" Dwyer.

Savannah, Ga.—The jury in the case of Tim McBride, charged with murder after being out less than an hour, returned a verdict of not guilty. The young man was congratulated upon the result by a host of friends.

Tim McBride was tried upon the charge of having murdered "Babe" Dwyer, one of three brothers who one afternoon last month became engaged in a fight in front of the city hall with Plumbing Inspector McKenna. McKenna had beaten Babe Dwyer during the forenoon in a fight at the court house, and Babe was after satisfaction. He assailed McKenna as the latter alighted from a street car. The other Dwyers were taking a hand, or ready to do so, when Harbormaster James McBride, Keeper of the Police Stables James Lane and Policeman Patrick Kearney appeared on the scene. Pistols were drawn by all save Babe Dwyer, who had none, and firing began. Tim McBride, a son of the harbormaster, heard the shots and ran from the harbormaster's office and took a hand in the shooting, directing his fire at Babe Dwyer, who was retreating before and defending himself with bricks that he hurled.

White Stone Springs Hotel Burns.

Spartanburg, S. C.—White Stone Springs hotel, located about six miles from here, a short distance from the Columbia branch of the Southern railway, was totally destroyed by fire Sunday night about 8 o'clock. The furnishings were saved, but the building was lost through the lack of fire fighting apparatus. Preparations were being made to open the place for the summer. The loss is estimated at $30,000. The hotel has been one of the many constructed during the last few years. The hotel will probably be rebuilt.

Foreigners Storm Hospital.

Greensburg, Pa.—Infuriated upon being refused admittance to the Westmoreland hospital, over a hundred Italians and Austrians assailed the hospital for several hours late Saturday night. The police force and a squad from Troop A of the state constabulary were called out, and it was not until seven rioters had been arrested and jailed that the trouble ceased. The foreigners came to Greensburg from the camp at Radebaugh to visit fellow countrymen who had been injured in the railroad wreck on Thursday.

Macon County Election.

Tuskegee, Ala.—The primary election here passed off quietly with a rather heavy vote polled. W. E. Huddleston, for sheriff, and E. W. Thompson, for representative, have carried the county over their opponents by heavy majorities. H. P. Merritt, for state senator, had no opposition and carried the county practically solid.

May Remove Plant.

Gadsden, Ala.—W. H. Kyson, of the Butler-Kyson Oil Company, of Huntsville, was in conference with business men with a view to removing their plant to this city. This is one of the largest oil mills in the state, and a shortage of cotton seed in that locality is given as the reason of removal.

Three Fatal Accidents.

Shamokin, Pa.—Three fatal accidents have occurred here. Joseph Lee was smothered by a bank cave in; John Morgan, a Locust Gap mining expert, was killed by a fall of coal at the Locust Spring colliery, and an Italian was killed at Hickory Ridge mine.

Fire at Union Springs.

Union Springs, Ala.—Fire broke out Friday about 1 o'clock in the upper story of McLean Bros.' store from a defective flue. The fire made considerable headway in the second story before it was extinguished, and the goods on the ground floor were badly damaged by water. The loss was partly covered by insurance.

Falls Into Open Grate.

Union Springs, Ala.—The little 9-months-old boy of Mr. and Mrs. T. U. Baskin fell into an open grate and was painfully burned on the forehead, chin and neck. The wounds were quickly dressed by a physician and the little one is resting as quiet as could be expected.

KANSAS OPENS WAR

On the Oil Trust. Commission Begins Inquiry Into Rates.

DISCRIMINATION IS CHARGED.

Independent Producers Claim Railroads Have Favored the Standard Oil Company.

Kansas City, Mo.—Acting upon resolutions passed by both houses of congress, three members of the interstate commerce commission began an investigation here Monday into charges made by independent producers of Kansas that the railways of Kansas discriminate in favor of the Standard Oil Company in the matter of oil rates outside that state. The railroads involved are the Santa Fe, the Missouri Pacific, the Missouri, Kansas and Texas, the St. Louis and San Francisco, the Rock Island, the Union Pacific, the Kansas City Southern and the Burlington.

The members of the interstate commerce commission making the investigation are Francis M. Cockrell, Judson C. Cleents and Charles A. Prouty. John T. Marchand, who has been in the southwest making a preliminary investigation of the producers' charges, was present as the attorney for the commissoin. Frank S. Monnett, formerly attorney general of Ohio, and Clifford Thorne, of Washington, Ia., were present as counsel for the independent producers. The railroads' interests had representatives at th investigation, and there were several interested spectators. Among the latter was C. D. Chamberlain, of Cleveland, O., secretary of the National Petroleum Association, comprising independents of Pennsylvania and Ohio. He said he was here to watch the proceedings in the interest of his association.

The agitation for the investigation was started some time ago, when Clifford Thorne, acting on behalf of the Kansas Oil Producers' association filed with James R. Garfield, commissioner of corporations, at Washington, a statement in which instances of alleged discrimination against the independents in the matter of rates were made.

While members of the producers' association and railway officials are the chief witnesses, the interstate commerce commission has invited "all persons, firms, companies or associations having any interest in the proceedings" to appear to produce and cross-examine witnesses.

A. L. Robertson, of Chanute, Kan., was the first witness examined. Mr. Robertson, who was formerly a newspaper correspondent, is now a member of the Kansas Oil Producers' Association, which makes the charges of discrimination. To the Associated Press Mr. Marchand stated that Mr. Robertson probably was the most important witness produced by the independent oil interests, and that the government would base its investigation mainly on his testimony.

Dr. Clements Loses by Fire.

Tifton, Ga.—Friday night the residence and office of Dr. H. W. Clements at Lenox were burned. The fire was discovered between 11 and 12 o'clock in the dining room. Dr. Clements, with his wife and two children, had a narrow escape with their lives, and were able to save only a little clothing and but very little furniture, among the latter a new piano, which was a little damaged. Dr. Clements lost nearly all his own clothes, his coat and hat and a valuable watch. Dr. Clements estimates his loss at about $3,500, including both buildings, and on these he had insurance to the amount of $1,000.

Formally Betrothed.

The date of the marriage has been definitely fixed for June 2.

Steamer Goes Ashore.

San Francisco.—Advices to the Merchant say that the steamer Transport is ashore near Port Angeles. She is probably a total wreck. Her crew has been saved.

Cordele, Ga.—The first regular term of Crisp county superior court convened here Monday, with Judge Littlejohn presiding. All cases transferred from Dooly county, both civil and criminal, will be tried.

COTTON QUIET AND EASIER.

Prices fairly well maintained during the week, influenced by the large spot sales at Liverpool and reports of a scarcity of high grades in the leading American spot markets. The feeling, however, has been bearish among local operators, as it is believed that there is a large outstanding long interest in May and July. Bears have made several strong attempts to dislodge this cotton, and cables from Liverpool of a rather bearish character during the week gave evidence of bear manipulation through that market. It had been predicted that on any indication of letup in the Liverpool sales our market would ease off, and as the Liverpool spot business was somewhat smaller at the close of the week, with a sharp break in futures, our market Saturday opened easy. Early prices 6 to 10 points below the previous close, with considerable pressure from bear sources, and a lack of outside demand. The weather was fine through the greater part of the cotton belt, and port receipts were again quite liberal. Reports from the eastern part of the belt indicate a good increase in acreage this year, and spot cotton buyers say that there is still considerable high grade cotton being held at interior points, but that holders are firm and refuse to sell at present values. Trade generally watching the preparations for the new crop for any indications as to the probable acreage and conditions at planting.

Socialists to Save Miners.

New York.—John Chase, former socialist mayor of Haverhill, Mass., got the floor at Sunday's meeting of the central federation union to ask for cooperation in demonstrations the socialists are getting up to protest against the punishment of President Moyer. Secretary Haywood and other officers of the Western Federation of Miners, arrested in connection with the assassination of former Governor Steunenberg, of Idaho. The first public meeting will be held here and Chase asked the central union to send delegates.

"If these two men are hanged," he said, "and if any men in this body or any any other body is not then willing to shoulder a gun and fight for his class he is a coward."

It was decided to send two delegates.

Jerome Wants to Come.

Atlanta, Ga.—So anxious is William Travers Jerome to accept the invitation of the Georgia Bar Association to address them at their annual meeting that he has written President T. A. Hammond, of Atlanta, to arrange, if possible, to postpone the Warm Springs meeting from July 4 to July 15. Mr. Jerome wrote that he could not possibly comt on July 4, as he had engagements that could not be written, but that he was more than eager to come here, and if the change in date could be effected he would be sure and come. President Hammond has taken the matter up with the other members of the executive committee over the state and feels assured that the change will be agreed upon.

Congressman Will Resign.

Fort Wayne, Ind.—Hon. Newton W. Gilbert, representative in congress from the twelfth district, announced that he will shortly resign his seat to accept a judgeship in the Philippines, which position has been offered him by the president. Congressman Gilbert will give up his seat some time during the present session.

TO TUNNEL BEHRING

Strait is Latest Scheme—Russian Government Gives Plan Favorable Consideration.

THE RADICAL PAPERS AROUSED.

Claim It Is an Attempt of the Old Bureaucracy to Sell Out Russia To American Speculators.

St. Petersburg.—A more favorable attitude is being taken here toward the dazzling scheme for a tunnel under Behring Straits and an all-rail route from the United States to Europe. Baron Lois de Robert, representing the American-Siberian Transport Company, is again pressing the project vigorously, and has made considerable progress towards securing a desired concession from Russia.

A distinct party of the government, which has the sympathy of Premier Witte, earnestly favors closer commercial relations between the United States and Russia, and this project appeals to it not only as a method for accomplishing this end, but for developing the resources of Siberia.

The company, which believes the Siberian side is as rich in gold as the Alaskan side, offers to construct the tunnel and build a road 3,000 miles in length from East Cape to Kansk, in the government of Yenezlek, where it will join the Siberian railway on condition that alternate sections of eight miles on either side of the line, together with the mining concessions covered, be granted the company.

Reports concerning the engineering difficulties and the financial responsibility of the promoters, etc., have been submitted and were generally favorably received by the ministers. Emperor Nicholas has created a mixed commission, before which Baron de Lobet will make final arugments March 15 and ask for eighteen months in which to complete arrangements and ten years to finish the road. Should Russia for strategic reasons ask that the road, instead of following the Lena river, go directly eastward from Kansk to the point whence connection will be made with Khabaroska, involving a detour of 1,200 miles, the company is willing to accept this on condition that American materials be admitted free.

Generally speaking, the activity of Americans in seeking to secure concessions has aroused the ire of the radical papers, which see therein an attempt on the part of the old bureaucracy to "sell Russia to foreigners on the eve of the convocation of the douma."

Wendell K. Jackson's canal scheme to connect the Black and the Baltic seas, which is an old project, originally proposed for purely strategic reasons in order to enable Russia to move warships quickly to the two sea fronts, is now a purely commercial scheme. The depth of the canal is to be sixteen feet. Supplementary surveys Mr. Jackson has obtained the right to make give him the preference in the matter of the contract for construction, but the government reserves the right to give the contract to Russians, in which case Mr. Jackson is to be indemnified in the sum of $110,000.

Death From Storm.

Boston, Mass.—Three deaths by falling wires, Jacob Wenocore and Samuel Bernstein at Chelsea, and Guy C. Cowperthwaite at Salem, nuuemrable shocks and narrow escapes, miles of telegraph poles down across the railroad and trolley tracks, crippling train and telegraph service, shipping along the entire coast storm bound and business in many places at a standstill are the features of a heavy snow and wind storm which swept New England. Many thousands of dollars' damage is reported, and it will be several days before telegraph, telephone and train service is restored to normal conditions.

Insane Man at Throttle.

East St. Louis.—Seized with a sudden frenzy, Charles Guenther, until recently employed as a fireman at the plant of the American steel foundry, suddenly sprang aboard a locomtive standing on a side track near the establishment, jerked open the throttle and sent the engine plunging ahead. It jumped the track and tore through a 14-inch brick wall and came to a stop by crashing into heavy machinery inside the works.

Jordan Touring Carolina.

Columbia, S. C.—Hon. Harvie Jordan, president of the Southern Cotton Association, is making a tour of this state. He has delivered speeches at Lancaster, Chester and Florence. The meetings have been well attended by the farmers and the head of the association is being well received.

Taft for Supreme Court.

Washington, D. C.—President Roosevelt has decided to appoint William H. Taft, of Ohio, now secretary of war, to the next vacancy in the United States supreme court. That vacancy is to be created by the vountary retirement of Associate Justice Henry B. Brown, who was appointed in 1890 by President Harrison from the state of Michigan.

THE SENATE IS VERY HOSTILE.

Rate Legislation Is the Only One of the President's Pets Which Promises to Be Accepted by Congress.

Washington, D. C.—The defeat of the joint statehood bill by the senate caused a gloomy feeling at the White House. The president is especially placed in a very trying position over the result. He has been posing as a friend of statehood, and as Oklahoma is beyond all doubt entitled to admission to the Union, his endorsement of the senate bill is the only logical course for him to take.

On the other hand, the house organization and the few administration senators who made a losing fight insist largely as a matter of spite that he stand out against the passage of the senate bill and thus deny Oklahoma statehood.

As matters stand the passage of a railroad rate bill of doubtful remedy is about the only thing the president promises to have to his credit when congress adjourns. He has already been turned down on a number of minor matters that he was anxious to see enacted into law, and upon every vote on matters of great importance he has been defeated.

Originally the administration stood for a readjustment of the tariff schedules, the enactment of the Philippine tariff bill, the Santo Domingo treaty, a free hand in Panama, joint statehood and rate legislation. Many believe that the abandonment of the tariff adjustment idea created a condition which has defeated the Philippine bill. Many sincere tariff reformers object to the bill because it looked to them as if the standpatters were selecting some one thing, in this instance sugar, for a reduction of duty, while leaving the other schedules practically unchanged. The republican insurgents against the Philippine bill were the only sincere republicans in the house with the exception of a mere handful who are in favor of a general revision of the tariff anyway. The combination against the joint statehood bill was a natural result.

BATTLE WITH MOROS.

Fifteen Americans and 600 Moros Are Killed—Many Wounded.

Manila.—Maj.-Gen. Leonard Wood, commander of the Division of the Philippines, reports as follows from Jolo, capital of the Sulu Islands:

"A severe action between troops, a naval detachment and constabulary and hostile Moros has taken place at Mount Dajo, near Jolo. The engagement opened during the afternoon of March 6 and ended on the morning of March 8. The action involved the capture of Mount Dajo, a lava cone 2,100 feet high, with a crater at its summit and extremely steep. The last 400 feet were at an angle of 60 degrees, and there were fifty perpendicular ridges covered with a growth of timber and strongly fortified and defended by an invisible force of Mores.

"The army casualties were fifteen enlisted men killed, a commissioned officer and four enlisted men wounded. The naval casualties numbered thirty-two. Ensign H. D. Cooke, Jr., of the United States steamer Pampanga, commanding the Pampanga fort, was severely wounded, and Coxswain Gilmore was severely wounded in the elbow.

"The constabulary casualties were Capt. John White, wounded in the thigh, severely; three enlisted men killed and thirteen wounded. Capt. Tyree Rivers sustained a slight flesh wound in the thigh; Lieut. Gordon Johnston, wounded in shoulder, serious; Lieut. E. H. Agnew was slightly wounded in the right hand; Lieut. Wylie T. Conway, of the Sixth Infantry, was slightly wounded in the left eye. All the wounded are doing well.

"Col. Joseph W. Duncan, of the Sixth Infantry, directed the operations. All the defenders of the Moro stronghold were killed. Six hundred bodies were found on the field.

"The action resulted in the extinction of a band of outlaws who, recognizing no chief, had been raiding friendly Moros and owing to their defiance of the American authorities had stirred up a dangerous condition of affairs.

"The artillery was lifted by block and tackle a distance of 300 feet into a position on the lip of the crater.

"Brigadier-General Bliss and myself were present throughout the action.

"The attacking columns were commanded by Maj. Omar Bundy, Capt. K. P. Lawton, Captain Rivers, Capt. L. M. Koehler, Captain McGlachlin and Lieutenant Johnston.

"The officers and men engaged highly commend the Moro constabulary who did excellent work, their casualties numbering seventeen out of the force of forty-four engaged.

"It is impossible to conceive a stronger natural position than that attacked."

THE HORSE STILL WITH US.

Let no one imagine that the horse is soon to become an object of curiosity. Bicycles have come and gone and the automobile has been making considerable noise the last few years and cutting up capers and people while the horse has been quietly eating oats, until now the farmer with a pasture full of the right kind of horses can sell them and buy a [illegible]. Horses have been steadily going up in price, which is much better than [illegible] going up, as the automobile has been doing. Automobiles will come and go, may puff in and speed out, but his majesty the horse remains monarch of the road against all competition. No machine ever built or still uninvented will successfully dispute his reign. He has withstood the locomotive, merely permitting it to do the heavy work and give him an easier lift.

Inventions will crop up from time to time, but none that will dispute the horse's place in the people's hearts, for, always excepting the human race, the horse is the most beautiful thing made of flesh and blood, and perhaps the human animal scarcely deserves to be excepted when we consider how men and women deform themselves by foolish habits.

Fashionable horse shows are frequent all over the country, extraordinary inducements being offered for fine animals, and I see in this and other facts signs of increasing interest in the horse beautiful, with an attendant interest in breeding. Buyers are today searching the country for good horses of all kinds, and are offering better prices than were offered six months ago. Another important factor to be seriously considered is the foreign demand for American horses, which is increasing at a phenomenal rate, a shipload of horses being exported weekly. England, Germany, France, Scotland and in fact all Europe concedes that America can raise better horses for less money than any other country in the world, and Europe may be depended upon to take all the surplus stock in the country at fair prices.

Haphazard breeding is the order of the day among farmers, too often they breed without a purpose, not caring what is crossed with what, so that the result is a colt which can be marketed. The average farmer is, above all others, the man who must market his produce at a good price in order to make both ends meet, to say nothing of making farming pay; and yet he persistently neglects to take the one step which will bring him good prices. It is only by repeated admonitions, urging and prodding that he will ever be induced to take forethought enough to control by proper breeding the quality of stock he markets. Not until he does this will he make breeding pay. I will say that I am not afraid that the horseless age is upon us; not while the automobile remains blind to your actions of kindness and dumb to the sound of your voice, not while the horse is the delightful company he is, whether in the stable, under the saddle or in the harness. Certain it is that as far back into the ages as we can trace his association with human beings the horse appears as the friend and intimate companion of man. He steps down the ages decked with the flowers and wreaths of love, poetry, romance and chivalry no less than with the stern trappings of heroism and war. "Man's inhumanity to man" and beast is justly lamented; but so associated with the sentiment and necessities of man is the horse that motorcycles and automobiles will be powerless to displace him.—J. W. Grand, in the Tribune Farmer.

SHEEP ON EVERY FARM.

The percentage of farms in this province (Ontario) on which sheep raising cannot be made a profitable industry is very small indeed. There are a number of reasons why sheep should be kept on every farm. Farming has changed wonderfully during the last fifteen years. We then sold our raw products direct. Now we have become manufacturers as well as farmers, and are putting a more finished product on the market. We are using animals as machines to increase the value of our farm products. Ten years ago I ventured the statement that we could double the annual value of the farm products of Ontaria by selling our grain in the form of live stock rather than in the raw state. What I then predicted has come to pass; our output has doubled. I do not believe there is any class of animal that can do more toward still further increasing the wealth producing value of Ontario farms than the sheep.

The next point in their favor is that no class of livestock can be handled with so little labor, and one of the greatest difficulties on the farm during the last five years has been the question of labor.

The third, and perhaps the greatest, point in favor of sheep, is their quality as money makers. There is no class of meat producing stock that can be prepared for market so cheaply as the sheep. The cost of producing mutton as compared with beef is altogether in favor of mutton. I am satisfied that you can produce one hundred pounds of lamb at a cost of $1 to $2 less than it costs to put one hundred pounds of weight on a steer when winter finishing is practised, and at the same time the average selling price of well finished lambs in February and March has been from 75 cents to $1 a hundredweight more than the selling price of export cattle in April and May.—John Campbell, before the Dominion Sheep Breeders' Association in Tribune Farmer.

POULTRY NOTES.

Remember that a warm poultry-house will lessen the feed bill.

Over-crowding the poultry-house is dangerous business and should never be practiced. By crowding too many living bodies in a limited space it will surely bring disease and disaster. We know it is a great temptation to keep all the nice pullets over but we should not unless we can properly accommodate them.

Excessive cold and heat are two very important factors for us to study, for they are both very productive of disease. We should strive to make the house as warm as possible without the use of artificial heat, allowing them enough ventilation to keep the air pure. Over-heating is usually caused by over-crowding.

Fowls must have grit to digest the food. When taken into the gizzard, it grinds up the food in a rotary motion which is part of the process of digestion. Keep gravel on hand, burn clam-shells and bones, pound up all the broken dishes and give the coal ashes for a dust bath occasionally.

If the combs of your hens become frozen, do not expect them to lay until they are healed. Melt a little fresh lard, into which put a few drops of turpentine and saturate the combs with this, being careful not to use too much turpentine, this mixture will remove the soreness and help them to heal.

By having the furnishings of the poultry-house such as nests, roosts, and troughs so arranged as to permit of their being taken outside when it is desirable to clean up the premises, as the floor and house can then be more conveniently renovated and the appliances can be better cleaned outside. When building make everything about the house as simple as possible, so it may be easily and thoroughly cleaned.—M. D. H. in Indiana Farmer.

GRINDING CORN FOR SWINE.

We believe in feeding swine so that they will have something to keep them busy as well as for the best results to be obtained from the grain, so we feed the corn whole and usually on the cob until it gets hard and flinty, when it is either shelled and soaked a little to soften it or soaked on the cob. All other grains are ground because it has been demonstrated that the smaller grains go through the animals and do them but little good. Carrying out the plan of keeping the swine busy, we always have something for them to chew on—cornstalks, squares of sod, apples, potatoes and other vegetables, and we do not see that they take on fat any slower because of this plan of feeding. Pure water is given them in clean troughs twice a day, and we know they thrive better for having it.—Indianapolis News.

BUILDINGS FOR CHICKENS.

To get eggs, suitable buildings must be provided for the chickens. Do not force or allow them to roost in trees not in the barn or on the farm implements and vehicles. A definite plan and arrangement with reference to the farm poultry, coupled with a small amount of energy, will work wonders.

Coleridge's Comparison.

So great has been the affection of readers for the books that have given them delight, that literature is full of proofs of gratitude toward noble books. There have been countless comparisons and metaphors used to make clear the relation between the book and the reader. Perhaps the most original was hit upon by Coleridge, who compares an excellent book to a well-chosen and well-tended fruit tree. He says "We may recur to it year after year, and it will supply the same nourishment and the same gratification, if only we ourselves return to it with the same healthful appetite." But, though his simile pleases the fancy, it does not quite satisfy the judgment. While the fruit of a tree must yield much the same flavor always, the gratification we experience from reading must always differ according to the condition of mind of him who reads. It has been said that a traveler can bring home only what he takes with him, which means that the pleasure derived from traveling is entirely dependent upon the capacity of the traveler's mind. One's taste may change, and one's ability to understand and appreciate is constantly changing. All of which points the moral that it is an excellent thing to read a good book often, provided the intervals between readings are fairly long.—St. Nicholas.

Buddhism is the religion of about one-third of the human race.

TO RESTOCK GAME COVERS.

Need of More Effective Protection and Providing Supply of Birds.

The thorough restocking of game covers is urged in a report issued by the Department of Agriculture, Washington, in a report on "Game Conditions in January." "Now that the hunting season is practically over," the report says, "the biological survey suggests that efforts be directed todard insuring more effective protection of game and an adequate supply for the future. Owing to the non-migratory character of quail and the consequent depletion of various localities where hunting has been excessive, or the birds have been killed off by the severity of the past two winters, restocking is frequently necessary, but the demand for live birds for this purpose far exceeds the available supply. The difficulty is augmented by the fact that Southern birds are scarcely hardy enough to stand Northern winters, and hence it is difficult for Northern States to secure birds suited to the climate. The game commissioners of some States, particularly Massachusetts and New Jersey, for several years have endeavored to obtain a supply of quail, but have been only partially successful.

"Perceiving that absence of food and shelter is the principal cause of mortality, State officials, game associations, and many private individuals have united in attempting to make good these deficiencies. Grain and other food have been distributed freely and systematically after heavy snowfalls, when the usual food is covered, and suitable shelter has been provided. Much activity prevailed last year in Illinois, Indiana, Massachusetts, Maryland, New Jersey, North Carolina and West Virginia. Such measures are needed to preserve the quail from possible ultimate extinction; for with a growing army of sportsmen hunting them annually—an army that now numbers hundreds of thousands in this country—their ranks are each fall reduced so far below the normal that, if the succeeding winter happens to be severe, extermination of many colonies is almost sure to follow. Such a result is deplorable, not only from the standpoint of the sportsman, but, owing to the great value of the quail to agricultural interests as the destroyer of insects and the seeds of weeds, from that of the farmer as well."

QUAINT AND CURIOUS.

The shadow of a dangling skeleton on a window shade created great excitement in a London street the other night. An inquiring policeman learned that an ambulance doctor was delivering a lecture on first aid to a roomful of railway employes.

After spending a great part of five months standing up to his neck in the water of Lake Lucerne, Dr. Fastenrach, a Zurich professor, has succeeded in taming about 200 fish so that they eat out of his hand and let him lift them out of the water. He has also taken some remarkable photographs of his finny friends.

The Choctaw nation is humiliated because one of their number has broken his word. A Chotaw's word has been as good as a white man's bond. This honorable tradition of the tribe has, however, been violated. Robert L. Folsom, a full-blooded Choctaw was charged with murder and the time for his trial fixed. Then he was released, and when the trial day came he did not appear. He was finally arrested in Utah and taken to Durant, in Indian Territory, where he will be tried. Folsom is said to be the first man of his tribe to flee from justice.

The sensation of falling down a precipice is one that few persons have had an opportunity of recording. Prof. Albert Heim, a well known geologist, has been able to describe the experience to the Swiss Alpine Club and relates that he was not troubled in breathing and felt none of the paralyzing terrors that so often overwhelm victiims of sudden catastrophe. He felt perfect tranquility, though remarkably quickened mental activity. Old memories were revived pleasantly, much of life was lived over, and then his ears were filled with soft musical sounds, and consciousness was lost as the ground was struck. There was no pain or sensation of shock.

According to a Tientsin newspaper, an author in Peking received from a native publication, together with his rejected manuscript, the following letter from the editor: "Illustrious Brother of the Sun and of the Moon: We have perused your manuscript with celestial delight. By the bones of our ancestors, we swear that we have never met a masterpiece like it. If we publish it his Majesty the Emperor will command us to take it as a criterion and to print nothing that does not equal it. Since that could never be possible in ten thousand years, we return manuscript, trembling and asking your mercy seventeen thousand times. Lo, our head is at your feet and we are the slave of your slave."

One of His Lucid Intervals.

A visitor at a lunatic asylum noticed one of the inmates walking about the grounds pushing in front of him a wheelbarrow turned upside down.

The visitor stopped him and inquired the reason for the unusual procedure.

"Why, you see," said the demented one, "if I turned it right side up they'd put bricks in it."—Harper's Weekly.

Perish in Awful Mine Explosion—Greatest Disaster in History.

HUNDREDS WERE ENTOMBED.

Ignition of Firedamp Hurls Cages From Shafts and Wrecks Plant, Rendering All the Apparatus Useless.

Paris.—A mining catastrophe of incalculable horror and magnitude has stricken the great coal center of Northern France.

An explosion of firedamp at 7 o'clock Saturday morning carried death and destruction throughout the net work of coal mines centered at Courrieres. Fire followed the explosion, making rescue difficult and almost impossible.

The intense excitement and confusion in the vicinity prevented early estimates of the exact loss of life, but a dispatch received here at 4:35 p. m. gave 1,404 miners entombed and probably lost.

At 8:45 o'clock a brief dispatch from Lille announced the total of 1,193 dead.

All France has been profoundly shocked by the magnitude of the disaster, which is said to be the greatest in the history of continental mining.

President Fallieres sent his secretary, accompanied by Minister of Public Works Gautier and Minister of the Interior Dubief, on a special train to the scene of the disaster.

The ministerial crisis was temporarily forgotten, senators and deputies joining in the universal public manifestations of sorrow.

The scene of the catastrophe is the mountainous mining region near Lens, in the department of Pas de Calais. Here are huddled small hamlets of the mine workers, who operate the most productive coal mines in France. The subterranean chambers form a series of tunnels.

Six of the outlets near Lens and others at Courrieres, Verdun and many other points. The output of these mines is particularly combustible, and is largely used in the manufacture of gas and in smelting. About 2,000 miners work the group of mines, and with their families make a population of from 6,000 to 8,000 souls.

The catastrophe took place shortly after 1,795 men had descended into the mines Saturday morning. There was a deafening explosion, which was followed by the cages and mining apparatus being hurled from the mouth of the Courrieres mine. Men and horses nearby outside the mine were stunned or killed. The roof of the mine office was torn off.

Immediately following the explosion flames burst from the mouth of the pit, driving back those who sought to enter and dooming those within.

Later an effort to rescue the imprisoned miners was hastily begun by officials, engineers and miners from the surrounding mines, who formed parties and made heroic efforts to penetrate the smoke and foul gas and bring out the imprisoned men.

HUNGARIANS PROTEST.

Resolutions Call on America to Stop Deprivations of Liberties.

New York.—About five thousand Hungarians attended a mass meeting Sunday at the Grand Central palace to protest against the act of Emperor King Francis Joseph in dissolving the Hungarian parliament.

Resolutions were adopted condemning "the dastardly attempts of the crown and its hirelings to deprive the Magyar people of their constitutional rights and liberties," and calling upon the "great, free and liberty-loving American nation to open its heart again to the people of Louis Kossuth as it did fifty-four years ago, and by its good will to aid the Magyars in establishing a government for the people."

Art Censored in Russia.

St. Petersburg.—Actors have been prohibited in future from representing royal personages or ministers on the stage, and a censorship has been imposed upon pictures and even statuary exposed in public. A number of paintings at the annual art exhibition dealing with political subjects have been excluded.

SETTLEMENT IN SIGHT.

Spirit of Conciliation in Conference at Algeciras.

Algeciras.—The spirit of conciliation was most marked at Saturday's session of the conference on Moroccan reform and produced a general impression that a settlement of the issue is only a matter of time and the adjustment of details.

Germany has materially modified the conditions on which she conceded a Franco-Spanish police force, but France still hesitates to accept these conditions. The indications are, however, that an acceptable middle ground may be found.

Saturday's debates were frank on both the questions of police and the bank.

Concerning the bank, Germany declared her willingness to concede three shares to France, whereas France claimed four, but this difference promises to be readily adjusted.

Concerning the police, the German, French and Austrian delegates made speeches. Herr von Radowitz, head of the German delegation, said that he accepted the Austrian proposition. Count Welsherheim, the Austrian delegate, explained his project as offering a fair middle ground. The statements of Herr von Radowitz and Count Welsherheim produced a most favorable impression, the delegates saying that a great step had been made toward accord.

M. Revoil, the French delegate maintained that the ports ought to have the same administration, and that therefore it would be inadvisable to divide them according to the Austrian plan. M. Revoil's remarks indicated that he expected a speedy adjustment of the policequestion , which was then submitted to a committee with a view to reconciling the few remaining differences. The conference adjourned until Tuesday, when it is hoped the work of the committee will be concluded.

NO SETTLEMENT.

Anthracite Operators Say They Stand Unalterably for Open Shop and No Reduction in Hours.

New York.—The propositions of the United Mine Workers of America for a readjustment of wages and conditions in the anthracite coal fields as a whole having been denied by the committee representing the anthracite operators, as a counter propostion the operators suggest that the awards made by the anthracite coal strike commission, the principles upon which they were established for carrying out their findings and awards shall be continued for a further term of three years from the first day of April, 1906. The present agreement termnates on March 31st of ths year.

In every instance the contention is made by the optrators either that conditions in the coal fields do not warrant the change proposed by the miners or that the questions at issue already have been passed upon by the strike commission. The demand of the miners that the operators enter into an agreement with the union is declined on the ground that the anthracite operators stand unalterably for the open shop and again decline to make an agreement with the United Mine Workers of America, "an organization controlled by a rival industry." Of the demand for an eght-hour day the statement says the operators know of no change in conditions that can be used to sustain the renowed demand for a reduction in hours. It declares that the expectation of the strike commission that the reduction from ten to nine hours "should not result in any decrease in the output of the mines" has not been realized."

Eugene Richter Is Dead.

Berlin.—Eugene Richter, radical leader in the reichstag since its foundation and Bismarck's old opponent, died Friday of heart failure. He was the last notable parliamentary journalistic figure of the formative period of the empire. As the leader of one of the free-minded or radical parties, he once numbered Professors Virchow and Mommsen among his lieutenants, but owing to the drift of political opinion and the growth of socialism the party sank from a million votes and sixty-seven seats in the reichstag in 1885 to twenty-one seats.

Baptist Minister Convicted.

Asheville, N. C.—Rev. A. H. Johns, a Baptist minister and former pastor of a circuit of seven churches in Blue Ridge township, Henderson county, was convicted at Hendersonville of criminal relations with Mrs. Angeline Cagle and sentenced to imprisonment for one year. The woman was also convicted and fined $100 and costs.

Ince Will Hang.

Little Rock, Ark.—Governor Davis has designated April 4 as the day far the execution of James W. Ince at Danville. Ince has twice been convicted of having murdered his wife and three children with an axe in Yell county a year ago.

Crushed Under Large Boiler.

Raleigh, N. C.—W. J. Weir and John Whitelaw were killed near the rock quarry just east of the city. The two men, both of whom were over sixty years of age, were interested in the Wake Granite Company, and were overseeing the carrying of a large boiler to the quarry. In going down a steep incline the wagon turned over and th emen were crushed to death.

News From All Over Alabama.

PROTEST IS FILED.

Meeting of Democrats in Montgomery Tuesday Called Upon to Set Aside Date of Congressional Primary.

Montgomery, Ala.—The primary election ordered by the Second district congressional committee for March 19 may be a live wire before the state democratic executive committee when it meets in Montgomery Tuesday, as the state committee has been asked by the democrats of the district to set aside the action of the district committee and fix another date for the primary.

Both the district committee and the democratic petitioners will probably be represented by counsel before the state committee, and the contest gives promise of lengthening the session of the chief body of democrats of the state called to make provision for nominating a chief justice of the supreme court.

Another Cotton Warehouse.

Birmingham, Ala.—It is stated on good authority that the Farmers' Union of Alabama proposes to erect cotton warehouse in Birmingham at a cost of about $100,000.

The warehouse, according to the statements made, will be similar in many respects to the plant of the Warrant Warehouse Company in Birmingham, which was constructed last fall and which has a capacity of 15,000 bales.

Several people prominent in the Farmers' Union movement have been to Birmingham recently and have discussed the matter with cotton people here. Among these visitors were W. N. Powell, of Morris, and L. Vines, of Toadvine.

If this second warehouse is constructed it will mean that many thousand more bales of cotton will be handled in Birmingham annually. The first warehouse brought increased receipts to the city, and a second would have the same effect, according to the cotton men.

The officials of the Warrant Warehouse Company stated that they did not know anything definite about a new warehouse, but that they had heard mention of such an enterprise. They stated that they were eager to see another one built in Birmingham and that they would gladly lend the Farmers' Union any assistance in their power.

Cold Blooded Killing.

Ensley, Ala.—What seems to have been an unprovoked and cold blooded killing occurred about 7 o'clock Sunday morning at the steel plant. The authorities refuse to give out any particulars until after the inquest tomorrow, and as there seems to have been but one eye witness, only meager details of the killing are obtainable.

It seems that a negro rodman, whose name is given as John Kent, who was employed at the rod mill, was making a short cut through the steel plant when he was ordered to stop by the watchman, Joe Cambrella. Cambrella is an Italian, about 65 years old. The negro turned and started back, but before he had gone any distance the Italian drew his revolver and shot him dead on the spot. A 38-caliber weapon was used and only one shot was fired, which took effect back of the ear.

Saved Her Father—Tackled Burglar.

Birmingham, Ala.—A message from Springville to the police department reported that a masked man entered the home of W. W. Woodall at Springville and attempted to take the life of Mr. Woodall. The robber was prevented from carrying out his attempt to kill Mr. Woodall by the bravery of the latter's daughter. When the robber drew his gun on her father Miss Woodall interfered, and, grappling with the highwayman, suceeded in breaking his revolver and throwing out cartridges before he could carry out his threats. The robber made his escape, and all efforts of the people of Springville to locate him were fruitless. Bloodhounds were telegraphed for, but from the latest information no trace has been discovered of the would-be murderer.

County Primary.

Birmingham.—Chairman Thompson, of the Jefferson county democratic executive committee, has named the following as the sub-committee on plans for the primary on August 27: John L. Parker, of Birmingham; Pinkney Scott, of Jonesboro; Dr. G. W. Brown, of Pratt City; R. DuPont Thompson, of Woodlawn, and P. J. McGeever, of Birmingham.

The Jefferson county democratic executive committee at its meeting Friday decided upon August 27 as the date for the county primary election. This is also the date fixed by the state executive committee for the nomination of governor and other state officers.

Matthews Gets Twenty Years.

Greensboro, Ala.—After deliberating thirteen hours the jury in the case of Dr. J. B. Matthews, the physician charged with the murder of his wife on December 1, 1905, returned a verdict of guilty of murder in the second degree. Judge Ferguson sentenced the prisoner to the penitentiary for twenty years. Counsel for Matthews announced an appeal will be taken to the supreme court.

FARMER'S UNION.

The first day's proceedings of the Farmer's Union were published exclusively in the last issue of The Banner, and practically was all that the public were admitted to, the Union conducting its business behind closed doors.

The delegates, numbering about 180, representing 38 counties of the State, were an earnest set of men bent upon improving the general condition of the farmer, and in this hey have the hearty good will of all good citizens.

The fundamental principle of the Union is co-operation, acting and working together of the farmers for mutual benefit. They are in complete accord with the Southern Cotton Association as regards limiting the amount of cotton production to the requirements of the market, and in addition they purpose giving their members advantages in buying necessities. The idea is to do away with the "middle man," and by bringing producer and consumer together save to the farmer the profits of the "middle man."

There is sound business sense in this, and if properly and thoroughly carried out is bound to be of great value to to the farmer.

On Friday, when the Association met after dinner, Judge Adams who had just come up from Florida, and was acquainted with some of the leading delegates, made a short and interesting speech to the Union, recalling some of the old time Farmer's Alliance meetings.

Saturday night, Newt Gresham, founder of the Farmer's Union, made an address in the court house, which was well received by a small and attentive audience.

STRENGTH-CREATOR.

Vinol Guaranteed by Physicians, and Over Two Thousand Leading Druggists as the Best Strength Creator Known to Medicine.

This is because Vinol is the latest scientific production of the greatest tonic rebuilder the world has ever known namely, cod liver oil.

In Vinol the system clogging, nauseating oil is eliminated, and the medicinal curative, elements known to exist in the cod's liver are administered in a highly concentrated form, therefore, a preparation containing all these medicinal, curative and body building elements, free from oil or grease, must be the best strength creator possible to produce.

In Vinol you know what you are taking, for everything it contains is named on the back label of every bottle.

This is why Vinol is so unqualifiedly recommended by physicians and guaranteed by over two thousand of the leading druggists of the United States as a body-builder, and strength creator for old people, weak women, puny children, after sickness and for all pulmonary diseases. The doctor knows what he is giving and the patient knows what he is taking.

A member of the Upchurch Drug co., says, "We sell Vinol on a positive guarantee that it is and will do all we claim for it or refund money without question."

This in itself proves the truth of all statements published about Vinol in this paper." Upchurch Drug co.

A TRIBUTE.

Carlyle once wrote to a friend, "Friend of mine, if you have kind words to say, say them before death shall come." 'Tis a good thing to put flowers on a man's grave. 'Tis a better thing to now and then hand him a boquet while he is living.

Let the above sentences constitute my text upon which I desire to say a few things concerning my friends and fellow teachers, Prof. and Mrs. Speer. They do not know I am writing this. They are both quite modest and will, no doubt, blush when they read it; however, I write as a matter of duty and it is a duty performed which affords me unbounded pleasure.

Coming August three years ago, Prof. Speer came to Stanton and engaged to teach an eight months school. They found here no school, one dilapidated, dingy, neglected room with the windows nearly all knocked out, no desks, no black boards, or anything necessary to conduct a successful school. What do we find at the expiration of three years earnest, hard work? Four nice rooms, well furnished with desks, chairs, up-to-date black-boards, heaters, lamps, a very good start on a library, a splendid organ and a building, newly and nicely painted. But what is far better than all else, during this period of time between two hundred and three hundred boys and girls have come in touch with these Christian teachers, have sat at their feet, as it were, learning lessons of usefulness and receiving good impressions that will prove an abiding benediction to them through life. Mr. Speer's daily life has been a worthy example for the youth of this community. Mrs. Speer's gentle, womanly demeanor has won for her none but friends and admirers.

At the close of the present session Mrs. Speer will likely retire from the teaching profession which she has adorned a number of years, and Prof. Speer will seek a larger field. All Stanton will regret to give them up. They will be missed greatly. May they live many years and may each be a bright, happy, prosperous year, crowned with usefulness.

ROBERT JONES.

P.S. To my friends who may not know where I am and what I am doing, will say that I am serving as principal of Plantersville High School, at Plantersville, in Dallas county. We have a large prosperous school. Miss Gaytie Sims of Chilton county, is my teacher in the preparatory department, and a more faithful and efficient teacher can nowhere be found. Mr. Ira Dunsmore, of Stanton, has charge of the stenographic department in which he teaches like one of twenty-five years experience. Our efforts are appreciated by the good people of Plantersville and this will be a year's work that will mark a green spot in our memories Continued health, happiness and prosperity to the Banner. R. OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

Washington, March 12, 1906.

Poo-Bah, Wm. Nelson Cromwell, Attorney for North and South America and part of Europe, has proved to the public that while it is hard to get the truth out of a corporation, it's a blamed sight harder to get it from a corporation lawyer His evasive and flippant answers to the legitimate queries of Senator Morgan, during the testimony taken before the Senate Committee on Canals, have earned for him the condemnation of every honest man, and it is high time that some steps were taken by which the truth could be forced from rascals of this stripe. All credit to Senator Morgan for his earnest efforts

The selection of Jim Griggs, as chairman of the Democratic committee is something of which we will be proud, as it will practically assure us a Democratic majority in the next Congress and also that the committee won't be under any Wall street control. This is a step in the right direction, and if followed up by the people, will bring the Democratic party a sweeping victory at the next election. What we want to do is to head off the wolves who are trying to get control of the party, and the rest will be easy, but to do this, we must keep our eyes on the primaries, as this is where the wicked work is done. See that you send honest delegates to the next convention and you have won half of the fight.

Please bear in mind that the missionary rally will be held on first Sunday in April, (which is also first day) and that all are invited to come and bring your friends.

"SAVED MY LIFE"

—That's what a prominent druggist said of Scott's Emulsion a short time ago. As a rule we don't use or refer to testimonials in addressing the public, but the above remark and similar expressions are made so often in connection with Scott's Emulsion that they are worthy of occasional note. From infancy to old age Scott's Emulsion offers a reliable means of remedying improper and weak development, restoring lost flesh and vitality, and repairing waste. The action of Scott's Emulsion is no more of a secret than the composition of the Emulsion itself. What it does it does through nourishment—the kind of nourishment that cannot be obtained in ordinary food. No system is too weak or delicate to retain Scott's Emulsion and gather good from it.

We will send you a sample free.

Be sure that this picture in the form of a label is on the wrapper of every bottle of Emulsion you buy.

Too Late To Pray.

When the shadows of death are around you
And your life lamp is nearly burned out,
As the cold chilly waters close round you
And you find that your life has been naught.

But a wasted and useless existence,
No good have you done in your day.
And you find you can have no resistence—
To death, then 'tis too late to pray.

In the years when you're young and strong
Is the time to work and to pray
And shun all the evil and wrong
As you travel up life's rugged way.

Then when all your work here is done,
And the Master shall call for your soul,
Then death will be found to be one—
Step nearer, the beautiful goal.

As your soul is preparing to fly
From your body one day you will find
No regrets of the years that's gone by
And no pain will rack your body or mind.

But peace will surround your death bed,
As the light of eternity you see,
And the Saviour awaiting you there
Will say, dwell forever with me.

The Perrin Contract or Love and Graft.

At W—, a famous seaport in the north of England, there is no more respected name than that of Perrin. The firm of John Perrin & Company, has built ships for generations, and is practically the oldest established firm in W—.

The present head of the firm, John Perrin, is a widower with one daughter. It has been said that Mr. Perrin is the longest-headed man in W—, and that what he does not know about shipbuilding is not worth knowing.

Dorothy Perrin, at the time this story opens, was 19 years of age. She was a wonderfully pretty girl, with a sweet, sympathetic nature. Most of the eligible bachelors of W— had fallen in love with her at different times, but, so far, Dorothy's heart was in her own keeping.

Mr. Perrin's offices were of an extensive nature, and he employed a large number of clerks. It is with two of the latter that we are principally concerned. One of them, Walter Jerrard, a nephew of Mr. Perrin, was in the private office, and it was a common rumor that one day he would be taken into the firm. The other employe, Arthur Evison, was a confidential clerk to Mr. Perrin, and had been in his employ since his boyhood days.

Both of the young men (for they were each of them but 25 years of age) lived in W—, but, whereas Jerrard was an orphan and lived with his uncle, Arthur Evison resided with his mother, who was a widow, and his earnings constituted their sole income.

In common with the many other bachelors of W—, both Evison and Jerrard had succumbed to the charms of Dorothy Perrin, but so far the object of the affection was unaware of it.

Each of the two men, however, knew the other's secret, and this quickened a dislike that they had long mutually fostered. Evison distrusted Jerrard; he saw behind that handsome face and careless expression a mean and shifty character. In his turn Jerrard had the natural dislike of Evison which his kind invariably bear toward men of an upright disposition.

Arthur Evison could scarcely be called handsome, but there was something attractive in his strong, clear-cut features; people could distinguish at once his manly, truthful nature, and in consequence he was liked and respected by nearly all who knew him.

* * * * *

Some years ago the shipbuilders of Britain began to grow alarmed at the competition of foreign countries—America and Germany in particular. So much was this felt in W— that many houses were forced to close on account of the bad times.

Several of the old houses, though, such as John Perrin & Co., were able to face the difficulties, but even with them matters were serious. For Mr. Perrin personally it did not matter, he being possessed of large private means.

However, when the North Atlantic Steamship Company asked for tenders for two new liners from several of the shipbuilders of W—, matters began to show signs of improving.

The two new liners were to be larger than any of the North Atlantic Company's present fleet, and would be the largest vessels ever built in a W— shipyard.

Perrin & &Co., was one of the firms asked to tender, and they naturally made every effort to obtain the order. Mr. Perrin knew that his only serious rival was Josiah Grey, whose yard adjoined his own.

Arthur Evison had a great deal to do with the preparation of the estimate, as had also Walter Jerrard. They were both at the frequent consultations held in Mr. Perrin's private office, and naturally the whole affair was conducted with the utmost secresy no one handling the papers without Mr. Perrin's knowledge.

Every night all the papers were securely locked up, Mr. Perrin himself carrying the key.

One evening Arthur Evison was returning from a solitary walk across the common when he was somewhat astonished to see Walter Jerrard in company with an employe of Josiah Grey. Evison knew that his fellow-clerk had hitherto had nothing but a nodding acquaintance with his present companion, but he put down their being together to a chance meeting. They had not seen him, and he speedily forgot the matter.

It was Evison's custom several evenings in the week to stroll over the common and climb Erkon Beacon, a lonely hill about two miles from W—. Here he would sit and smoke a solitary pipe while he contemplated the glow of the furnaces of W—, and, farther away, the lights of the shipping in the bay.

About a week after he had seen Walter Jerrard in company with Josiah Grey's clerk, Evison was on Erkon Beacon in the early evening. The light was yet good, and presently he distinguished two figures come together at the foot of the hill and greet each other. To his astonishment Evison again saw Jerrard and his new acquaintance.

This second meeting caused him to think seriously of the matter and in the morning he cautiously led up to the subject during a conversation with Jerrard. Without touching directly on what he had witnessed, Evison was enabled by a little diplomacy to draw out Jerrard. It was very evident that the latter intended to keep his new friendship a secret for he stated that he had been otherwise employed on the evenings that Evison had seen him at Erkon Beacon.

The rest of the conversation only plunged Jerrard deeper and deeper into the mire, although he was quite unconscious of it. However, it left Evison strongly determined to watch his fellow-clerk's movements, for he began to feel that there was some treachery afoot.

During all this time Evison was growing every day to care more and more for Dorothy Perrin, until at last he found it impossible to keep it to himself. He saw Dorothy frequently, and on every occasion his passion became more intense. He found it very hard to refrain from telling all to her, but out of feelings of respect to his employer he deemed it his duty to speak to Mr. Perrin first.

Accordingly Arthur managed to get alone with his chief one evening after the other clerks had gone, and immediately began to broach the subject.

"I want to ask a great favor of you, sir," he commenced, and then paused.

"The fact is, I want—er—" he paused again, for, although he had definitely decided beforehand what to say, the words failed him at the auspicious moment.

"My dear fellow," said Mr. Perrin, for Evison was a great favorite with him, "if I can possibly help you I will, but I hardly know yet what you are in need of. Is it money?"

"No, sir," cried Evison, his face flushing: "I—er—I want to get married."

"Oh, is that it?" returned Mr. Perrin, cordially, "I'm pleased to hear it; who is the lady?"

"Well, I haven't spoken to her yet; I don't know whether it is advisable."

"Why not? She will be a lucky girl, in my opinion."

"I'm glad you think so, sir," continued Evison, "because it is your daughter I want."

"Oh!" Mr. Perrin's face assumed a very different expression. He became thoughtful, and gazed meditatively at the papers before him. Arthur waited in trepidation for some moments, until at last Mr. Perrin began to speak

"I'm sorry, my boy," he said, "but it cannot be. Forgive me for saying it, Arthur, but I have other views for Dorothy."

"I suppose you mean my position is not good enough?" said Evison, bitterly.

"Not exactly that, Arthur," replied Mr. Perrin, "but—" He became silent.

"Then I suppose it is useless, sir?"

"I am afraid so, my boy."

And so they settled matters without dreaming of consulting Dorothy.

Arthur Evison left Mr. Perrin's office and went out into the cool evening air. The decision of his chief affected him considerably; he felt a choking sensation, his brain was whirling and everything around seemed to dance before his eyes.

He must go away from W—. Yes, there was no doubt of that; he could not live so near to Dorothy and know all the while that she could never be anything to him. He decided that he would ask Mr. Perrin to let him go to the firm's office in London and take up an appointment there.

All the while he was stumbling forward through the twilight, crossing an unfrequented part of the common which led to Erkon Beacon. Presently he sat down by a clump of furze and again commenced to think over his sudden misery. At that moment the wind carried the murmur of voices to him. Presently the speakers drew near, and Evison distinguished the voices of Walter Jerrard and Mortimer, the clerk in the employ of Josiah Grey. As they passed by Evison's retreat, Jerrard was speaking.

"That will be it, then," he was saying. "You meet me at the back door in Ilston lane at 10 o'clock tomorrow night, and I'll let you in. You can get the tender and—" their voices died away.

Arthur jumped to his feet and stared into the gloom after the retreating figures.

Ten o'clock tomorrow night? The tender! What did it mean? Did Jerrard mean treachery?

All thoughts of his own troubles were driven from his head. There was evidently some scheme on foot to get at Mr. Perrin's estimate for the two new liners. Evison knew that if the estimate or a copy of it, got into the hands of the rival firm they would underquote Mr. Perrin and so secure the order.

"I'll be there at 10 o'clock as well," he said to himself, "and see what goes on."

On arriving at the office on the following morning he found that Mr. Perrin would be away for the day. Jerrard was there, as usual, but very pale and preoccupied. The day seemed to pass by with leaden wings, and Evison was heartily glad when the hour of departure arrived.

At Ilston lane there was a back entrance to Mr. Perrin's office. The door worked with a spring, and could only be opened from the outside with a key. Thus anyone locked in the office could get out without any trouble.

With this knowledge in his mind, Arthur Evison allowed himself to be locked in. The porter made his usual nightly round, but Evison easily managed to evade him and the office cleaners. He had told Mrs. Evison that in all probability he would be late, so that there was no flaw in his plan.

Slowly the evening passed by, and at about 9.30 Evison took up his station at a window overlooking the entrance to Ilston lane. There was a street lamp just opposite the door, so that anybody entering could easily be seen.

It was just five minutes to 10 when Evison suddenly saw Jerrard's figure slink into the lamplight. Click! The door was unlocked and then he thought it best to leave his position. It was well for his scheme that he did, for almost immediately Jerrard came up the stairs and occupied the place he had just vacated.

Presently Jerrard saw Mortimer and he crept downstairs again. Then the two men returned together, passed along the passage and entered Mr. Perrin's private room, where the safe was. Evison was waiting with bated breath in a doorway further along the corridor.

As soon as the two accomplices had entered the private office, Evison stole along and stood in the shadow of the half-closed door.

It was entirely as he suspected. Jerrard opened the safe door and withdrew the estimate for the two liners from an inner drawer. Then Mortimer produced some pieces of paper and commenced to make notes.

"Good evening, gentlemen."

Both men looked up in sudden terror to meet Evison's smiling gaze. Before another word was spoken, however, Mortimer jumped to his feet and rushed from the room. Jerrard and Evison stood looking at one another.

"So, my friend," commenced Evison, deliberately, "this is how you serve your uncle?"

"Spy!" hissed Jerrard, and for a moment he made as if to spring at Evison, but something in the latter's demeanor make him suddenly alter his mind. Then he took a fresh line of tactics.

"Don't say anything about it, old chap," he entreated. "I wanted money badly, and Mortimer tempted me. They were going to give me £100 for a copy of the tender."

"Why didn't you ask your uncle, he would have helped you?"

"I didn't care to," muttered Jerrard, "because of Dorothy."

"Dorothy!" cried Evison. "What has she to do with you?"

"Oh—er—we're engaged."

"Engaged—to you?"

"Yes, why not?" replied Jerrard. "Please don't mention it, though, as Dolly does not want anyone to know about it yet."

"Dolly!" repeated Evison, bitterly. Ugh! the familiarity cut him to the quick.

"May I ask what this means?" said a voice suddenly. Both men looked up and saw Mr. Perrin standing in the doorway. For a moment they were taken aback, but Jerrard was the first to recover himself.

"It means this, uncle," he burst forth. "I was passing by Ilston lane when I saw Evison sneak down toward the office. I hastened after him, and saw him enter here. He left the door open, I followed, and saw him copying the tender."

Evison listened as in a dream to this tissue of lies, and was only awakened by Mr. Perrin's stern voice.

"What have you to say for yourself?"

A thousand words of defense sprang to his lips, but ere he could utter one he remembered Dorothy. If he told all he knew it would break Dorothy's heart.

"Well, Evison, I am waiting. What have you to say?"

"Nothing," was the dully spoken reply.

"Come, my boy," said Mr. Perrin, his liking for Arthur for the moment overcoming his anger, "can't you confide in me?"

Evison slowly shook his head.

"Very well," continued Mr. Perrin, "I am more than sorry, for I have always had the highest opinion of you. If I ask you to call at my house tomorrow morning, will you?"

"Certainly, sir," Evison replied in low tones.

"Then I shall expect you at half-past 9. Er—you may be curious to know how I happened to come here," Mr. Perrin added, "but I saw a man running from Ilston lane, and an impulse led me down it, to find my office open."

Stunned by this sudden blow, Arthur staggered rather than walked to his home. He did not go to bed but sat the night through in his bedroom.

In the morning, with pale, haggard face, he called at Mr. Perrin's house, as he had promised, and was shown into the drawing room.

He had hardly been there a moment before Walter Jerrard entered the room. He gazed at Evison in a rather shamefaced manner, but the latter took no notice of him.

"I've asked uncle to get you a good job somewhere," Jerrard blurted out at length.

"Indeed," replied Evison, "that was really very good of you, especially after your charitable behavior of last evening."

"Oh! you would have done the same in my position," sneered Jerrard. "Besides if you had told uncle what you had seen I should have denied it, and my word is as good as yours any day."

"But what about your constant meetings with Mortimer near the Beacon?"

Jerrard changed color and glared malevolently at his companion.

"Seems to me you've been watching me pretty much," he said.

"It was quite an accident; and while on that subject despite your friend's indisputable prowess in untruthfulness, do you think he could deny this?" As he spoke Evison exhibited the sheet of paper on which Mortimer had commenced to make his copy of the tender for the liners.

Jerrard was completely nonplussed; his face grew livid with combined fear and fury.

"Oh, don't be alarmed," said Evison; "I shall not show the paper to Mr. Perrin. But please remember that it is only for Miss Perrin's sake that I am taking the blame of your scandalous behavior."

Jerrard mumbled an inaudible reply.

"If you had not been engaged to Miss Perrin I should have denounced you on the spot; as it is—"

"You will denounce him now," said a voice.

Evison and Jerrard turned to see the curtains by the garden window thrown aside and Dorothy Perrin, with pale face, standing before them.

"I was looking out into the garden when I heard your voices," she explained, "and thinking you would not be long I waited, and glad I am that I did wait."

"But you mustn't take any notice of what you heard—," began Evison; but Dorothy interrupted.

"I must take notice," she cried; "Walter told you that he was engaged to me, and I tell you that it is not true. I have never been engaged to him, and I would rather marry any man on earth than him."

A great wave of joy rushed over Evison, and his heart beat with wonderful rapidity. He was about to speak when he was interrupted by Mr. Perrin's entrance.

"What does this mean?" he asked. "Dorothy, Walter, why are you both here?"

"To save an innocent man," cried Dorothy. "Listen, father," and immediately she began to pour forth all that she had heard.

"Is this true?" demanded Mr. Perrin, in grim tones when his daughter had finished speaking. Evison bowed his head, inwardly wishing himself miles away.

"Give me that paper," Mr. Perrin continued. Mechanically Evison handed it to him. Then he looked up and caught Dorothy's eyes fixed on him with an expression new to him—an expression which sent the blood coursing madly through his veins.

"Well, sir," Mr. Perrin said, sternly, addressing himself to his nephew, "what have you to say for yourself?"

"Nothing," returned that worthy.

"Nothing!" repeated Mr. Perrin in low tones. "By heaven! you are a disgrace. Listen to me sir, I give you a week to make arrangements in and then you leave my house and my employ."

Mr. Perrin stood aside and Walter Jerrard silently left the room.

"Now, my boy, what can I say to you," said Mr. Perrin, "I would you and my nephew could have changed places for I should be proud indeed, for you to be a member of my family."

"That is easily arranged, sir," added Arthur, emboldened by what he had read in Dorothy's eyes.

"Eh? What do you mean?"

"By granting me the permission you refused last week." As he spoke Evison took Dorothy by the hand and drew her, not unwillingly to his side.

"It seems to me that you have already taken it," replied Mr. Perrin, smiling as he spoke. "Well, well: take her, my lad, and God bless you both."

The other day Mrs. Arthur Evison christened one of the two new liners built by Messrs. John Perrin & Co. for the North Atlantic Steamship Company.—Tit-Bits.

DIAZ AS A MAN OF DESTINY.

Relation Between His Life and the Date of Mexican Independence.

"If ever a man was a living proof that our fates are predestined," said a mining man from Mexico, "it is President Diaz.

He was born at 11 o'clock at night on Sept. 15. That is the anniversary moment of Mexican independence, although Sept. 16 is celebrated as the national holiday.

"The revolutionary conspirators had agreed on Sept. 16 for the outbreak and were to open the ball at the ringing of a bell on the plaza of Guanajuato. But Hidalgo, the Mexican Washington, learned that their plans were known, so he rang the bell and started things going at 11 o'clock on Sept. 15.

"That was in 1810." Diaz was born Sept. 15, 1830.

"That is a matter of common knowledge and superstition in Mexico. What is not generally known is that every one of his many children was born either on Sept. 15 or on the anniversary of one of his big military or political victories. I have it from a member of the Diaz household that there is not a single exception to this rule.

"Every year on Sept. 15 the people gather on the plaza in the city of Mexico. Diaz comes out on a balcony above them sharply at 11 and rings the old Mexican independence bell, which has been brought up to the capital. That is the signal for beginning the independence celebration.

"Diaz, you know, considers himself a man of destiny. His life has been one long fight against enemies, intrigue, secret plots, open rebellion.

"He has beaten them all and established a good government where there had been only tyranny or chaos for 300 years. They say that he has grown superstitious about it all, believing that he is under a lucky star, and that he takes these coincidences of birth as a mark of heavenly favor."

Owing to an error in calculation made in 1820, the height of every Alpine summit, says the Alpine Post, will have to be written down by about ten feet.

THE PULPIT.

AN ELOQUENT SUNDAY SERMON BY DR. C. L. GOODELL.

Subject: "The Carpenter's Son."

New York City.—Calvary Methodist Episcopal Church of Harlem, through the effectiveness of the pastor, the Rev. Dr. Charles L. Goodell, is growing in an unparalleled way. Last February, as the result of revival services for the month of January, he broke all city church records by admitting 365 members. Sunday morning more than 350 were received into the church, and these, added to the fifty taken in at the January communion, make a total of more than 400 admissions as a result of four weeks of revival services. Dr Goodell gave this as the reason of the great ingathering: "There is no secret to it; any church can be stirred as ours has been if it is willing to pay the price. The price? It is consecration, prayer and hard work. All three are needed in about equal parts. Our magnificent congregation has been moved by prayer and in turn has moved others."

The reception of members into this church Sunday was a joyful event for the ministers and members, for it placed Calvary Church at the head of Methodism in point of membership. Calvary now has a few more than 2400 members on its roll. Since Dr. Goodell has been at Calvary, twenty-one months, there has been a net gain of 1000 members, or about seventy-five per cent. Of these new members more than 600 came on probation. The church seats 2200 and every Sunday night all seats are filled early. At some of the special services many chairs had to be brought in and the altar space filled, and then scores could not find seats. Sunday there were fifteen denominations represented by those who came by letter.

About 1500 persons took communion in the morning, Bishop E. G. Andrews, of Brooklyn; the Rev. Dr. Frank Mason North, of the City Mission, and Tract Society of New York City, and Mr. Williams, the assistant pastor, and officers of the church assisting. In the afternoon about 500 more were communed. In the evening Dr. Goodell preached on "The Carpenter's Son." The text was from Matthew xiii:35: "Is this not the carpenter's son?" He said:

Out of the doorways of the poor come the men who make the world rich and God walks oftener in the narrow rooms and on the creaking stairs of the little cottages than in the wide, sounding halls of the rich with armor and pictures looking down. You have seen the home of Burns and Shakspeare; picture to yourself something as much poorer as these are meaner than the homes of the newly rich and you may call that the home of a carpenter in Nazareth. They will show you the place with votive offerings and gewgaws in it, but you will say, "So!" and walk out. Find a place where a carpenter is now making an ox bow or a poor man's table and it will be like what He knew, for the men of Nazareth are like all their kin in the East; they change not in a thousand years. I like to think that for thirty years Jesus knew the narrow ways of a laborer.

His trade He plied, a carpenter, and built
Doors, where folks come and go, unto this hour,
Not wotting how the hands which wrought their doors
Unbarred Death's gate by Love's high sacrifice—
Tables whereon folks set their meat, and eat,
Heedless of Who was "Bread of Life" and gave Such food that whoso eateth hungereth not.
And, in those little lanes of Nazareth,
Each morn His holy feet would come and go
While He bore planks and beams, whose back must bear
The cruel cross. And, then, at evening's fall,
Resting from labor, with those patient feet
Deep in white wood dust, and the long curled shreds
Shorn by His plane—He would turn innocent eyes
Gazing far past the sunset to that world
He came from, and must go to; nigh to Him—
Nigh unto us, albeit we see it not,
Whereof Life is the curtain, and mute Death
Herald and Doorkeeper.

Nazareth was a town in which to talk with God. The great plain before it had felt His thunderous foot. There was Carmel, where Elijah talked with God, in plain sight. There was Jezreel of Ahab and Jezebel. There was Eudor and Saul and the witch. There was Tabor, lone and majestic, near at hand, and Hermon far to the north, cloud-capped and snow-peaked, while to the East, hidden behind a dozen miles of hill and dale, was the sea of Galilee—mother of sermon and of miracles. In Nazareth He found the illustrations which make so large a part of His sermons. There was a great day of moil and toil before Him, and here in the cool of the morning He must store up the reserve that will take Him on to awful noon at Jerusalem. It takes a great soul to bide his time—to get ready for a great act and be patient with the training and the slow step of the years. To live with God and in Him is the main thing after all. He walked those cliffs with no one to look at Him or to wonder at Him—prayerful, masterful, patient. Was there ever a better example for ordinary people. It is good for the burning fever of life to look at Him. The world is too much with us soon and late. Our home life is low and sordid. We fret under it. There are too many little things to do. Too much of outgone and too little of outlook. What are we saying? Look at Him. Poverty? Yes. Toil? Yes. Did they who saw Him appreciate Him? We shall see; who was it said: "Is not this the carpenter's son?" and how did they say it? It was a taunt and a sneer. You know now how He came to say, "A prophet is not without honor save in his own country."

The very men whose houses He had built were ready to stone Him to death. It has often been so. The men who have built the houses that the world's thought lives in to-day were most of them buried in ignominious graves. Very likely the men you serve may throw stones at you from the vintage ground where you put them, but it will be no new thing, so keep sweet about it. He could afford to wait. His carpenter bench would yet be holy because He worked at it, and

INTERNATIONAL LESSON COMMENTS FOR MARCH 18.

Review of the Lessons For the First Quarter—Read Luke vi., 17-26—Golden Text, Matt., iv., 23—Topic: Christ's Spiritual Kingdom—The Summaries.

Lesson I. Topic: The Saviour revealed to man. Place: Bethlehem of Judea, six miles south of Jerusalem. See Micah 5, 2. God so ordered events that through natural causes Joseph and Mary were led, at just the right time, from Nazareth to Bethlehem. The angel of the Lord appeared to the shepherds. "Unto you is born"—unto the Jews, unto all people; "a Saviour"—a deliverer; "which is Christ"—the anointed One, and as such our Prophet, Priest and King; "the Lord"—this child is Jehovah Himself. The shepherds hastened to Bethlehem and found the babe according to the angel's words.

II. Topic: Man seeking the Saviour. Place: Bethlehem. Wise men, led by a star, come from the East to Jerusalem; inquire for the King of the Jews; they are come to worship Him; Herod is troubled; calls chief priests and scribes and asks where Christ should be born; they say, in Bethlehem; Herod sends the wise men to Bethlehem, asking them to bring him word again; they go, again led by the star, and find Jesus; Jesus is worshiped and gifts are presented. The wise men return to their own country without consulting Herod.

III. Topic: The boy Jesus a pattern for youth. Places: Nazareth and Jerusalem. Jesus grew and became strong like other children. At the age of twelve He went with His parents to the feast of the Passover. When they start on the return trip the child is left behind; found in the temple with the doctors of the law, asking and answering questions; all were astonished; His parents gently reprove Him; He tells them He must be about "His Father's business;" returns with them to Nazareth.

IV. Topic: Christ's preparation for His life work. Place: Jesus was baptized at the fords of the Jordan, called Bethabara. John preached in the wilderness; baptized in Jordan; preached repentance; insisted that they bring forth fruits unto repentance; different classes came to him; a thorough reformation required of all; pointed to the Messiah. Jesus goes from Nazareth, in Galilee, to the Jordan, to be baptized of John. John shrinks from such a step; Jesus urges it; is baptized; the heavens are opened; the Spirit descends like a dove upon Him; a voice from heaven: "Thou art My beloved Son."

V. Topic: A study of Christ's temptation. Place: Mount Quarantania, a short distance northwest of Jericho. Jesus in the wilderness; fasts forty days and forty nights; afterward an hungered; tempter came to Him; asks Him to prove that He is the Son of God by turning stones into bread; Jesus defeats him by quoting Scripture; Satan then asked Him to cast Himself down from the pinnacle of the temple; and again he promised Jesus all the kingdoms of the world if He would fall down and worship him. Jesus resisted Sata and angels came.

VI. Topic: Laws of soul-winning. Place: Near Capernaum, on the Sea of Galilee. Jesus walking by the Sea of Galilee; the people pressed upon Him; He entered into Peter's boat and taught them while they stood on the land; commanded Simon to "launch out into the deep" for a draught; Simon said they had toiled all night and caught nothing, but he obeyed Christ's word; a great multitude of fishes inclosed; the net was breaking, and Peter beckoned to James and John to come to their assistance; both ships were filled until they began to sink; the disciples were astonished at the miracle. They left all and followed Christ.

VII. Topic: Jesus the great Physician. Place: Capernaum. Jesus is in the synagogue on the Sabbath day. Teaches the people; they are astonished at His doctrine; an unclean spirit cries out; Jesus casts him out; fame spread abroad; at Peter's house; mother-in-law healed; when the sun was down the diseased and those possessed with devils were brought to Him, and He healed them all and cast out the devils.

VIII. Topic: Jesus' power to forgive sins. Place: Capernaum. Jesus is probably at Peter's house; a great crowd at the door; a paralytic brought and carried to the roof; the roof torn up; the bed let down; Jesus saw their faith; "Thy sins be forgiven thee;" the scribes reason; He speaketh blasphemies; Jesus answers them; which is easier to say, Arise, or, Thy sins be forgiven? the cure; the people amazed. They glorify God, saying, "We never saw it on this fashion." They saw that none but God could perform such a wonderful cure and they were filled with reverence and fear. The divinity of our Lord is here fully established.

IX. Topic: The Bible secret of the blessed life. Place: The "Horns of Hattin," near the centre of the west coast of the Sea of Galilee. He taught the disciples and the multitudes. Who are blessed? The poor in spirit; the mourners; the meek; the hungry and thirsty; the merciful; the pure in heart; the peacemakers; those persecuted for righteousness' sake. The promises made are all rich and full and sure. True Christians are the salt of the earth and the light of the world.

X. Topic: Christian conduct—a study of the new life. Place: Same as last lesson. Christ gave instruction concerning oaths. All profane swearing is prohibited, but such oaths as are required by a civil magistrate are not included—judicial oaths ought not to be called "swearing." Christians are not to retaliate, but are to be controlled by the law of love. It is also gloriously possible for Christians to be perfected in love. Jesus commands us to love God with all the heart and our neighbor as ourself.

SAVED FROM CATARRH OF LUNGS SO COMMON IN WINTER
BY TAKING PE-RU-NA.

Sore Throat Develops Into Bronchitis.

Mrs Addie Harding, 121 W. Brighton Ave., Syracuse, N. Y., writes: "I have been a user of Peruna for the past twelve years. With me it is a sure preventive of colds and many other ills.

"Two or three times a year I am troubled with my throat, a kind of raw feeling, turning to bronchitis. I have had the services of my physician in each case. Two years ago, when I felt a spell coming I tried Peruna to check it, and to my delight was not troubled with the smothered and choking feeling and never have been since. I can check it every time with Peruna."

"I was a sufferer with catarrh of the throat and lungs for a long time before Peruna was recommended to me. I gave it a trial, although I thought at the time it would be just like other medicines and do me no good. I was pleased to find that my improvement began in less than two weeks and continued until I was entirely well. I gained nearly 15 pounds, have a splendid appetite and am grateful for what your medicine has done for me."

New Use for Dogs.

A new drainage plan has been prepared for the city of Nice, France. A novel feature is a proposal to use specially trained dogs to carry from one end of the sewer to the other a rope by which a brush can be drawn for the cleansing of pipes.

European Armies.

The military budget of the French republic foots up to a total of 29,000 officers, whose pay alone amounts to nearly 4,000,000 pounds sterling. Italy, under the same head, has 14,000 officers, drawing 1,450,000 pounds annually. Spains pays on account of 23,000 officers the sum of 2,750,000 pounds.

Tobacco Currency.

Tobacco, which used to be the medium of exchange in the early colonial days of Virginia, is today the currency of British New Guinea. The British administrator there reports that the medium is not the means of a lively trade.

PERMANENT MEADOWS should have an annual dressing of 500 pounds per acre of a fertilizer containing eleven per cent. POTASH and ten per cent. available phosphoric acid.

This will gradually force out sour grasses and mosses from the meadows, and bring good grasses and clovers; thus increasing the quality as well as the quantity of the hay.

Our practical book, "Farmer's Guide," gives valuable facts for every sort of crop-raising. It is one of a number of books on successful fertilization which we send on request, free of any cost or obligation, to any farmer who will write us for them.

Two In One Winter.

C. E. Emerson, of Fitzwilliam, N. H., had two attacks of pneumonia in one winter. He writes that two physicians said he could not recover from the last attack. After they had given up hope he began taking Foley's Honey and Tar which brought him out alright. He writes that he surely thinks Foley's Honey and Tar is the grandest remedy for throat and lung troubles. Upchurch Drug Co.

This is Worth Remembering

Whenever you have a cough or cold, just remember that Foley's Honey and Tar will cure it. Do not risk your health by taking any but the genuine. It is in a yellow package. Upchurch Drug co.

A severe cold that may develop into pneumonia over night, can be cured quickly by taking Foley's Honey and Tar. It will cure the most obstinate racking cough and strengthen your lungs. The genuine is in a yellow package. Upchurch Drug Co.

No Case On Record.

There is no case on record of a cough or cold resulting in pneumonia or consumption after Foley's Honey and Tar has been taken, as it will stop your cough and break up your cold quickly. Refuse any but the genuine Foley's Honey and Tar in a yellow package. Contains no opiates and is safe and sure. Upchurch Drug Co.

Given Up to Die.

B. Spiegel, 1204 N. Virginia St., Evansville, Ind., writes: "For over five years I was troubled with kidney and bladder affections which caused me much pain and worry. I lost flesh and was all run down, and a year ago had to abandon work entirely. I had three of the best physicians who did me no good and I was practically given up to die. Foley's Kidney Cure was recommended and the first bottle gave me great relief, and after taking the second bottle I was entirely cured." Why not let it help you? Upchurch Drug co.

Orino Laxative Fruit Syrup is a new remedy, an improvement on the laxatives of former years, as it does not gripe or nauseate and is pleasant to take. It is guaranteed. Upchurch Drug co.

The farmers are preparing for planting corn this week. The health in this community is not so good. Mr. S. J. Atchinson's little boy has been very sick, but we are glad to say is better.

Mr. and Mrs. S. J. Lovelady's little Cindia, who has been very sick, we are glad to say, is improving.

Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Lovelady spent a few days on a pleasant visit to their daughters this week and returned home Thursday.

It seems that March is going to be a rainy month; if so, we boys will be behind with our work.

In the good old way, sometime or another we will all be reunited together in one body in Christ Jesus our Lord, there to sing the songs and praise God for all His goodness and kindness that He has so wonderfully blessed us with. We have a right to praise Him who created all things to the glory of man. We should praise our God for sending His only begotten Son to bear the sins of this world, by whomsoever will shall have everlasting life. We thank and praise Him who came and set up His kingdom over 1905 years ago to redeem us out of the bondage of sin, and we do thank the Lord that He has given us a way that we might have eternal life if we would trust and obey His commands.

THE BANNER BOY.

A Chicago Alderman Owes His Election to Chamberlain's Cough Remedy.

"I can heartily and conscientiously recommend Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for affections of the throat and lungs," says Hon. John Sherick, 2.0 So. Peoria St., Chicago. "Two years ago during a political campaign, I caught cold after being overheated, which irritated my throat and I was finally compelled to stop, as I could not speak aloud. In my extremity a friend advised me to use Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. I took two doses that afternoon and could not believe my senses when I found the next morning the inflammation had largely subsided. I took several doses that day, kept right on talking through the campaign, and I thank this medicine that I won my seat in the Council." This remedy is for sale by Upchurch Drug Co., Clanton; A. One would think the Laxative idea in a cough syrup should have been advanced long before it was. MRS. E. V. SPEER, Sec.

Jemison, March 19, 1906

Editor Banner—Please allow me space in your paper to say a few words about the S. C. A. in Chilton county. I see the president has called a meeting for April 7, 1906. Now, brother farmers, let us begin now to make our arrangements to go to Clanton on that day bubbling over with something good to say along the line of diversification and reduction of acreage. It seems to me that now is the time to talk reduction of acreage in cotton and increase in acreage of food stuff. Hoping to see a good attendance of all classes. With best wishes to the Banner and its many readers. Respectfully,

J. W SORRELL.

Fairview.

Here I come again, but not to tell you about another apron party, but a "tacky" party, given at the home of Misses Etta and Pearl Roper on Friday night last. We certainly had a fine time. It seemed as if we were turned loose. I'm sure we all laid down our good manners and tested our tacky faculties.

The Misses Roper carried it out most successfully. They met everyone at the door and made them feel sure that they were not the tackiest. And on entering it was proven to them, for some, and especially one tall young man, wore a collar a least six inches high. This one we called Christopher Columbus. Another wore long white slippers with bows on them, which was enough to make one think summer was in full sway. He was called George Washington.

Three judges, the Messrs. Henry Ratliff and Grover Vance and Miss Lottie Johnson were appointed, who decided in favor of Miss Etta Roper, as being the tackiest girl, while Mr. Howard Roper won the prize on the boys' side. The cake was readily awarded to Miss Etta Roper and the candy to Mr. Howard.

The cake and candy having been passed we enjoyed several nice pieces on the piano by several of the girls and boys. Everyone seemed to enjoy themselves.

We only hope that our nice old people will see fit to allow us another privelege of this kind, and that our young people will continue to take a lively interest in our community. SUBSCRIBER.

Great Damage By Storm.

Victoria, B. C.—The steamer Miowera, which arrived from Australian and South Sea ports, brought no further news of the disastrous hurricane at Tahiti, and neighboring islands, but news was received of the hurricane's havoc elsewhere. It was severely felt in Northern Queensland, eighty per cent of the banana plantations being destroyed. Instead of the usual monthly shipment of 50,000 bunches, not more than 500 will be available for some months.

The steamer Scot is supposed to have foundered during the typhon. The steamer sailed from Japan for Ocean Island and Australia under charter to the Pacific Phosphate company and is long overdue.

The volcanic eruption at Tofua, one of the outlying islands of the Friendly group, is assuming greater proportions than that of Savaii, in Samoa, but as it is located in a basin 1800 feet deep, instead of a mountain as is Savaii, no damage was caused.

An Auckland dispatch to Sydney newspapers received by the Miowera, says several native villages have been destroyed by the Savaii volcano, causing some loss of life.

From Tonga news was received that King George has offered to abdicate in favor of any other chief the British high commissioner desires to appoint. The offer was formally made to the British consul. No reason was given, but the action is regarded as a protest of both king and people of Tonga against the threatening tactics adopted by the consul.

Plague is prevalent at Nouemea, French New Caledonia. A number of deaths have occurred.

Baldwin Fund for Tuskegee.

New ork.—The William H. Baldwin, Jr., fund of $150,000, which is to be presented to the Tuskegee, Alabama, Normal institute, has been completed, the net amount of the subscription being $150,196.94. The fund will be presented April 4, the occasion of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the institution's founding. It will be retained as a separate endowment. Mr. Baldwin, who died last year, was president of the Long Island Railroad Company. It was to commemorate his work as a philanthropist that his friends decided to raise the fund.

Bill to Cut Representation.

Washington.—When the legislative bill was taken up in the house, Mr. Kelder, Ohio, took the floor in advocacy of his reapportionment bill reducing the representation in congress as follows: Alabama, 9 to 5; Arkansas, 7 to 5; Florida, 3 to 2; Georgia, 11 to 6; Louisiana, 7 to 3; Mississippi, 8 to 3; North Carolina, 10 to 6; South Carolina, 7 to 3; Tennessee, 10 to 8; Texas, 16 to 12, and Virginia, 10 to 8. The right of both the white and colored population in these states, he said, had been abridged.

Motion to Quash at Caldwell, Idaho.

Caldwell, Ida.—The sensational allegations made against A. B. Moss, foreman of the grand jury which indicted Charles H. Moyer, W. D. Haywood and G. A. Pettibone, were not sustained when testimony in the matter was heard before District Judge Smith. The motion of the defense to quash the indictment was denied. The questions raised by the defense on demurrer were then taken under advisement by Judge Smith, until Tuesday morning, as was the question of admitting the defendants to bail.

St. Vincent's Academy Burns.

Shreveport, La.—St. Vincent's academy, established thirty years ago and one of the most widely known Catholic institutions in the south, was destroyed by fire Friday afternoon. Loss $60,000; insurance, $12,500. The fire originated from a defective flue while the teachers and pupils were at lunch. Almost a panic resulted, but all escaped without injury.

Killed in Collision.

Shreveport, La.—In a head-on collision between two freight trains of the Louisville and Arkansas railroad at Long Springs, La., Saturday morning, one trainman was killed and four others injured, two fatally. An order had been issued for one of the trains to take a siding, which order, it is said, was overlooked, resulting in the collision.

Embedded in the Mud.

Punta Ayrenas, Chili.—The news reached here last Saturday that the American steamer Olympian, from Portland, Ore., and San Francisco, for Boston, which passed here March 10, carried away her anchor chains and went ashore in Possession Bay March 13, and is now embedded three feet in the gravel beach.

Hazle Patch Is Sold.

Milwaukee, Wis.—Hazle Patch, one of the fastest harness horses ever owned in Wisconsin, has been sold by J. W. Flack for $9,000 to W. W. Fleming, of Winnipeg, Manitoba.

Russian Army Lost 151,000 Men.

The Invalid, a military organ, now sums up the total of the Russian army's losses, without including Port Arthur, as 151,000 killed, wounded and disappeared.

ALABAMA STATE EVENTS.

Items of Interest Gathered as They Transpire Over the Entire State.

Committed Suicide.

Tuscumbia, Ala.—Standing in front of the dresser in his room, looking into the mirror, Dr. Samuel J. Cooper, a prominent citizen and physician of this city, pushed the barrel of a revolver into his mouth, pulled the trigger and the bullet went crashing into his brain. He fell dead. He had been ill several days and mental despondency and physical depression are the only reasons that can be assigned. Dr. Cooper was a member of the Colbert Medical Society, was county health officer and examining physician on the Confederate county pension board. He leaves a widow, formerly Miss Jeannie Pettit, of Memphis, and two children, a son and daughter. Dr. Cooper was probably 60 years old and served in the Confederate army. He had practiced medicine in Tuscumbia for many years and was held in high esteem, being a member of one of the oldest and most aristocratic families in northern Alabama.

Found Dead in Room.

Mechanicsville, Ala.—Mr. J. C. Tillery, of this place, one of the most prosperous farmers in Lee county, was found dead in his room Friday morning by Mr. Frank Ford and Mr. John McCoy, his brothers-in-law. It is supposed death resulted from a stroke of paralysis. One brother and five sisters survive Mr. Tillery. His death was entirely unexpected, as he had been in his usual health Thursday. It was only after repeated efforts to arouse im that the family became alarmed.

Killed on Tracks.

Wylam, Ala.—John E. Jackson, aged 25, was killed in the No. 4 mines near Wylam by being run over by a trip of tram cars on the main slope to the mines. It seems that Jackson was leaving the mines last afternoon by way of the main slope instead of the manway. He got out of the way of one car and had stepped on to the tracks when he was struck down by a trip of cars and so horribly bruised that death relieved him of all earthly pains. His skull was crushed.

Railroad Man Killed.

Birmingham.—Clifford A. Haynes, a switchman employed by the Frisco railroad, was killed Friday night about 8:30 o'clock by being run over by a switch engine on Railroad avenue, between Twenty-seventh and Twenty-eighth streets. He died while being carried to the hospital in an ambulance. Haynes was riding on the pilot of the engine when he slipped and fell before the steam monster. He was knocked some distance and death followed about half an hour after the accident.

Stricken With Apoplexy.

Florence.—Mrs. Susan Y. Thrasher, an aged lady of 81 years, was stricken with apoplexy while eating her breakfast. She lives alone and was not discovered until a waiter from the restaurant where she gets her meals came to remove the dishes. Mrs. Thrasher is well connected and owns considerable property in Florence. She has no nearer relatives than a nephew, who is with her now. The condition of the aged woman is critical.

Etowah Peaches Not Injured.

Gadsden.—Fruit men claim that the fruit has not been injured by the cold weather of the past few days, as the weather did not reach the freezing stage and the cloudy weather prevented frost. Most of the peach trees are in full bloom and a large crop is predicted if there is no more freezing weather.

Boring for Oil and Gas.

Gadsden.—Expert gas and oil men have been prospecting here for several days and claim to have some good indications of gas and oil in the district. They will make further investigations and will secure the aid of some local capitalists to sink some wells. So far as known no wells have ever been sunk for this purpose.

J. J. Atkins Dead.

Athens.—J. J. Atkins, of Pettusville, died at his residence there after a long illness. He was one of the most successful and popular citizens of the northern part of the county. The deed was committed in his home near the college, and with the head hanging over on one side, Mr. Horton made his way to the barn, where the body was found. He leaves a widow and three children. He was a veteran of the civil war, having served with the Forty-second Alabama volunteers. He was very well known through the state.

Fined $40 After Four Years' Time.

Florence.—After four years of successful evasion of the law, Dave Reeves was brought to justice at this term of court and made to pay a fine for using obscene language. Reeves was indicted by the grand jury four years ago and the warrant for his arrest placed in the hands of an officer. Reeves' house is almost on the line between Alabama and Tennessee and when an attempt was made to arrest him he would step across the line into Tennessee and laugh at the officer, who was powerless to touch him, the offense being non-extraditable. Time and past immunity finally had the effect to make Reeves careless and Constable John Farres succeeded in effecting his capture. Reeves pleaded guilty and was fined $40.

IN BLINDING STORM

Passenger Trains Collide—Score of Humans Roasted To Death.

FEARFUL SCENES WITNESSED.

Warrant Sworn Out For Telegraph Operator Who Failed to Deliver Message and This Caused the Catastrophe.

Pueblo, Colo.—A wreck accompanied with horrors, exceeded only by the Eden disaster, which occurred August 7, 1904, on the line of the same railroad, resulted from a head-on collision of two passenger trains on the Denver and Rio Grande railroad, four miles east of Florence, Colo., at an early hour Friday morning. The trains were the Utah-California express, No. 3, westbound from Denver, and the Colorado-New Mexico express No. 16, eastbound from Leadville to Grand Junction.

They met on a sharp curve and were less than two hundred yards apart when the engineers discovered that a collision was imminent. It is known that the engineer of the westbound train put forth every possible effort to bring his train to a stop, but his efforts were fruitless, and although he succeeded in checking the speed of his train, the crash that followed was beyond his power to prevent and he went to his death with his hand on the throttle, faithful to his charge. This much is vouched for by his fireman, who, seeing the uselessness of remaining in the face of sure death, jumped and saved himself. On the conduct of the engine crew of the eastbound train it can only be said that they died at their post, for no one lives to tell the story of their heroism.

The disaster was made more horrible by the manner of the death of many of the passengers, variously estimated at from twenty to thirty-five. Fire swept over the wreck, engulfing the victims in a caldron of flame and leaving only charred and blackened bones to tell the tale of slaughter.

It is reported here that one of the operator's failure to deliver a train order was the cause of the disastrous collision of passenger trains on the Denver and Rio Grande railway near Adobe, Colo. The first orders given the two trains were that they should meet at Adobe.

Later, it is understood, the dispatcher wired Operator S. L. Lively at Swallows, ten miles east of the scene of the wreck to hold the westbound train there until eastbound train No. 16 should pass. When No. 16 reached Florence its crew was notified to run on to Swallows. Meantime No. 3 failing to receive its new orders at Swallows pushed on westward. Operator Lively was asleep, it is said, when No. 3 passed Swallows. When asked by the dispatcher at Pueblo if it had passed he answered "No."

Half a Million Loss.

Fresno, Cal.—Clear and cold weather in the valley region is having its effect and the high water in both the Kings and San Joaquin rivers is subsiding slowly. The Kings river overflowed its banks during the night, flooding all truck farms in the lowlands and causing damage estimated at $500,000. The flood now prevailing at Olsalia has not been equaled since 1862. Several streets of that city are now waterways and business practically has been suspended. The towns of Woodville and Farmersville have been deluged and all the country immediately east is surrounded with water.

Nashville Doctor in Jail.

Nashville, Tenn.—Dr. J. Herman Feist was arrested here Friday morning and placed in jail for the murder of Mrs. Rosa Mangrum, whose dead body was found floating in the Ohio river at Cairo, Ill., about six weeks ago, she having disappeared from Nashville on December 14 last. Feist is a well known and prominent physician of Nashville, and his arrest caused a profound sensation. Her disappearance and subsequent finding of her dead body in the Ohio river had puzzled the detective forces of Nashville, St. Louis and Chicago.

The Columbus Power Company is the offspring of the merger of the several power companies in this city a few weeks ago.

On the Journal Walter Taylor, for several years city editor, took charge of the Journal's sporting page, while John Paschal went on the city desk. Since the Journal lost Grantland Rice they have been casting about for a man to fill the gap on the sporting page. Taylor is expected to make good.

Many reports are current about the Evening Georgian, which is to have John Temple Graves, formerly of the News, as editor. It is said that the Georgian will begin publication in about six weeks. They are busy assembling a capable business and editorial staff. One report says they have selected a former Atlanta newspaper man, now on Hearst's American in New York, as city editor.

WOOD MUST TEL

Country Wants Explanati of the Battle at the Crater.

SENATE DEMANDS DETAILS.

Culberson's Resolution Asking President for Reports Voiced Sentiment of the Nation. Roosevelt's "Honor of the Flag" Cable Receives Attention.

Washington, D. C.—Unless General Leonard Wood sends some more facts to this country very soon in justification of the slaughter of six hundred or more Moros, including women and children, in the island of Jolo, the fight in the crater of the volcano will very likely prove his undoing. Senators and congressmen, regardless of party politics, are boiling over with indignation and horror and it is said not even the president's amazing message concerning the "honor of the flag upheld" will be able to stem the tide against Wood unless he shows cause for that bloody massacre.

The outbreak in the senate and house was but the reflection of the intense feeling which the country at large entertains over the massacre. When Senator Culberson arose and demanded that the secretary of war furnish the senate with the messages and other documents bearing on the "fight" he merely expressed the general feeling that has been literally blistering the United States capitol building. They do not permit applause in the United States senate, or there would have been an outburst at Culberson's demand that would have rocked the dome.

Over in the house of representatives, however, they do countenance applause, so that when Representative Jones, of Virginia, arose in his place and denounced the killing of the women and children by Wood there was a perfect gale of it to demonstrate the general feeling on the subject. The newspapers of the East are fairly howling for the facts, and there are many other evidences of public wrath over the affair.

There is a vague rumor in Washington that is serving as fuel to the flame against General Wood. The rumor has it that all the messages that have come from the Philippines to the war department and white house have not been made public. The president, it is hinted, got a very facetious message from Wood concerning the "fight" and whispers of this message have been going around until a goodly number have heard of it and believe the rumors concerning it.

Senator Culberson and others are determined to have the facts in the case if there is any possible way to get them. Secretary Taft, it is said, would have sent the whole correspondence to the senate in answer to the Culberson resolution, but strangely enough he found it convenient to leave Washington about the time the senate's demand came to his department. What the senate got in answer to its demand for the papers, therefore, was a message from the president in which there was nothing but the cablegrams that had already been given out to the newspapers. It would seem, then, that Roosevelt is determined to see the thing out in person. Like Wood, he has "assumed the entire responsibility." It remains to be seen if he can check the rising tide of anger which is rolling in from the country at large.

Whether Wood eventually justifies his action in the "battle" or not, the president of the United States will have some difficulty in ever convincing certain senators and congressmen that he did right in sending Wood that cable message approving the slaughter of the women and children. He sent the cable, it will be recalled, before the full story of the "battle" had been received. How he could conceive that the "honor of the American flag" had been upheld by the butchery of savage men, women and children, all of whom were practically unarmed and defenseless against the full military equipment of the American soldiers, is more than even his warmest admirers in congress can understand.

As the affair now stands, the indignation is exceedingly hot and growing hotter, and the demand for justification on the part of General Wood is becoming louder and louder each day.

Four Persons Die in Fire.

LOVED THE JERSEY WOODS

TWO MEN WHO MET AND FELL A-TALKING 18 YEARS AGO

They Never Met Before and They Never Parted Until Last Sunday, When Gordon Bourquin Died and Left Uncle Pete Speer to Roam the Woodlands Alone.

THE old "Speer place" in Upper Montclair, N. J., stands on the road to "The Notch," at a point where the ridge is uncomfortably steep. It is a farm house of the old-fashioned and comfortable sort which they used to build before the war and before the later age of suburban villas. Its best entrance, the doorway to the sacred and unused front parlor, is of rough-hewn stone. A grape trellis covers the common, everyday entrance, which leads to the sitting room and the kitchen. There are a few old apple trees behind the house, a pump, a stable, and a chicken yard. Back of them the few acres left to the Speer farm climb the hill.

The Speers of this generation have wandered to the four corners of the earth, married and begot children, who travel now and then to see the old homestead. The place itself has been left to the two Speers who never wandered or married, nor were given in marriage—"Pete" Speer, called "Uncle Pete" in these later days, and his sister Libby. Pete Speer, born on the place, has lived his days in Montclair and is a public character. He is the hunter, the born naturalist, the nature lover of those parts. In his youth there were still deer in the Jersey hills and the snipe and woodcock were plentiful. Year by year, as Jersey built up, the game dwindled. Yet still Pete Speer knows places where you may find snipe and woodcock and quail in season, knows to a day the habits of the migratory birds, knows when the pickerel are biting. He is sixty years old now, a fine, erect man, as handsome, what with his shaggy head and great blue eyes, as a prophet of Michael Angelo. He handles a rifle like a Boer. Twice—he boasts of this—he has winged a fish hawk rising from the lake, causing it drop a fresh caught pickerel, which Uncle Pete has forthwith taken home and cooked for breakfast. The cottage folk of Montclair, business men, lawyers, journalists who work in the city—all know Uncle Pete. Those who appreciate a kindred spirit are his friends. Sometimes he will sit with them through a long winter evening and tell of how the birds come and go, of the habits of birches in spring, of the tree squirrels and their love tricks until the cottagers really believe that these scanty woods which the real estate men have spared are the untrodden forest—and Pete Speer its Davy Crockett.

He has lived this life and loved it ever since he left school, and since the Speer place is unencumbered and his income fixed, he expects so to live it to the end.

One autumn morning eighteen years ago Pete Speer was coming down the mountain with his little pea-rifle and two tree squirrels, freshly killed, slung over his shoulder. Where the mountain path turns into the road there is an oak tree; and under this sat a small but vigorous man in his late middle age. He was of a dark complexion, and carried in his head a pair of bright and intelligent eyes which he bent upon Pete Speer and his game. It was an inquiring look. Across the buried days of eighteen years Pete Speer remembers that look, which made him stop, show his game to the man under the oak tree, talk to him. In ten minutes the stranger had amazed Pete Speer by his knowledge of the tame woodcraft of these parts. They walked down to the house together. The stranger stopped for supper. They talked so long, over the fire and a toddy, that Pete made him stay for the night in the spare bed. He never slept elsewhere for eighteen years. For Pete Speer, single man, had found the friend of his life.

They were calling each other "Pard" before Pete knew the real name of his guest. It was Gordon Bourquin. He was a Frenchman by birth, and he carried a little trace of his blood in his accent. Until last month the name was really all that Speer knew of the past of his friend and guest. The neighbors shortened his name to "Bo."

Wherever one met Pete Speer, Bo was with him. They crunched the snow in winter for rabbits. They played at cultivating the little old farm. They were out in spring for the first migrating birds. They learned the lurking places of pickerel and catfish. That first winter, and for a little time afterward, Bo worked as an engraver in a label factory. But engraving interfered with woodcraft, and Bo gave it over to be out of doors with his friend. When the next spring broke, Bo began setting out a vineyard in the acre lot behind the house. He was fond of wine, he said, and knew how to make it, but the Jersey grapes were not good for wine. In four or five years his grapes would be ready for the press. So, tacitly, Bo and Pete had decided to live out the rest of their lives together, with the hills for a playground and Libby to care for them.

Although he kept a guard over his past, Bo let out a flash now and then which proved that he was a man of education, of reading and of understanding. On winter evenings when the cottage people came in to hear of his woodcraft the talk would drift sometimes to the larger affairs of the world, to literature, to books. Bo, sitting with a goblet of his homemade wine before him, would fix the company with those singularly brilliant black eyes of his, and amaze them with his arguments and the breadth of his learning. These flashes were uncommon. For the most part he, like Pete, loved best to tell of the living and growing things on the mountain.

The years went on over Bo. He was fifty-eight when Pete found him under the oak tree, and some seven or eight years ago he began to age. A cough developed. It took all his strength and wind to climb the mountain on their morning expeditions, and five years ago his lungs refused the strain. From that time Pete became not only his "pard" but his nurse. He would hitch up his buckboard, help Bo in and drive as near as he could to the covert of the quail or the marsh where the wild duck fly, or the pond where the pickerel were biting. Then, carrying the guns or rods, Pete would accommodate his pace to the halting steps of his partner, so that they could both make a bag. Bo's legs were weak and his lungs nearly gone, but his eye and nerve were steady on the sights.

His trouble was slow consumption. It was last winter that the doctor told him to stay in bed for a few weeks. Even when spring brought the birds he was too weak to get up. Pete hunted alone and brought in his bags and his stories of misty hills and marshes to entertain his partner during the long evenings when the cough kept him awake. And Libby nursed him as though he were her own brother.

Bo lingered through summer, through fall. He was well enough on Christmas Day to sit up and eat a little Christmas dinner. It was about the first of the year that he began finally to fail. He was only skin and bones and bright eyes.

One night Pete forced himself to a thing which had been on his mind ever since he knew that Bo was going.

"Pard," he said, "are there any folks?"

Bo waited a long time before he answered.

"Yes, Camden," he said. "Don't bother them." It was his first word of a past. Pete fought with his conscience for a day before he wrote a letter to the postmaster at Camden telling him that Gordon Bourquin was dying in Upper Montclair at the house of P. Speer. Had he any folks?

Last week a little old woman in a black shawl knocked at Pete Speer's door and asked for Gordon Bourquin.

"I'm—I'm one of his folks and I want to see him alone," she said.

"Are you his sister?" asked Libby.

"No; I'm his wife."

They showed her the door of the spare room. Pete and Libby sat by the fire and hardly breathed for an hour. Once they heard the voice of the woman crying; once they heard the voice of Bo, louder than it had been for a year. Then the door opened again, and the little old woman came out. She was crying softly.

"He—he don't want me," she said. "He was always queer to his folks. He wants nobody but you."

"Who is he?" asked Pete.

"He was a hard-working engraver when I married him," she said. "But he didn't really care for me. No more did I for him after a while. He wouldn't work. He was always reading books or running in the woods, catching things and studying over 'em or trying to stuff 'em. I got tired finally and told him I wouldn't stand it. He got mad and said he'd never see me again. So I've sewed and supported myself. He don't want me now. He don't want any one but you."

"Are there any more people?"

"There were a father and three brothers when he went away. There's nobody left but me."

They sat in silence for a time.

"How old he is!" said Mrs. Bourquin, crying afresh. "How old we all are!"

When she had gone down the road Pete went in to Bo's bedside. Bo was very weak after the strain, but he turned a little and put one hand out from under the covers.

"Pard!" he said.

It was last Sunday that Bo shook off for a few minutes the anaesthesia of approaching death. It was a bright day, with the spring tang of this false winter.

"Have you seen any ducks yet, pard?" he asked in a whisper.

"They're coming in a day or two," said Pete. "Want to see some spring things?" He went out and found some fresh twigs that had been fooled into budding by the Indian spring. He even managed to discover green branches on a hardy creeper. These he carried to Bo and laid them close by his hand. Bo smiled, fingered them and fell asleep.

Some time in the night, Libby, keeping watch beside his bed, was awakened by the cold. She held up the night lamp to see if he was awake. He was asleep for good, his hand on a budding branch.

The undertaker, when he learned that Bo's people lived in Camden, wanted to know if he should ship the body there. Pete Speer thought for some time before he said:

"How many graves are left in the Speer lot?"

"Three."

"That's right," said Pete Speer, "he's our now. Bury him in the Speer lot."

And Wednesday, with a hearse and a minister and one carriage to follow, they buried Gordon Bourquin beside the space which Pete has reserved for himself.—New York Sun.

MAN'S TROPICAL FOE.

THE HOOKWORM DISEASE A WORLD WIDE SCOURGE.

Cause of Sickness and Poverty in Asia and Africa as Well as in Semi-Tropical Countries. — Science's Knowledge of the Pest.—Measures of Prevention.

Hookworm disease has been brought into prominent notice in the United States during the last few years owing to the discovery that much of the sickness and some of the adverse economic conditions of warm regions tence

Up to 1893 no authentic case of the disease was recognized as such in the United States, declares the New York Sun. In 1902 Dr. Charles Wardell Stiles of the Public Health and Marine Hospital Service showed that a distinct hookworm, which was named Uncinaria Americana, infests man in this country.

The anaemia so prevalent in semi-tropical districts and so debilitating to a large number of inhabitants is said to be almost entirely due to hookworm disease. According to Stiles, districts situated on a clay soil and cities are not favorable to the development of the malady, but in the agricultural regions in which the soil is sandy infection takes place readily.

The anaemia is caused by a leechlike, blood sucking parasite which infects the small intestine. Sandwith of Cairo, Egypt, believes that the ancient Egyptians suffered from this form of anaemia, as a number of references tallying with the modern descriptions of the affection are found in ancient writings.

Within modern times this particular kind of anaemia was described in Brazil by Piso in 1648; Labat, in 1742 or 1745 observed it in Guadeloupe, Chevalier in 1762 in Santo Domingo, Dazille and Bason in 1776 in the Antilles and Edwards in 1790-1793 in Jamaica.

In Europe the disease was first noted among the miners of Auzin, France, in 1802. The parasite, however, was not discovered until 1843, by Dublin of Milan. Griesinger in 1854 first showed the true relation of the parasitical disease to anaemia.

The worm causing the malady is, says Stiles, somewhat different in Europe and in the Old World generally, from that of this continent. It is known in Europe as the Ankylostomium duodenale and here as the Uncinaria Americana.

It has a remarkably wide distribution, being found in almost all tropical and sub-tropical regions, and in many parts of the temperate zone. In Great Britain the parasite was unknown until recently.

In 1902 there was a serious outbreak of aukbylostomcasis in Cornish mines. In France it exists in the mining districts. In Belgium and Germany it prevails largely among the same class. Among miners working in the coal mines of Hungary the affection is common. In Italy the disease has been observed on an extended scale, especially in the provinces of Milan and Pavia in Lombardy.

In the Far East the malady is present almost everywhere. It is exceedingly common throughout the Indian Peninsula and Ceylon. Dobson, Rogers and others have shown that in Assam, Bengal, and some other parts of India from 60 to 70 percent of the population harbor the parasite.

It is believed that in some of the hospitals of Ceylon the majority of cases of dysentery and debility that come under treatment are due to this parasite. Dr. Thomhill of Ceylon states that the more he reflects on his own experience and the more he reads of the experience of others, the firmer does his conviction become that the hookworm is the greatest enemy of the human race in the tropics.

In Burmah the worm is widely prevalent, and it has a wide distribution in the East Indian Islands. It has also been found in Cochin China, in French Indo-China and in Japan; in fact, in some parts of China it is very common.

Australia contains many sufferers from the hookworm disease, while it flourishes more or less in all parts of Africa. In Egypt the infection occurs with great frequency, and on the west coast of Africa, in the Belgian Congo, in Mauritius and in South Africa it is extremely prevalent.

In Central America the hookworm is a scourge, and it is fairly common in all parts of South America. There are but a few of the West Indian Islands in which the parasite is not found, and in porto Rico it is the cause of almost all the sicknesses and poverty so widespread throughout that island.

From the above account it will be gathered that the hookworm disease has a very extensive range, but that it is found mainly in hot or warm climates, while as a cause of permanent endemic disease it is almost wholly confined to tropical or sub-tropical countries, Italy being the only country which is an exception to that rule.

As the maanner in which infection by the hookworm takes place, there is by no means unanimity of opinion among medical men. Clemow, a great authority, says: "The development of the ova takes place in muddy water, mud or damp earth, while for the final stage, and in order they may again become sexually mature worms, they must enter the tissues of a human being. This probably takes place by means of foul drinking water, or, perhaps more commonly by being transferred in the act of eating from earth-soiled hands to the mouth; or by a direct penetration of the skin. Hence it is most common to find the affection in persons who work in the earth."

All are agreed that the disease is essentially one of the soil, but it is not now believed drinking water, however foul, plays any part in its causation, nor even that eating dirt-stained food is a very important factor. The trend of opinion is toward the belief that direct infection is the main cause

The majority of those who work in tropical climates are scantily clothed, and seldom or never wear coverings on their feet or legs, and it is surmised that the worms, swarming in the earth, effect an entrance to the body by means of the bare feet and legs of the workers.

Treatment by drugs is effective, male fern and thymol, especially the latter, being excellent curative remedies. Prevention, nevertheless, as in most diseases of a parasitic nature, is the most effective mode of extirpation.

Much can doubtless be done in the way of disinfecting the soil, but this method, although radical and efficient, is expensive and presents many difficulties. There are many other precautionary measures which might be adopted and would do much to curb the spread of the disease

Of these, personal cleanliness and good sanitary arrangements generally stand in the front rank. Protection to the feet and legs is also an obvious precaution and one which, if put into universal practice among the inhabitants of tropical regions, would be a step in the right direction of inestimable importance.

The whole question is an economic one that affects the government of the United States directly. Not only within the borders of our own continent does hookworm disease prejudicially affect the physical well being and prosperity of a large number of the inhabitants, but in Port Rico and in the Philippines, for the health and progress of whose inhabitants we are now responsible, the malady is a scourge.

Further than this, Central America is a hotbed of hookworm disease, and if measures are not put into force promptly to check its spread, it will undoubtedly be a prominent cause of sickness among the Panama canal workers.

QUAINT AND CURIOUS.

Corean currency exists in various grades—first, government nickles; second, first class counterfeits; third, medium counterfeits; fourth, counterfeits that pass only after dark.

The longest bridge in the world is that crossing the Danube, at Czernavoda, with a length of 12,705 feet, followed next by the Galveston bay bridge in Texas, with 11,197 feet. The Firth of Forth bridge, near Queenspring, in Scotland, ranks eighth and the Brooklyn bridge ninth.

The soil of Cuba is extremely fruitful. Cabbages there are so large that heads weighing twenty pounds each are common. All vegetables do well. Radishes may be eaten from fourteen to eighteen days after sowing, lettuce in five weeks after sowing, while corn produce three crops per year. Sweet potatoes grow all the year.

A strange wedding custom is observed in the Tyrol. When a bride is about to start for the church her mother gives her a handkerchief which is called a tearkerchief. It is made of newly-spun linen, and with it the girl dries the tears she sheds on leaving home. The tearkerchief is never used after the marriage day, but is folded and laid in the linen closet, where it remains till its owner's death.

That sanguine evolutionary prophet H. G. Wells has pictured for us England covered with a network of roads of different kinds—pedestrians, bicyclists, horseback riders, trucks, carriages, slow motors, fast motors, racing motors, all in their proper places, and London emptying itself into the country swiftly and without confusion or friction. This beautiful fancy picture will probably not come true in our day, but motorists will take heart at the news of plans for the first road for the exclusive use of automobiles.

A curious test of the atmosphere was tried in the French Senate recently. General Billot complained of a headache at a recent session and attributed it to gas given off by the heating apparatus. The engineer was unable to find any defect in the apparatus. Recourse was had to a "bird test." Bengalee birds are reputed to be very easily asphyxiated. One was hung in a cage for eight hours over the fauteuil in which General Billot contracted the headache. As the bird was lively at the end of that period the atmosphere was pronounced pure.

Real Music.

What is real music?

For ninety people out of a hundred it is a mystery, a dithyramb of din, a sounding brass and a tinkling cymbal, and strings superadding the voice of the domestic beast whose true inwardness they are.

For nine out of the remaining ten real music provides a species of intellectual gratification. They have studied the stuff somewhat and have an understanding more or less adequate, of its technical significance, and thus they find its performance interesting. They are thrilled with the violins fingering tenths and the trombones mounting to E in alt.

But the hundredth man gets a genuine emotional effect from real music, altough the chances seem to be that he is mad—Life.

THE PULPIT.

A SCHOLARLY SUNDAY SERMON BY BISHOP SEYMOUR.

Subject: "My Shepherd."

Brooklyn, N. Y.—At the Church of the Messiah, the Right Rev. Bishop Seymour was the preacher Sunday morning. He chose for his subject, "My Shepherd," and his text was Psalm 1:23: "The Lord is my shepherd, therefore I can lack nothing," he said

We pass from the brightness of Christmas and Epiphany to the season of Lent that closes with the darkness of Good Friday. Ere we bid Epiphany goodby let us consider what it tells us, namely, that our Saviour came to be the Saviour of all mankind. Epiphany falls into two divisions. The Christmas of the Jew and the Christmas of the Gentile. First, the Christmas of the Jew, when the shepherds came as the representatives of the shepherd nation, came called on by an angel through whose dispensation the law was given to the Jew came to the manger; came to worship. And then the Gentile Christmas, called Epiphany, when the kings were led by the star to worship the child. And then the fact that the Jew and the Gentile alike fell down and worshiped the little child, a baby, weaker than the weakest, I may say, of all the young, and yet—Him by whom the worlds were made. It is indeed a wonderful spectacle to see the Jew and the Gentile alike worshiping the babe. We leave the angelic host that sang over Bethlehem and the brightness of the star which brought the three kings—at all events the kings of the East worshiped the little babe with appropriate gifts—for the transition period of Lent.

Could I do better than ask you, with myself, to consider our personal responsibility in the words of the text: "The Lord is my shepherd; therefore can I lack nothing?" Here is a declaration which may make or not, as we choose, for the possessive pronoun is intensive—"my," as though it were something that we loved, as jewels of earth—"they are mine; I own them." So: "The Lord is my shepherd," and based upon that declaration is the fact; "therefore can I lack nothing." There is no word which more frequently falls from our lips than "I." It is the shortest word in human speech—a single letter—because it brings to the surface personality. Go whither you will, on every side you will hear men, women and child uttering "I." "I" is to each one the centre of the universe; everything radiates from it and everything comes into it. And this is right in its way, only sometimes it is exaggerated and we have what we call selfishness. But I am not disposed to criticise that just now, only to say that this pronoun "my" grows out of the personal pronoun "I," because it denotes ownership—"my." And we may say, the poorest of us, first we own ourselves: "I, myself; I belong to myself," and it is on the basis of that claim that we have the wars for independence, for liberty or personal right, and men resist the idea of being owned by the others, and preeminently in this land of freedom claim to be free—"I own myself." I have not time to analyze the worth of the claim, for it is immense: "Mine, spirit, body;" this creature, of God-like mould and sunning workmanship, how marvellously built up! A single profession, numbering some of the greatest men, devotes days and weeks to studying it and yet has not fathomed its secrets. The medical profession is largely experimental to-day. It has made wonderful discoveries in fifty years, and still it has not yet probed this little mass of matter, the body, to its depths. And back of it is the mind, the intellect, the memory that holds the past and hope that grasps the future; the mind that deals with premises and conclusions and reasons. It has no moral quality, it is pure intellect. Deeper down than it is the spirit, the seat of conscience, the moral sense, marvelous beyond expression! that emphasizes our nearness to God. Body, mind and spirit bound up together and each of us claim to own that trinity blended into unity. "I, myself, I own myself."

Let us pass on. "My time;" that is, "my life. These hours and days and weeks are mine." and, hence, the wage question, when men claim the right to sell their time for so much. So, you see, we claim the ownership of time. Of course, it is not really ours. "Our times are in His hand." Still, we claim it. "My years are so many." Hence, we see another element of wealth—time, opportunity. Then, again, character, "my character," emphasized by the name. A good name is worth a good deal. We pass still further: "My position in life, in society, my parentage, my surroundings, my friends and relatives—these belong to me." And they are worth a great deal sometimes. Then we come down to that with which we are most familiar: "My material wealth, my stocks and bonds, jewels, wardrobe. They belong to me."

Now, that brings us to David's claim: "The Lord is my shepherd." You do not give up the other things, but you make another claim, and that you can only make through Him who allows it, and He allows it by coming here to be reached and embraced, if you will, and loved. He revealed Himself as one of us in order that through Him we, by the Holy Ghost, might reach the Father, for He comes out from the invisible to be visible. He can be touched and handled and seen here. He was here with a certain generation when this was the case. We must not envy them, for we have a greater privilege than they. You remember Thomas. Jesus said to him after he had been so obstinate, "Because thou hast seen Me thou hast believed; blessed are they that have not seen and yet have believed." We may believe if we will, on the undoubted testimony of the ages, that Jesus after death was on this earth. He had passed through the graven gate of death and had consummated for man the glory of the resurrection, and took our nature through into heaven and blessed it on the throne of God, where He ever remains as a magnet to draw men in love, so that we may say with David, "The Lord is my shepherd, therefore can I lack nothing."

Now, my friends, I wish to say that no other element of wealth can enable us to say, "Therefore can I lack nothing." Try the experiment with which we are most familiar as a world power, wealth in any form. I have been with some of the wealthiest men that the last generation knew. I have seen them in the hour of death and as they died the bonds and stocks of wealth fell down and parted hands. It could not buy an entrance ticket to Paradise nor to heaven. If you would be wise consider the end and nothing between. Forecast the future, not as bounded by the horizon of earth, but by the glories of Paradise and heaven. "The Lord is my shepherd, therefore can I lack nothing," because He was born with us, nay, conceived with us, and He goes through life's journey with us as our friends do who survive us, but they must part with us as we bid them the last farewell, but He, of whom the Psalmist speaks, "The Lord my shepherd," He dies with me, is buried with me, He goes to Paradise with my soul, He will be with me at the last great day, and if I have been loyal and true to Him, He will welcome me to His everlasting blessing; He will be my advocate and plead His sacrifice to take away my sins.

Observe that the religion which Jesus gives us embraces the whole of life. There is no other religion that does. You may divide them into religions that appeal to pleasure, "the lusts of the flesh," and the religions that appeal to the pride of intellect. Take the ancient Sadduceeism, the medieval Mohammedanism, and the present day Mormonism. They are the flesh in religions. They cannot begin to tell upon mankind until passion shall develop in manhood and womanhood. Take the intellectual systems of Greece and the philosophies of the present day that appeal to the intellect, and a man is almost half way upon the journey of life before they touch him. Take Christianity; where does it begin? With conception, with birth, infancy, childhood, youth, manhood, in health, in sickness, in death and the resurrection and the life eternal in the presence of the great White Throne. Christianity embraces the religion of life. Does it appeal simply to the body? No. But it appeals to the body, the intellect and the soul.

Remember the declaration of St. John, "the disciple whom Jesus loved." He says: "The Word was made flesh, and dwelt among us, and we beheld His glory, as of the glory of the only begotten of the Father, full of grace and truth." He embraced the whole of man. The Word was made flesh, but with that was intellect and spirit, and so He was a complete and perfect man. This morning we were joined together hand in hand in the prayers offered by your rector, but when we come to the creed, how is it? The husband drops the hand of the wife, the father of the child, the friend of the friend, and each for himself, as in the Day of Judgment, stands on his own feet and says, "I believe." It is a personal act. "The Lord is my shepherd; therefore can I lack nothing." There is one element of wealth on which we can rest, and which will enable us to say "We shall lack nothing." Without our Saviour we shall lack everything when we come to die. I care not who we are or whether we have been clad in the purple of kings or the splendor of jewels, we shall be stripped stark naked and go up naked into the presence of God. We shall lack nothing if we can say from the depths of our soul, "The Lord is my shepherd." Then when the end comes we shall be able to say: "Thy mercy and loving kindness—Thy mercy for forgiveness; Thy loving kindness for my needs—shall follow me all the days of my life, and I shall dwell in the house of the Lord forever." There is no dwelling place here. I was once a rector in Brooklyn, but where are my parishioners now? Most of them are gone. Within the last two months two of my classmates in Columbia are gone. And there are but few of those I knew in the lecture room left. There is no dwelling place here. It is a cheat we put upon ourselves when we talk of houses as dwelling places. They are not. God grant, my brothers, that it may be our lot to "Dwell together forever in the house of the Lord," which will be our eternal home.

The Busy Watchmaker.

A watchmaker who enlisted for the war thinking that he might earn a little when off duty, took some of his tools along with him. But he found so many watches to mend that he forgot he was a soldier. One day he was ordered into battle. He looked about him in consternation and exclaimed: "Why, how can I go? I have ten watches to mend?" Many of our excuses and sometimes our reasons, which we try so hard to be conscientious about, if correctly translated, would read: "Why, how can I read my Bible and pray every day? How can I be true to my religious duties? I have something else to do."

What We Can Do.

God has not given us vast learning to solve all the problems, or unfailing wisdom to direct all the wanderings of our brothers' lives; but He has given to every one of us the power to be spiritual and by our spirituality to lift and enlarge and enlighten the lives we touch.—Phillips Brooks.

Spiritual Life.

A soft snap is Satan's trap.

A failure to make a living is not a fitting to preach the gospel of poverty.

Some men will feel cheap when they read their own advertisements at the judgment.

Preaching dogmas is fighting the devil with the scabbard instead of with the sword.

The modern idolator falls down before the work of his own imagination instead of that of his hands.

The mighty God is a tireless God; He fainteth not, neither is weary. This is brave doctrine, then, that a tireless deity attends humanity amid all its struggles and hardships, and attends it to aid, to soothe, to cheer, to purify, to redeem, to save.—C. Silvester Horne.

There is a powerlessness of utterance in our blood that we should fight against, and struggle onward towards expression. We can educate ourselves to it if we know and feel the necessity; we can make it a Christian duty, not only to love, but to be loving; not only to be true friends, but to show ourselves friendly. — Harriet Beecher Stowe.

A SUSPICIOUS case was reported at New Orleans as yellow fever, but prompt investigation proved it was not the dread disease. It appears that every precaution is being taken to prevent an outbreak of yellow fever, but that even alarmists shall not be able to upset our equanimity with a scare.

The municipal election to be held next Monday seems to be arousing some interest in the citizens, and on Tuesday night another meeting was held at the court house and a ticket nominated. W. I. Mullins was elected chairman and Frank Crichton, secretary. The chairman announced the object of the meeting and called for nominations.

On motion of O E. Latham the following ticket was nominated and carried without opposition:

For Mayor—N. A. Kicker.

For Councilmen—B. E. Jones, P. I. Hopkins, E. C. Jones, J. Renfroe Mullins.

J. W. Foshee moved that a committee of three be appointed to arrange for the ballots for the election, and the Chair appointed: P. D. Wilson, C. F. Jones and O. E. Latham, and the meeting adjourned.

There seems to be no disposition to get out an opposition ticket but it is hoped there will be a full attendance of the voters at the polls next Monday.

Randolph.

The farmers around here are moving right along for a new crop. O, that sweet song of the plow boy reminds me of 1905. It is thickly settled around here. I love all the plow boys, and I love my fellowman. We can hear the songs of the plow boy every day. I want to live a life that will take me on the other shore.

We are having some sickness around here, but we hope they will recover soon.

Let us walk before our children the way we will have them to go and when they become old they will not depart from it.

God bless you, dear Editor, I love you, I hope you will print every word and I will not bother you any more.

Oh, my friend S. M. Adams, where is he today? I think of his prayers gone before us, they are calling us to that beautiful city of gold.

Shiloh.

Please allow us a small space in your dear old Banner to say a few words in regard to the closing of our school the 16th, under the skillful management of Prof. C. M. Baker, who will surely be missed in our community, for he has taught two schools down here; we would be glad to go to school to him again, we think he is a good man and we know that he did all he could to learn the children and we think most of the children learned to love him and he loved the children. We hope that we will get a teacher to teach our next school that will try to do as much for the children as Mr. Baker did while he was with us. We don't think that anybody need be afraid to select him for a teacher, for we think he will do his best to learn the children if they will try to learn; we know that they will learn something. We would be glad to have him with us again but we are afraid we will not; may God be with him in all of his schools.

Success to the Banner and its readers.

TRAINED NURSE

Writes a Letter to The Banner.

To the Editor of the Banner:

"I am a trained nurse of nine years' experience in hospitals and private cases, and for the benefit of the people of Clanton, I wish you would publish my experience with the cod liver oil preparation called Vinol.

I was completely prostrated from overwork I had no appetite, could not sleep, my kidneys, liver and bowels became inactive, and as I grew weaker I could not retain either medicine or food on my stomach and raised blood. The doctors said my condition was critical, and I would probably die

As I had seen Vinol prescribed for my patients with such remarkable results, I decided to try it myself. After the first bottle I began to improve. I continued its use and soon began to sleep and eat well, every organ in my body was strengthened and became normal until it seemed good to be alive and I was restored to perfect health and strength.

I believe Vinol is the most potent and delicious cod liver oil preparation and tonic rebuilder in the world, and it is such a blessing to be able to take into the system all the body-building and medicinal elements of cod liver oil without the nauseating, greasy oil itself.

I advise all my patients who need strength for every organ in the body, rich, red blood and flesh tissue, to take Vinol, as it is so far superior to old fashioned cod liver oil emulsions or other tonics." Elizabeth M. Cremond, Trained nurse, Boston, Mass.

IN MEMORIAM.

Lieutenant Murdock McQueen was born Jan. 1, 1825, and died Jan. 10, 1906, and in 1857 he was united in marriage to Althea Sample, an accomplished daughter of a pioneer Methodist family; to this union was born seven sons and five daughters. The deceased leaves a pious, devoted wife and seven children to mourn his loss.

It has been my privilege to know Lieutenant McQueen for upward of 45 years. He was in my boyhood days, a special friend of my father, they both being Free Masons. He was also a member of the Presbyterian church at Vine Hill, Ala., near where he lived to a ripe old age, and his remains were interred in the cemetery near the church of his choice, Rev. Jas. W. Lapsley officiated.

The present generation will remember Lieutenant McQueen as in his retired life, but the citizens of other days remember him when in the zenith of his usefulness. In his boyhood days he had such training and environments thrown as a shield around him, that he imbibed that trait of character which developed itself in true manhood; noted for promptness in business transactions, dealing justly with his fellowman, adhering strictly to the truth, and a heart of tender emotions for the widow and orphan, his purse strings loose in behalf of the poor and needy.

It seemed that an all-wise Providence gave him brain and tact for civil engineering, which he chose as a profession. Away back in the 50's and 60's, he was a public surveyor of lands, drawing land charts and maps and surveying land lines. And when he set his compass up and took his bearings of the various degrees of both latitude and longitude, he said, "Here is or there is the line," that settled it as an established fact, and that beyond dispute. Acting in the capacity of a surveyor I feel that I can safely say that he was a bright star in magnitude around which other luminaries of less brilliancy radiated.

The pine tree, the oak tree,
The black gum, the sweet gum,
The maple's trunk, the birch's bark,
He passed and placed the surveyor's mark.

When tracing an old survey,
And no tree nearby found,
He would clean the earth away
And locate the corner of the ground.

And back in years of yore
U. S. surveyors blazed the saplin's bark,
He with compass, chain and scroll,
Would find land marks hid in wood below.

During the civil war between the States, the humble writer of these lines joined the Alabama Volunteer Cavalry, 7th Alabama Regiment, Company K, of which Lieutenant McQueen was a commissioned officer, and in acting in such capacity he reminded me more of an "Old ancient knight" in his general deportment, true and tried, placing his own life on the altar of his beloved Southland, there to battle, to bleed, to die, if necessary, for the laurels of our "Dixie land." He was kind and affable to the soldiers under his command. I never knew him to shirk from duty as an officer, he made it a point to obey and revere his superior officers. Amid these stormy days of conflict he endeared himself to me as an officer and friend, and during those long years since the bloody conflict, the cords of love, affections and reverence have been drawn closer and closer still, until the Master called him home.

Oh! may it please the Father to gather us all as comrades in that everlasting army of the saints immortal. And the streets are of gold, are they not comrade? The foundation of Jasper and precious stones, and each gate is a pearl, is it not comrade? "In the midst is the great white throne" Oh, the visions your eyes now behold, comrade; and you know what you've oft been told comrade, that the city is wondrous fair And so would we now think of our heroic comrade in the city that it is "wonderous fair," and would take comfort from these blessed words in the same chapter. "And God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes, and there shall be no more deaths, neither shall there be any more pain, for the former things are passed away." May his absence from a precious family and loving friends have a tendancy to work out for them a far more and exceeding weight of glory in the end. May his death serve as a beacon light to land his Godly wife and devoted sons and daughters on the other shore, and form an unbroken family in a land of pure delight and happiness, a land of perpetual sun shine radiating from the throne of God's amazing glory, shall we all meet beyond the river.

THE above picture of the man and fish is the trademark of Scott's Emulsion, and is the synonym for strength and purity. It is sold in almost all the civilized countries of the globe.

If the cod fish became extinct it would be a world-wide calamity, because the oil that comes from its liver surpasses all other fats in nourishing and life-giving properties. Thirty years ago the proprietors of Scott's Emulsion found a way of preparing cod liver oil so that everyone can take it and get the full value of the oil without the objectionable taste. Scott's Emulsion is the best thing in the world for weak, backward children, thin, delicate people, and all conditions of wasting and lost strength.

A Chicago Alderman Owes His Election to Chamberlain's Cough Remedy.

"I can heartily and conscientiously recommend Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for affections of the throat and lungs," says Hon. John Shenick, 220 So. Peoria St., Chicago. "Two years ago during a political campaign, I caught cold after being overheated, which irritated my throat and I was finally compelled to stop, as I could not speak aloud. In my extremity a friend advised me to use Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. I took two doses that afternoon and could not believe my senses when I found the next morning the inflammation had largely subsided. I took several doses that day, kept right on talking through the campaign, and I thank this medicine that I won my seat in the Council." This remedy is for sale by Upchurch Drug co., Clanton; A. Horn, Thorsby.

PIPE AND SOAP BUBBLE.

"I am little," the soap-bubble said, "just now.
Oh, yes, I am small, I know,"
(This is what it said to the penny pipe):
"But watch and see me grow.

"Now, look! and reflected in me you'll see
The windows, the chairs and door.
I'm a whole little world; did you ever know
Such a wonderful thing before?

"And only look at my colors bright,
Crimson and green and blue;
You could hardly hope such a lovely thing
Would ever stay here with you.

"And I feel so light!" the bubble cried;
"I am going now; good-by!
I shall float and float away from here,
Out under the shining sky.

"I shall float —" But, puff! the bubble broke
The pipe near the nursery floor
Never looked nor spoke, but went on with its work,
And blew a great many more.
—Katharine Pyle, in St. Nicholas.

THE FIRST FORKS.

The Greeks and Romans, with all their luxury, ate with their fingers. They had large forks for hay and for taking meats from kettles, but they never dreamed of having small ones for table use. These are the only forms of forks known to have been in use before the fifteenth century. Sometime during that epoch the Italians began the practice, now common to all civilized people among the Western nations, of eating with forks.—St. Nicholas.

LINCOLN'S MELANCHOLY.

Hopeful and cheerful as he ordinarily seemed, there was in Mr. Lincoln's disposition a strain of deep melancholy. This was not peculiar to him alone, for the pioneers as a race were somber rather than gay. Their lives had been passed for generations under the most trying physical conditions, near malaria-infested streams, and where they breathed the poison of decaying vegetation. Insufficient shelter, storms, the cold of winter, savage enemies, and the cruel labor that killed off all but the hardiest of them, had at the same time killed the happy-go-lucky gayety of an easier form of life. They were thoughtful, watchful, wary; capable indeed of wild merriment; but it has been said that although a pioneer might laugh, he could not easily be made to smile. Lincoln's mind was unusually sound and sane and normal. He had a cheerful, wholesome, sunny nature, yet he had inherited the strongest traits of the pioneers, and there was in him, moreover, much of the poet, with a poet's great capacity for joy and pain. It is not strange that as he developed into manhood, especially when his deeper nature began to feel the stirrings of ambition and love, that these seasons of depression and gloom came upon him with overwhelming force.—From Helen Nicolay's "The Boys' Life of Lincoln," in St. Nicholas.

ONE WAY TO MAKE A LIVING.

The chief industry of Bethlehem of Judea is that of the mother-of-pearl workers. The shells are brought from the Red Sea, and in the hands of native artisans are polished and carved, the larger into elaborate designs; the smaller are cut up for rosaries and crosses. The work is all done by hand, and the methods are amazingly primitive to a spectator from the home of steam and electric power. But the results are extraordinary. The largest shell we saw was carved in scenes from the birth of Christ. Under the magnifying glass every detail was seen to be perfect in outline and in finish. It was executed to order for a wealthy American, and was to cost $160. About 150 persons make a living by this industry, which is 500 years old. In the shops the workmen sit upon the floor, their benches in front of them: the air is full of whitish dust, and the light, admitted by the single window and the open door so dim that the exquisite tracery of the wrought shells is a mystery even before the visitor notes how few, simple and crude are the instruments employed. — Lippincott's.

PETS IN CHINA.

The Chinese children are very fond of pets and are universally kind to them. Birds of various kinds are kept as pets, and it is a common sight to see fine looking, elegant gentlemen taking their birds out for an airing either in cages or perched upon the fingers of their masters. These gentlemen will go to the greatest trouble to catch insects with which to feed them. No family of any position would think of leaving its pets in the city during the hot weather. They accompany the family to the mountains, every one of them, down to the tiniest cricket.

Crows are regarded with much favor in China. They are taught cunning tricks and show a great deal of intelligence. Pigeons have bamboo whistles fastened to their feathers so they make mysterious noises as they fly. Cats are taught to live in bird houses to protect the birds from rats.

What seems the queerest pet to us is the cricket, says the Washington Star. This insect belongs to boys, although many grown-ups keep them as well. They are carefully fed, provided with water and kept in pretty bamboo cages. The ladies like them for their cheerful chirps, and it is not pleasant to tell that the boys and men keep them for fighting.

Cricket fights take place in tubs. The insects, when victorious in several fights, are regarded with great honor. They have special names, and when at last they die they are buried with solemn rites in coffins of solid silver.—New Haven Register.

OUR FUNNY FIRST ENGINES.

If our modern railway engines had the same power to laugh that they have to scream they might, as you children say, "nearly die" laughing over the way our first railway engines looked. Little, queerly shaped, puny things they were. The "Stourbridge Lion" didn't weigh one-twenty-fifth part of the weight of an engine of to-day, and it looked as if people might well hesitate about risking their lives behind it. It was first used at Honesdale, in Pennsylvania, and it ran on wooden rails with a thin layer of iron on them. People gathered from near and from far that 8th of August, in the year 1829, when the little British lion of iron and steel was to make its first run. The wiseacres shook their heads and prophesied all sorts of probable disasters, and people said that "nothing on earth" could tempt them to ride across the bridge spanning the Lackawaxen River on "that thing." But the little lion went safely over the bridge and over the eight or nine miles of track, which was the entire length of this line of railroad.—St. Nicholas.

DOGS AND DEER.

The strength of heredity, both in wild and in domesticated animals, is brought into clear light by an incident related in a recent book, "In Search of a Siberian Klondike." The authors of the book were traveling by dog team through the wilds of Siberia.

At 4 o'clock in the afternoon the dogs suddenly broke into a swift run, and we knew they had scented something that interested them. We soon perceived that we were nearing an encampment. We turned a bend in the road, and there, a hundred yards ahead of us, we saw the cause of the dog's excitement.

A team of reindeer were running for their lives. Their Tungus driver was lashing them with the whip and was urging them with all his might, for he knew as well as we that if our dogs overtook them before the camp was reached we seven men would be utterly powerless to prevent the dogs from tearing the deer to pieces. Our driver put on the brake with all his might, but it had not the least effect. The fourteen dogs had become wolves in the turn of a hand, and no brake could stop them. There were many stumps and other obstructions along our way, and my driver had great difficulty in preventing a smashup.

For a short time the deer held their own, and, in fact, gained on us, but before the yurta (village) came in sight we were gaining rapidly. While we were still at some distance the people of the village, warned by the cries of the dogs, comprehended what was the matter, and, arming themselves with sticks and spears, came running toward us. As they came on they spread out in a fan-like formation across the trail. When the terrified deer reached the line the men spread out and let the team through, and instantly closed again to dispute the passage of our dogs.

Our driver was nowise minded to let the natives club his dogs, and perhaps injure the valuable animals, so he resorted to the last expedient. Giving a shout of warning to me, he suddenly, by deft motion, turned our sledge completely over, landing me in a snowdrift on my head. In this position the sledge was all brake, and the dogs were forced to stop. They were leaping in their harness and yelling like fiends incarnate.

I sat up in the snow bank and laughed. The other drivers had followed our example, and the struggling tangle of sledges, harness, dogs and men formed a scene that to the novice at least was highly ludicrous. The drivers and the village people were belaboring the dogs, and the entire herd of reindeer belonging to the village was escaping in all directions up the hills.

The reader may well ask how the natives can use both dogs and reindeer, if the sight of a deer has such a maddening effect on the dogs. The explanation is simple. The two never go together. There is the dog country and the deer country, and they do not overlap. Confusion is often unavoidably caused by travelers with dogs through a deer country, but the natives do not take it in ill part, knowing that if they themselves have to travel with deer through a dog country they will cause quite as much inconvenience.

More by Mail.

A traveling man received the following telegram from his wife: "Twins arrived to-night. More by mail." He went at once to the nearest office, and sent the following reply: "I leave for home to-night. If more come by mail, send to Dead-Letter Office."

There are now twenty-seven standard gauge and thirty-nine narrow gauge railways in Spain.

Ignorance of the law is no excuse, unless you have a pull.

SUPERSTITIONS OF THE ROAD.

ODD THINGS TRAVELING SALESMEN DO TO SELL GOODS. ∴ ∴ ∴

TRAVELING men as a class are fuller of peculiarities and superstitions than any class, perhaps, in the world. I seldom have met a salesman on the road who didn't have some freakish idea, some pet superstition, regarding selling goods, says a correspondent of the Cleveland Plain Dealer, and most of them are worshipers at the shrine of "luck."

One of my best friends on the road is a shoe salesman—he is known to the fraternity everywhere—who would not think of attempting to sell a bill of goods if he did not wear a red tie. He is a firm believer in red ties, and he wears one every time he starts to sell, and he believes that any man who wears a red tie can sell goods. Why he does not explain.

There is another man on the road—I have known him for fifteen years—who sells men's furnishings, who would not think of smoking a cigar until he had plastered it all over with cigarette papers. I asked him once why he did it, for before smoking a cigar he spends perhaps five minutes carefully wetting rice paper and binding it around the cigar. He explained that when he was first on the road he one day took a cigar from his pocket and started to light it, discovering that it was broken. He patched it up with a cigarette paper and started out to sell a bill of goods. He had phenomenal sales that afternoon, and ever afterward believed that he could sell goods any time he wrapped his cigars in cigarette papers.

There is a lot in that sort of belief. I am not superstitious myself, although I always carry a wishbone in my pocket, but the man who starts out confident that luck is with him will sell goods unless he loses confidence in himself.

I have another friend who collects letterheads of hotels in which he stops. He never will write a letter on the stationery of the hotel where he happens to be, but will take a bunch of that paper to his rooms and write on the letterhead of some hotel perhaps a thousand miles away. Why he does it no one except himself knows, and it constantly tangles up his firm, but he persists in it.

Another crank friend of mine always carries his own pillow with him and sleeps on it every night after throwing the hotel pillows off his bed. Over fifteen years ago he went to bed one night and a pin in the pillow scratched his face. The pin scratch was the direct cause of his losing a big order the next morning, and ever since then he has refused to use any hotel pillow and carries his own with him in his sample trunk.

One of the oddest fads of a traveling man that I know of is that of a silk salesman who collects souvenir electric globes, carrying off the bulbs from every hotel in which he stops and using them in his own home in a small Eastern city. He has in his home almost every kind of globe known, and on each of them he has pasted the name of the hotel whence it came. He has some that will not fit the fixtures in his home, and these he has piled in ornamental fashion on a table.

Another man whom I met frequently on the road is a salesman for a big electric fixture works in the central West, and he has a queer idea. He carries with him his own telephone, and in some way he has achieved the idea that it brings him luck. It is one of the English style of receivers that fit the head, and every time he gets into a hotel that has telephones in the rooms he disconnects the house telephone and puts in his own apparatus. Just how it helps him I cannot imagine, but he thinks it does, and that is the main point.

One of the most energetic and hustling clothing salesmen in the West has an idea something like that, and one that would cause the casual discoverer of his fad to think he is one of the laziest men on earth. He carries around with him at all times an appliance for turning out electric lights and gas lights after he gets into bed. He reads in bed, and when he gets through and is ready for sleep, he picks up his extension apparatus from the side of his bed and turns out the light without getting up.

But those fellows are mild samples of the traveling man crank. I know one fellow—he sells wrappers and corsets in the Western country—who always carries in his right hand hip pocket a small copy of the Bible in Russian. He does not read a word of Russian, never was in Russia, and is only a casual believer in the Bible, yet he never is without this volume, and on trains he often produces it and looks through it from beginning to end. He gets mad if any one inquires too closely about the Bible.

There is a close friend of mine in the hat line in the Central States who will not sell a bill of goods to any man who will drink with him. He invites them to drink, and if they accept he closes his samples and will not have anything more to do with them on that trip. I don't know what his idea or his system is in doing that sort of thing, but, as a matter of fact, I know of two instances where he has gained steady customers who clamored for him to sell them after he had packed his line.

A fellow named Crane, who is in the shoe line, has a queer fad. At dinner every day on the road he orders a boiled potato, sticks his fork into it, leaves the fork standing there sticking in the potato, and asks the waiter to bring him another fork. He never eats the potato, and he will not eat anything until another fork is produced.

Every one of those fellows is a great salesman, and every one attributes at least part of his success to his fad. I once knew a man named Wilson who sold chemicals, who had an odd notion. He always wrote his name on three lines of the register in the hotel, and drew a double line through each name. He vowed that unless he did that he could not sell any goods in that town. He declared he had tried over and over again to write his name in the ordinary way, and that every time he attempted it he lost out on some big order.

But perhaps the queerest of all is a lace drummer from New York, who covers all the big towns for his firm. He steals towels from every hotel in which he stops and carries them on to the next town. He will pick up two towels in Pittsburg, carry them to Cincinnati, and use them, leaving them there, and carrying two Cincinnati towels on to St. Louis, and so on, never using a towel in the city where it belongs.

Cured of the Quail Habit.

They were debating the oft-debated question as to whether or not a man can eat thirty quails in thirty days.

"There's nothing to it," declared Jack Inglis. "I won a $100 bet on that very proposition several years ago, thus upsetting the popular fallacy for all time to come. I did more than my contract called for. I ate thirty-four birds, and thereby won $100 from a fellow named Gannon. Remember Gannon? Say, Gannon was furious. He said:

"'Jack, how much do you weigh, now that you've assimilated thirty-four quail?'

"'I'm not sure,' I replied, 'but certainly several pounds more than you.'

"'I'd like to bet you a hundred that you do not weigh more than I do,' he declared.

"I hated to take the money for he was three inches shorter than myself, and quite slender. Reluctantly, I consented to the wager, and we stepped into a wholesale tobacco house where they had some heavy scales in the basement. I had $200 in gold in my pocket and a loaded revolver. On the way to the basement we passed a small weighing machine, and some one picked up several pound weights and handed them to me. I slipped them in my pocket for good measure, and began figuring out what I would do with the extra $100. Well, sir, that undersized, narrow-chested little fellow beat me out eight pounds in spite of all the junk I had concealed about my person and I've had a mean suspicion ever since that he had fifty pounds of pig lead stowed away in his shoes. I haven't had any appetite for quail since."—San Francisco Chronicle.

He Never Laughed.

John was the sober-minded house servant of a Fort Wayne lady, who was desirous of furthering the interests of two faithful attendants by uniting them in marriage and ending a courtship that was becoming tiresome. John was willing, but the maid, Christine, a jolly little woman of half her lover's years, after trying in vain to change the serious disposition of her lover, brought matters to a climax in her own way. It took the form of a dialogue which her mistress overhead. They had discussed the situation in their usual fashion, one teasing, the other laying down the law, when this brief summing up ensued.

Christine—John, you never laugh?

John—No, I never laugh.

Christine—Your father, he never laugh?

John—No, my father, he never laugh.

Christine—Your mother, she never laugh?

John—No, my mother, she never laugh.

Christine—Then, John, you get married by some other girl that no laugh either. I stay py myself, and not spoil one family mit my laugh.—Chicago Record-Herald.

Two Penniless Princes.

While the two elder sons of Prince Waldemar were out walking near Copenhagen recently, night came on before they could return home, and finding the roads very heavy, they kept a lookout for a conveyance. The only vehicle that passed them was a coal cart, and into this the two young princes climbed. On arriving at the outskirts of the town the driver refused to take them any further, and demanded payment. The princes explained that they had no money with them, and told the man who they were, bidding him take them to the palace. He refused to believe their story, however, until a policeman arrived and recognizing the princes, lent them some money so that they could return to the palace in a tramway car.—London Daily Mail.

Born That Way.

A member of the House from New England tells of an occasion when he overheard an amusing colloquy between the late Thomas B. Reed and a barber.

The "tonsorial artist" was inclined to be talkative, but to all his efforts at conversation the big man from Maine returned only a monosyllable or a grunt.

Finally, the barber patted the cranium of the speaker, whereon reposed one or two stray locks, saying: "The hair's getting pretty thin. Been that way long?"

"I was born that way," drily returned Reed.—Harper's Weekly.

INTERNATIONAL LESSON COMMENTS FOR MARCH 25.

Temperance Lesson, Prov. xxiii., 29 35—Golden Text, Prov. xxiii., 29—Memory Verse, 31—Topic: Drink's Chamber of Horrors.

I. Strong drink destroys happiness (vs. 29, 30). 29. "Who." A divine commission to every man to investigate the prevailing cause of woe and sorrow and strife, and thus be deterred from taking the wrong course in life. Robinson call this lesson the drunkard's looking glass, set before those whose face is toward the drunkard's habits, so that they may see what they will be if they go on. "Woe." Direful distress; both the condemnation for a sin committed, and a certain awful condition of suffering. Sin of all kinds brings its own punishment, but there is no sin which so speedily and relentlessly pursues its victim as the sin of drunkenness. "Who hath sorrow." The Hebrew word means, first, poverty and then misery. The cup contains more than one woe; a single sorrow is not all. These are so numerous as to call forth a constant and long continued cry of anguish. "Who hath contentions." Nine-tenths of all the brawls and fights, quarrels and misunderstandings are traceable to drink. "Who hath babbling." This refers to the tendency of strong drink to foolish and incessant talking, revealing secrets, vile conversation and noisy demonstrations, which are common in different stages of drunkenness. Nothing goes right with the drinker. He complains of God, of society, of his family, of his circumstances, of everything. Nothing can be right to one who is thus wrong. "Wounds without cause." Wounds received in wholly unprofitable disputes, such as come of the brawls of drunken men. Drinkers are especially exposed to accidents and diseases which temperance would have prevented. "Redness of eyes." Bloodshot, blurred or bleared eyes (Gen. 49:12). Alcohol induces a paralysis of the nerves controlling the minute blood vessels, the capillaries, which results in a dilation that speedily shows itself in the eye.

30. "They that tarry long." This answers the above questions. He who begins to drink continues to drink, tarrying often a whole night, and from that to day and night. "They that go." To places or among people where intoxicating drinks are made or stored or used. "Mixed wine." Spiced, drugged, medicated wine.

II. Strong drink prohibited (vs. 31, 32). 31. "Look not." This prohibits even moderate drinking. It is our duty to avoid temptation. See Prov. 4:14, 15. The person who enters into temptation is almost certain to fall. "Red." The bright color of the wine gives it an attractive look. "His color in the cup." Literally, its eye, the clear brightness, or the beaded bubbles, on which the wine drinker looks with pleasure. "Goeth down smoothly" (R. V.) This verse pictures the attractive side of wine, when it seems perfectly harmless to sip a little, when it is bright and inspiring, thrilling the nerves with delight, promising all joy and freedom. It is the shining side of evil that is so dangerous—this flowery entrance to the path that leads to death. At such a time, beware! 32. "At the last it biteth." The pleasure will be attended at last with intolerable pains, when it works like so much poison in thy veins and casts thee into diseases as hard to cure as the biting of a serpent. "Adder." In the Geneva Bible this word is translated "cockatrice." It was a very venomous serpent. But the picture cannot be overdrawn. The curse of strong drink is worse than the bite of a thousand serpents.

III. Strong drink ruinous to character (v. 33).

33. "Eyes shall behold," etc. "Thine eyes shall behold strange things." R. V. Some think there is a referance here to the delirium tremens. But the rendering in the Authorized Version, which is retained in the margin of the Revised Version, is, according to the Cambridge Bible, "in keeping with the usage of the word in the Book of Proverbs, and with the undoubted connection between excess of wine and lust." The "lust of the eyes" causes the downfall of many. We should hasten to close our eyes to that which we ought not to see. "Heart shall utter." When men or women indulge in the use of strong drink they let down the bars to every sin that follows in the train.

IV. Strong drink leads to folly (vs. 34, 35).

34. "In the midst of the sea." To make one's bed on the waves of the sea would be to be swallowed up in death. So is the drunken man. Or as a pilot who has gone to sleep when his ship was in the troughs of the sea, allowing the tiller to slip out of his hand, and his ship to be swamped with the waves which he might have outridden. Stupefied, besotted men know not where they are or what they are doing, and when they lie down they are as if tossed by the rolling waves of the sea, or upon the top of a mast. Their heads swim. Their sleep is disquiet, and troublesome dreams make sleep unrefreshing. "Top of a mast." The drunkard is utterly regardless of life.

35. "Have stricken—not hurt" (R. V.) With conscience seared and self-respect gone, the drunkard boasts of the things which should make him blush with shame. "Have beaten—felt it not." "Angry companions have done their worst to end my life, says he, but their blows did not affect me." "Will seek—again." Rather, when I shall awake I will seek it again. Self-control is all gone. The drunkard is a slave to appetite. He is as insensible to the pleadings and warnings of those who seek his salvation as he is to the beatings of his comrades when he is delirious.

FREE TRADE VOTE, 474 TO 98.

House of Commons Puts Its Tariff Opinions on Record.

London.—In the British House of Commons a resolution, offered by Sir James Kitson, Liberal, affirming that the election had demonstrated the people's fidelity to free trade, and that therefore the House deemed it right to record its resistance to any proposal creating protection, either by taxing grain or by the establishment of a general tariff, was carried by a vote of 474 to 98.

Household Matters

Use Vinegar.

Try this and you are sure to be pleased. While cooking a boiled dinner, or cabbage, place a small dish of vinegar on the back of the stove, and the odor will disappear.

New Bed-Capes.

A new feature in a lady's wardrobe is the present dressing or bed cape, a very different article from the cosy if homely "nightingale," or little flannel wrap, formerly deemed sufficient to meet the requirements of any weather. The new bed-capes are beautiful constructions of richebroche silk, smothered in frills of lace and guipure, and finished off with ribbon.

A Home-Made Filter.

Having broken her filter, and being unable to get out to replace it, a housekeeper made a bag of three thicknesses of cheese cloth, four by three inches, rounding the corners. She filled it with the ground quartz from the filter (a few cents' worth could be bought at a hardware store), and tied it to the faucet. She liked it so well that she continued to use it, for she could wash the bag and quartz more frequently and easier than she could empty the filter.

How to Wash Knitted Articles.

Make a suds of warm (not hot) water and a good white soap. Put in the article to be washed; squeeze (not rub) until it looks perfectly clean; rinse it thoroughly through clean, warm water until there is no soap left; squeeze the water out, do not wring; shake gently; put in a cheesecloth bag and hang in a draft; shake often while drying. Hand-made articles will retain their shape and look like new if these simple directions are carefully followed.

Save the Plumbers' Bill.

Before sending for the plumber, and thus incurring unnecessary expense, try this simple and nearly always infallible device: If a sink pipe becomes clogged, remove strainer over pipe opening, then take a round stick—a piece of broom handle will answer the purpose nicely—cover one end with cloth; gather the ends of cloth up around the stick and insert the end so covered into the pipe, and holding cloth and stick firmly with both hands, force up and down, causing suction, until obstruction is removed and water will run down freely.

Good Things to Eat
AND HOW TO PREPARE THEM

Cornmeal Pudding—Three-quarters of a cup of cornmeal, one and one-quarter cups of flour, one-quarter cup of sugar, four teaspoonfuls of baking powder, one-half teaspoonful of salt, one cup of milk, one egg, one tablespoonful of melted butter. Mix and sift dry ingredients. Add milk, egg well beaten, and butter. Steam in buttered mould one and one-half hours. For sauce use one cup sour cream, two tablespoonfuls of powdered sugar, one-half a teasponful of vanilla. Beat the cream until thick, and add sugar and vanilla. Serve with steamed cornmeal pudding.

Oranges in Syrup—Score the oranges all over in imitation of some ornamental design, representing basket-work or trellis-work, and then simmer in water until nearly done through. They must next be put into cold water for twenty-four hours, changing the water every three hours. At the end of this time they should be drained in a sieve for several hours, then placed in an earthen pan and covered with a hot syrup made by boiling three pounds of sugar and one quart of water for five minutes. For three successive days let the syrup be boiled up and skimmed, and when nearly cold pour back upon the oranges; after the last time the oranges may be put away in jars, and used for dessert when required.

Scotch Gingerbread—Sift one and a quarter pounds of flour into a basin. Add half a teaspoonful of salt, two teaspoonfuls of ginger, one teaspoonful of allspice, one teaspoonful of cinnamon, one teaspoonful of ground cloves, half a grated nutmeg, one teaspoonful of cinnamon, one teaspoonful of ground cloves, half a grated nutmeg, one teaspoonful of baking soda, four ounces of sultana raisins, four ounces of chopped citron peel and four ounces of blanched almonds. Melt together, in a pan, half a pound of butter, one and a half cups of milk and two cups of molasses. Let cool. Then add, with three well-beaten eggs, to the dry ingredients. Mix and pour into a well-buttered and papered cake tin. Bake in a moderate oven for one hour and a half.

Home-Cooked Boneless Herring—It is often remarked that home-cooked fish is not so good as that served at hotels and restaurants; but as a matter of fact the fish bought for the home table is better and fresher. The secret lies in the use of accompanying sauces. A cupful of cold tomato sauce may be reheated and served around the herring, adding a teaspoonful of some sauce, or a half-cupful of tomato catsup may be thinned with one-fourth cupful of hot water, with a tablespoonful of chopped olives or pickles added. Better still is a quick relish of half a cupful of chili sauce heated and poured over the fish just before serving. Or two tablespoonfuls of melted butter, to which has been added a teaspoonful of lemon juice and a tablespoonful of finely-minced parsley, may be served over the hot seasoned fish with most satisfactory results.

Women in China.

The most essential and conspicuous mark of heathenism in China today is the division of the sexes. It divides the empire into two classes and robs each of the help which the other is intended to supply. It is astonishing to see to what extent this rule of division is carried. In the families of the better class the male and female members are kept strictly apart. The different sexes even have different servants. Brothers and sisters are not allowed to associate together after the boys begin their studies, which is usually at the age of 5 years.

The social gatherings where both sexes meet is not only unknown, but is regarded with abhorrence. To them no country could show greater signs of moral degeneracy and barbarism than to indulge in mixed social gatherings. Even the working people seldom appear in the streets with their wives, and on the rare occasions when they do the man walks behind his wife to see that she conducts herself properly. It is astonishing to see to what extent that among the people of the higher classes the husband and wife are never seen together in the street or in any public place.

The law requires a man to mourn three years for the death of a father and 100 days for the death of a mother, but a man would be ostracised socially if he gave any signs of grief at the death of his wife. Probably many a Chinese husband becomes fond of his wife after marriage—he has no opporunity previously—but it is a breach of good manners to give any sign of such a nature.

Two intimate friends engaged in conversation would never think of mentioning the name of any female relative. That common question, "How is your wife?" is never heard in China and would be considered a gross and unpardonable insult even between the most intimate friends. Chinese gentlemen never mention, look, or speak to members of the other sex except those of their own family. In order that there shall be no embarrassing chance meetings when calling on a friend the visitor heralds his approach by coughing as he nears the house, thus giving the objectionable females time to make their escape. It would be a sign of poor breedings to fail to give this sign.

According to the annual report on births, deaths and marriages in Ireland during 1904 the natural increase of population recorded, or the excess of births over death, was 24,298. The loss by emigration amounted to 36,902.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever. Nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free. F. J. CHENEY & Co., Toledo, O.

Foley's Kidney Cure was recommended and the first bottle gave me great relief, and after taking the second bottle I was entirely cured." Why not let it help you? Upchurch Drug co.

One would think the Laxative idea in a cough syrup should have been advanced long before it was. It seems the only rational remedy for Coughs and Colds would be to move the bowels and clean the mucus membranes of the throat and lungs at the same time. Kennedy's Laxative Honey and Tar does this. It is the Original Laxative Cough Syrup, the best known remedy for Coughs, Colds, Croup, Whooping Cough, etc. Tastes good and harmless. Sold by Upchurch Drug co.

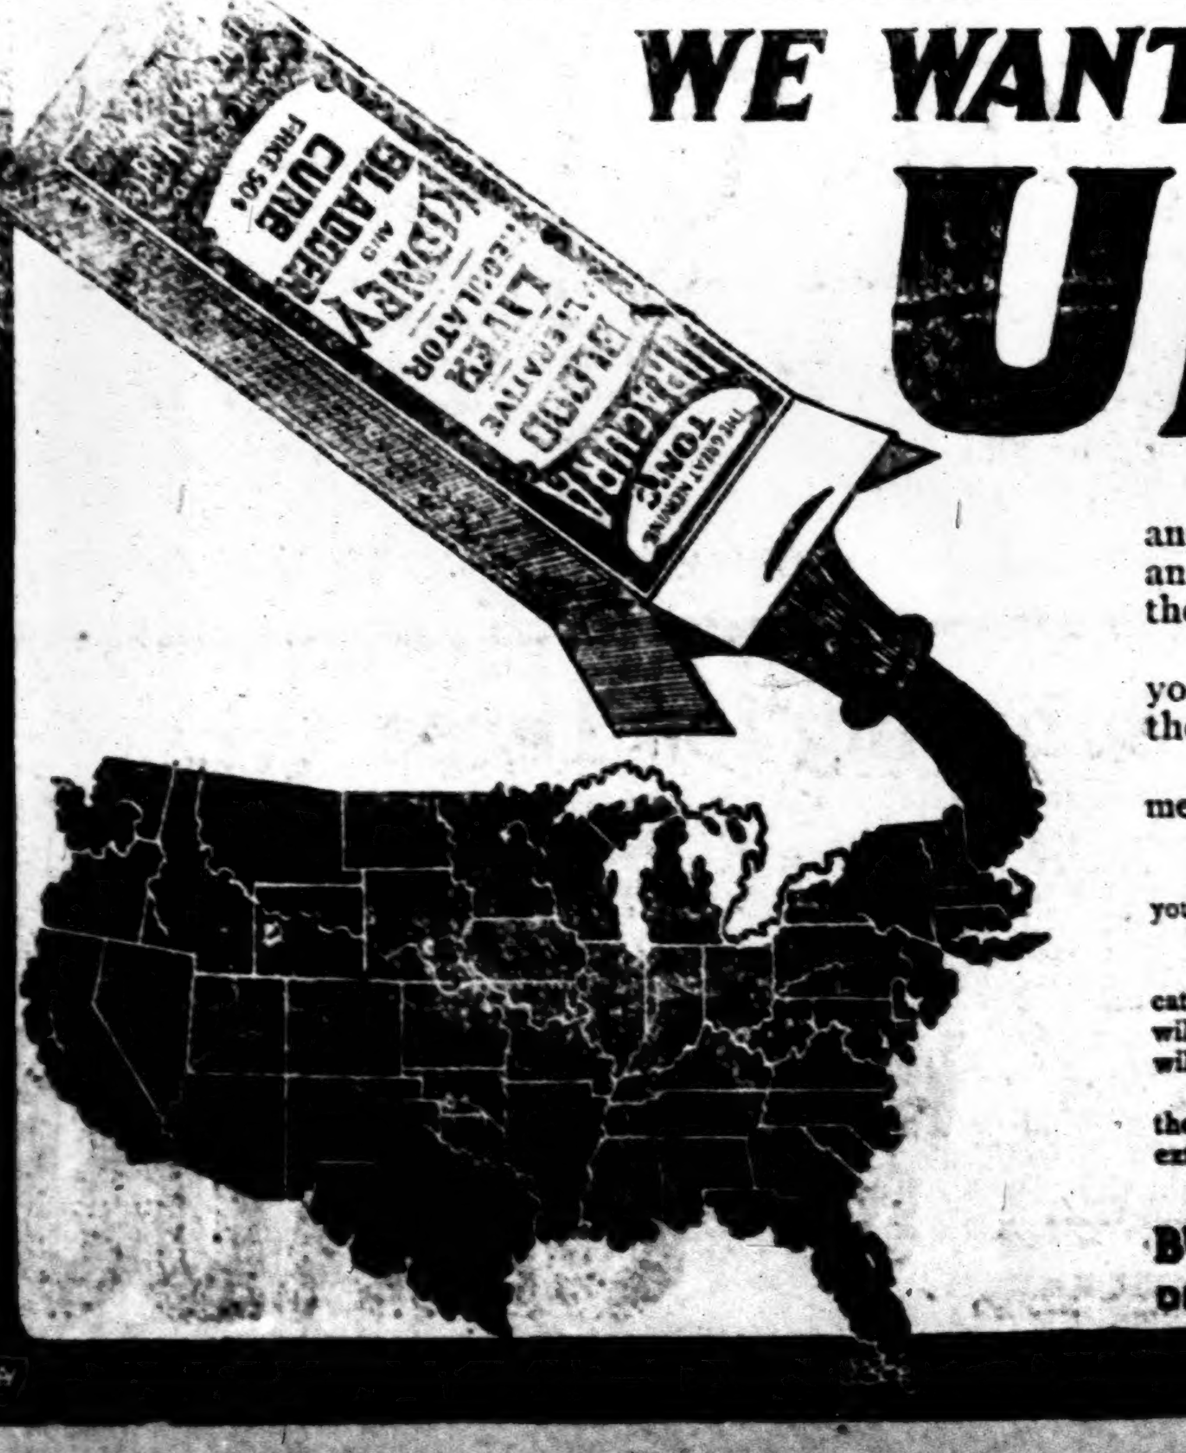
WE WANT TO COVER THE COUNTRY WITH

URACURA



Fifty-two per cent of the people in the United States have Liver, Kidney or Bladder disease in one form or another. We want every sufferer in this broad land to know about URACURA and to be brought back to life and health through it's use. We can't find words strong enough to express our faith in URACURA or to convey the earnestness of our desire for the afflicted to enter onto a new and hopeful existence by taking this great medicine.

If we could only sit down in person before you and explain what URACURA is—if we could introduce you to the thousands who have been saved to their friends by this remedy—if you could just hear from their lips the words of praise they bestow on it you too would be as confident and sure as we are.

We know that with URACURA we have solved the problem of Liver, Kidney and Bladder health and we want our message of hope to go forth and be read from ocean to ocean.

Do you suffer with Backache, high-colored urine, shortness of breath, swelling of hands and feet, puffs under the eyes, loss of appetite, fever, sleeplessness, vertigo, constipation, sallow complexion, coated tongue, depression, headache, nervousness? Then you have in a more or less acute form Liver, Kidney or Bladder trouble—you can't go back of the symptoms—but if you would be doubly sure, apply

The unfailing test. Take several doses of URACURA—if you find then that the urine is of a very dark or reddish color with a strong odor of the medicine you can know that your kidneys or bladder are affected. But hope—the very thing that indicates the trouble is also a sign that the medicine has commenced it's good work. After two are three days you will notice that the urine is clear, you will feel less pain about the kidneys and your backache will leave. The nervousness will disappear, your complexion will improve and in every way you will feel stronger and better.

URACURA is a Nervine Tonic, Blood Alterative, Liver Regulator and Kidney and Bladder Cure. It restores strength, renews vitality, purifies the blood, relieves biliousness and constipation and produces a healthy appetite and sound digestion. A purely vegetable compound or concentrated extract prepared from those roots and herbs that years of experience have proved to be the only sure remedies for these troubles known to science.

Editor Banner—I am in receipt of a letter postmarked at Clanton, Ala., to which the writer failed to affix their signature. As the letter was evidently written by a friend and its contents of an interesting nature, I am very anxious to answer it. Therefore would thank the Banner man if he can find the writer and request them to come again over their signature and a prompt answer will be forthcoming. Success till I see you.

Jemison, March 20, 1906.

Editor Banner: The announcement of Capt. Jos. J. Hawthorn of Thorsby for the legislature has no doubt, caused a deal of political gossip throughout the county, and as we have heard several who have not as yet met him, inquiring about him we take this method of answering their inquiries.

Capt. Hawthorn was born at Camden, Wilcox county, Jan. 26, 1840. His boyhood days were spent on the farm. When the civil war broke out he was one of the stalwart sons of Alabama who loved the "Bonnie blue flag" and rushed to the front to defend it. The first year of the war he was body guard to Gen. Braxton Bragg and the remainder of the time he was color bearer of the 3rd Alabama cavelry under Gen. Joseph Wheeler. He has a most brilliant military record.

In 1892 Capt. Hawthorn was elected Sheriff of Wilcox county. While Sheriff he organized the Sheriff's association of Alabama, and was its first President. Two years ago he came to Chilton county and made Thorsby his home During his residence here he has made many friends, who appreciate his work as a citizen.

Capt. Hawthorn was earnestly requested by the mayor of Thorsby and other prominent citizens, to run for the legislature. I'm going to vote for him because he's an honest man, because he's a veteran of the civil war, old and hoary headed, who deserves my support. If you want the Democrats to have a strong candidate, an honest man and a worthy representative vote for Capt. Hawthorn. Citizen.

Clanton, March 26. 1906

Editor Banner—As I have been a patron of the Banner all through its time, I ask for a few lines. We are to have an election in November and a representative and a senator are to be elected. Will the people support F. A. Gulledge? He knows the wants of the county. How can anyone fail to support him. There is Peyton Dennis, who is a Christian gentleman, and would serve the people well. Tom Crumpton would serve the people well, and Dr. Parnell, the same; and last, but not least, Mr. Perry of Stanton, who has served the people of Perry county, and has some experience. The time is ripe for the Democrats to show themselves. "Just a Voter" says we are dead, I don't know who he is, why don't he sign his name? Judge Reynolds is brave and signs his name. W. A. Collier and Tip Mullins are my choice for the senatorial honors. John Milford.

Editor Banner—Will you kindly allow me space in your valuable paper to say a few words in regard to the closing exercises of Miss Zella Mims' school at Concord church on the 16th inst. The spelling match and the recitations and short speeches and songs rendered by her pupils were appropriate and nice, and were conclusive evidence of the competent and faithful work of Miss Zella's first efforts in a school room as teacher. The children seemed to love her and the patrons expressed themselves as being well pleased with her work. A goodly number of spectators were present and seemed to enjoy the closing exercises notwithstanding the weather being a little chilly. Success to the Banner and its many readers Spectator.

Highland.

Editor Banner—Will you please allow me space in your paper to express my gratitude and deep regard for the people of Highland? I have taught four schools for these people, and their appreciation of my services seemed to increase instead of decrease, throughout the entire terms that I labored for and with them, the last term, which has just closed, was the most memorable of all that preceded it. The evidences manifested in the closing scenes of my last term by both patrons and children were so forcible and impressive that time cannot efface them from my tablet of memory. I leave them, but I love them, and I have full assurance that I am beloved by them. A more noble minded, appreciative and hospitable people, as I have reason to believe, cannot be found within the limits of Chilton county. The students, for the most part, were kind, obliging, obedient and studious. They seem to make every effort to repay me for my untiring services in their behalf. I endeavored to instill into their minds good morals as well as love of knowledge. My earnest desire is, as I leave them, they may grow up to be useful, intelligent and honorable citizens of the county in which they live.

Yes, patrons, children and friends, my labors among you are now closed and we must say good bye. But if we meet on earth no more, let us live so that we may meet in the far beyond where parting ne'er can come. I feel that I cannot conscientiously close this writing without making special mention of Mr. Frank Culpepper and family and also Mr. Wiley Foshee, for their generous hospitality and untiring efforts in administering to my comfort and happiness during my entire labors as teacher for four successive terms. May God reward them for their kindness toward me and crown the efforts of the entire community with success and prosperity.

GOOD WORK OF A REPORTER.

Worked in Chicago Slaughter House and Then Prints Some of the Things He Saw.

Berlin.—An article in the Deutsche Tageblatt will undoubtedly greatly diminish, if not entirely destroy, the sale of American meat and packing house products in Germany.

A reporter connected with the paper has, it seems, been for months in one of the largest slaughter houses in Chicago, disguised as a common laborer, and the things he has seen are of the most revolting nature.

The Tageblatt declares that one must necessarily lose all respect for the people of the United States who have been told of what is going on in the packing houses, who know the stories that tainted meats killed thousand of their sons during the Spanish-American war, and who, nevertheless, allow the Armours and their associates to continue the shameful and criminal business.

The paper advises any one who wants to know what is happening in the packing houses to read the "Jungle," a book which recently appeared in the United States, and which contains a terrible, but by no means exaggerated, description of the crimes of these particular dollar-mad millionaires. The German government, the paper concludes, would not be doing its duty toward its subjects if it did not take measures to prevent a pound of American packing house products from being sold in Germany.

Rats Worth $1 Each.

Cairo.—A war that is hardly ever heard of has been going on for several years in that little known corner of Western Asia, known as the Yemen. The sultan's troops are waging an unending struggle with the Arabian rebels.

Sanaa, the capital, has suffered more than one siege, and the last one dragged on for five months. The wretched inhabitants died by hundreds of starvation, while rats sold at a dollar each and were their last resource for food.

At the end of the siege the Turkish general humanely relieved the sufferers and sent them to the coast. A ship load of refugees arrived in Suez, and 160 corpses were landed, the remaining 500 crawling ashore more dead than alive.

Turning Loose Cotton.

Huntsville, Ala.—The little boost in cotton during the past few days is causing the farmers of this county to turn loose a good quantity of their cotton. Several hundred bales were sold here at a price averaging 11 cents, the best price paid here in a month. It is the opinion of several cotton men here that the price of cotton will go to 12 1-2 cents by the first or middle of May.

Two Candidates Announce.

Union Springs, Ala.—N. B. Powell and S. Price Rainer have announced as candidates for the legislature. This makes three in the race now.

Thomas Baird Dead.

Tuscaloosa, Ala.—Thomas Baird, aged 64 years, a well-known citizen and ex-Confederate soldier, died at his home at Holt. He leaves a large family.

Can Borrow Money.

Montgomery, Ala.—As a result of a visit to Montgomery Charles A. Stillman, the receiver recently appointed by the United States court for the bankrupt Lookout Mountain Iron Company, and E. H. Cabiniss, both of Birmingham, an order has been issued by Judge Thomas G. Jones granting to the receiver the right to pay off all labor employed by the company and to borrow money on receivers' certificates to the extent of $15,000.

Want Alabama at the Shoot.

Montgomery, Ala.—J. W. Ewing, of the national inspection department of the national guard, has been conferring with local military men with regard to having Alabama represented at the Seagirt, N. J., military shoot this year. It is said that the state will have sufficient funds to send a team in the event of the passage of the bill pending to increase the national guard appropriation.

Pat Brooks Killed.

Anniston, Ala.—News has reached here of the death of Pat Brooks, a well-known young farmer residing near Delta, who was shot by a farmer named Thrash. Death resulted several days after the wounds were inflicted. The dispute is said to have started over a shooting tournament.

In the thirty-three years ending with 1900 England lost from the wearing away of its coasts 41,378 acres, estimated in the report of the surveys to have a value of $5,000,000. As the gain from new land deposited has been deducted, the total denudation was considerably greater.

GENERAL STATE NEWS.

Current News Garnered as It Falls From the Plant of Report.

Chairman Nations Talks.

Birmingham, Ala.—W. T. Nations, of Cordova, chairman of the Farmers' Co-Operative and Protective Association of Alabama, declares that the farmers of the south are in better condition today than they have been in the world's history. I am firmly of the opinion that the farmer has more money in the bank today and is in better circumstances than he has ever been before. Our association is completing a plan with the warehouses whereby we can store our cotton and get negotiable receipts, which will answer the purpose of money until cotton reaches the point that will justify the planter to sell. The past few years that have been so rich in opportunities for the planters have enabled them to get enough money ahead to authorize them to make a fight for the real valuation of the fleecy staple.

"I believe firmly that cotton will return to 12 cents and that every one who has not sold last year's crop will have the privilege of disposing of the product at that price.

"Our organization is less than a year old, but we have a membership in this state of over 40,000."

Warehouse Collapses.

Montgomery, Ala.—Overloaded by the weight of more than 300 tons of cotton seed hulls, stored in its second floor, the immense warehouse of the National Cotton Oil Company, near Bell street and First avenue, collopsed Friday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock causing a loss of several thousand dollars' worth of property and seriously endangering the lives of seventy-five men. With the crash and the sound of rending timbers, the sides of the building caved outward, the upper floor sank to the top of the sacks piled on the floor beneath, and the loose hulls, bursting through the broken sides of the structure, spread like a flood, several feet deep, over the ground. Boards and pieces of timbers were sent flying through the air, while the clouds of dust that arose completely blinded those seeking to escape from the vicinity of the falling walls. It was not until several minutes had elapsed, when the dust had cleared away, that it was ascertained none of those working near the building had been caught in the debris.

Verdict Set Aside.

Birmingham, Ala.—The verdict for $15,000 rendered by a jury in the circuit court in favor of Mrs. Laura C. Enslen against the Birmingham Railway, Light and Power Company was set aside by Judge Alston. A new trial was ordered.

Attorneys for Mrs. Enslen took exceptions to Judge Alston's order and the court allowed sixty days for presenting their bill of exceptions.

There were forty-five reason given in the written motion of the railway's attorneys for a new trial. Argument took up the entire morning in the circuit court.

The Enslen case, by the decision of Judge Alston, will once more be threshed out before a jury. It is a damage suit for the death of Charles F. Enslen, and has been before three juries, one of which never had the opportunity of making up a verdict.

Late Primary Is Probable.

Gadsden, Ala.—Dr. R. F. McConnell, chairman of the Etowah county democratic executive committee, has called a meeting of that body for Saturday, March 31, at the court house in this city, for the purpose of arranging a date for the county primary to select candidates for the various county offices. The senatorial committee will also meet on that date and select a candidate for the senate. A majority of the committeemen are in favor of a late primary, and it will probably be ordered for the second week in August as this gives the young men who have not become of age to register in July and vote in the primary.

Huntsville, Ala.—The frost has killed a large per cent of the peach crop of North Alabama, particularly the later peaches, which invariably bloom first. The extent of the damage is not yet known, but it is expected to be considerable.

Connors Guilty of Murder.

Luverne, Ala.—Jesse Connors has been convicted of the murder of Clem Mount and has been sentenced to life imprisonment. The original difficulty arose between the two men over a dispute about some cotton, and Connors was alleged to have stabbed his man to death after making numerous threats. The jury consumed but little more than an hour in making up its verdict.

Winners in Lamar.

Sulligent, Ala.—The democratic primary resulted in the nomination of Capt. C. W. White, of Millport, for representative and John Thomas Hill for sheriff. There were several candidates for each office, and the majorities of the successful candidates are quite small, a very light vote being polled.

COMER AT ANNISTON.

Says He Don't Want Any Railroad Lawyers in the Legislature.

Anniston, Ala.—B. B. Comer, of Jefferson, spoke here Saturday morning to an audience of about 200, the court house being comforably filled. Capt. A. W. Bell, chairman of the Comer-Cooper campaign, presided and introduced the speaker, a former resident of Anniston.

Mr. Comer spoke for two hours in his usual manner, protesting against the election of railroad attorneys to the legislature, saying, "If you expect to vote for me for governor and for a railroad attorney for your representative, I don't want your vote." His remarks were principally to the farmers, although less than one-third the audience were farmers. His daughter and friends occupied seats in the gallery and sat through the speech.

Mr. Henderson, of Troy, spoke at the conclusion of Mr. Comer's speech.

Plans for Primary in Birmingham.

Birmingham, Ala.—The democratic county executive committee met Saturday and perfected plans for the primary election to be held August 27 next. At this election, besides voting for governor, lieutenant-governor, auditor, railroad commissioner, etc., a number of county offices are to be filled here, including the position of sheriff, for which there are fourteen announced and able candidates. There will doubtless be a struggle for both houses of the legislature, and over a dozen prominent names are before the people for the seven seats in the house of representatives. The name of W. M. Drennen, ex-mayor of Birmingham, s most prominently mentioned for the state senate. C. P. Beddowfi a well-known "damage suit" lawyer, is the only announced candidate. William M. Walker, counsel for the Frisco system, is also named as a probable entry in the race.

Will Deport Man to Austria.

Birmingham, Ala.—The first local case on record in which a foreigner, not a Chinaman, has been deported will be that of Oswald Kartus, who is to go from here to far Austria in the next few days. Kartus was arrested some time ago on a charge of larceny, having taken a suit case from the union station. His demeanor in jail was most singular, and he speedily showed signs of insanity. One of his manias was that he was "king of North and South America." He has just been sentenced to the insane asylum by the probate judge of Jefferson county. In view of the fact that he landed in this country from Austria less than two years ago he will be sent back. The Austrian consul at New York has been in conference with local attorneys in regard to the matter.

Drane Is Pardoned.

Montgomery, Ala.—Linton Drane, a youth of Lee county, who was unjustly convicted of rape and sentenced to fifteen years' imprisonment, after serving four years, has been able to prove his innocence and has been pardoned unconditionally by Governor Jelks on recommendation of the state board of pardons.

Drane' story is intensely pathetic. The boy was the victim of the scheme of a bad woman. She perjured herself and secured corroboration through an equally unscrupulously female. The young boy, 18 years old, was sent up for fifteen years. After he had lived as a convict for four years it became known that the women on whose testimony he went to prison are unworthy of belief.

Drowned in Raging River.

Scottsboro, Ala.—While attempting to ford Paint Rock river near Trenton Friday Ollie Robinson, son of Paul Robinson, of Trenton, was drowned, also one of the horses that he was driving. Mr. Hinshaw, a brother-in-law of Mr. Robinson, came near being drowned at the same time, but fortunately was saved.

Mrs. Robinson, wife of the drowned man, was standing on the opposite bank of the river and was an eye-witness to the tragedy and could not render any assistance while her husband was swept under the rushing waters of the mad stream.

Wild Animal Scare.

Florence, Ala.—Much excitement exists in the hills four miles above South Florence over the appearance of two wild animals of a species which none who have seen them can determine. The animals are said to be as large as leopards and of a grayish color.

Minister's Wife Commits Suicide.

Gadsden, Ala.—Mrs. Asbury Sims, the wife of a prominent Baptist minister at Lay, Ala., committed suicide Saturday morning by cutting her throat with a razor. The family is one of the most prominent in this section. It is reported that Mrs. Sims brooded over a disgrace that had been brought to a member of her family until she became insane.

SEVEN MASSACRED

Family Ambushed and Murdered in Mountain Pass.

NONE ALLOWED TO ESCAPE.

Prominent Mexican, With Wife and Three Daughters, and Two Americans, Shot to Death.

San Francisco, Cal.—A dispatch to the Chronicle from Los Angeles says:

The news has reached this city of the murder of five members of the family of Pedro Meza, presidente of Ladura, in Sonora, Mexico, and brother-in-law of Frederick Hartman, president of the William Hoege Company, of Los Angeles, who were massacred by Indians within a few miles of their home and their bodies left in the roadway between Ortis and Ladura until a sufficient number of Mexican troops could be sent to overawe the raiding outlaws and bring in their victims.

Three members of the Meza family survive. They are the baby son of Pedro Meza and two young daughters, Mercedes and Elvira. The children had been left at home in Ladura when the rest of the family drove in carriages to Guayamas for the purpose of consulting a physician about Senorita Eloisa, who had been ailing, and at the same time enable other members of the family to do some shopping and visit friends.

Returning from Guayamas the party stopped at Ortiz, and it is supposed they were joined there by Mrs. Hoff and her son. Here, it is said, they learned of the presence of a band of Yaquomins in the Los Otates mountains near Otates Pass, through which they would have to travel to reach Ladura and the mining camp, where F. A. Hartman owns large interests in silver and copper properties. The worst of the gorge was passed and they had entered the wider valley when from every ledge and mountain of debris came the crack of rifles. The men charged desperately up the slopes, calling down upon their heads a rain of lead to divert the fire from those they would be bound to protect. In this way they fell with their faces to the unseen foe. The last desperate stand of the survivors was made in the shelter of the overturned carriage, and they fought back, dying, but still fighting to the last, knowing that there was no mercy for them.

The story of the massacre was brought to Ortiz by an Indian letter carrier, who shortly afterwards went through the pass on his trip with the mail and who identified the bodies of those killed.

One Man Killed—Another Hurt.

Mangum, Okla.—At the home of William Roswell, a farmer near Kelley, Robert Vinson, of Bradford, Ark., aged 70 years, who shot and killed and Roswell was shot and mortally wounded. Robert Regan, of Bradford, who with Vinson and the latter's daughter Katherine, were traveling overland and had stopped at the Roswell house for the night, were placed under arrest.

Miss Vinson says that her father and Regan quarreled during the night, Vincent objecting to Regan's attention to his daughter and that Roswell was shot when he tried to interfere.

American Church Takes Charge.

New York.—According to an announcement made here a concordal has just been signed transferring the Church of England work in the canal zone on the Isthmus of Panama to the Protestant Episcopal Church in the United States. The signers of the concordal were the bishop of Honduras, the Right Rev. Dr. G. A. Ormsby; the archbishop of Jamaica, the Most Rev. Dr. Enos Nuttall, and the presiding bishop of the church in America, the Right Rev. Daniel S. Tuttle, of Missouri.

Columbus, O.—Reports from the executive mansion Saturday say that Governor Pattison passed a comparatively comfortable night.

St. Paul, Minn.—First started in the roof of Magee's Hotel, a four-story building, Saturday. The guests were aroused by bell boys and fled from the building, clad only in their night attire. Firemen soon had the fire under control. So far as known no one was injured.

Farmer Kills Himself.

Shreveport, La.—Gregg Surenatt, a farmer of London, Tex., late Thursday night, after an unsuccessful attempt to kill his 15-year-old wife and her mother, shot and killed himself. Surenatt and his wife had been married but three months and had separated.

Seven Killed at Railroad Crossing.

Sunbury, Pa.—Seven persons, representing three generations of one family, were killed on the Philadelphia and Reading railroad at Hass Crossing. The wagon containing the seven persons had crossed the Pennsylvania railroad tracks and had just reached the Reading tracks, when an express train dashed into the vehicle.

Noose Ready for Brutal Murderer.

Chicago.—Richard Ivens, charged with the murder of Mrs. Bessie Hollister, was Saturday sentenced to hang. The murder of Mrs. Hollister occurred on the evening of January 12 last. It was one of the most atrocious and revolting in Chicago's history.

Mrs. Hollister, the young wife of a prosperous business man, left her home on the day of the murder to sing at the funeral of a friend. Her body was found the following morning near a carpenter shop owned by Ivens' father by Richard Ivens. Young Ivens reported the discovery of the body to his father, and the latter reported to the police.

The same day Richard Ivens confessed to the police that he had committed the crime. In his confession he said he had dragged the woman into the alley, assaulted her and added murder to his crime by strangling her to death with a copper wire.

In court Ivens declared that his mind was a blank concerning the crime.

No Agreement.

Indianapolis, Ind.—After being in joint conference through committees since Tuesday afternoon the coal operators and miners of the central competitive district, consisting of Illinois, Indiana, Ohio and Western Pennsylvania, and those of the Southwestern district, composed of Missouri, Kansas, Texas, Arkansas and Indian Territory, are no nearer upon a wage scale to go into effect in one week than they were when the former joint conference adjourned in disagreement on February 2.

The present wage scale expires next Saturday, and unless an agreement is reached between the operators and miners before that time 225,000 union bituminous minners will be called from the mines in the states named.

Attempt to Shoot Judge Gordon.

Philadelphia, Pa.—For a purpose not yet clear John J. McCafferty, a machinist, fired two shots from a revolver through the parlor window of the residence of former Judge James Gay Gordon, private counsel to Mayor Weaver. McCafferty was arrested after a chase of about seven blocks and locked up. Judge Gordon was not at home at the time, but other members of the family were in the house. The first bullet lodged in the parlor ceiling directly beneath the parlor wall. McCafferty showed fight when arrested, and still held the revolver, which contained three unexploded cartridges.

Spectacular Fire in Pottery Factory.

New York.—Fire which started in the four-story pottery factory of the J. H. Gintler Company at Green and Essex streets, Jersey City, destroyed the plant and furnished the most spectacular blaze seen along the river front since the conflagration at the North German-Lloyd dock several years ago. The loss is estimated at $20,0000; insurance unknown.

Father and Son Kill Wealthy Farmer.

Winthrop, Mo.—James M. Sego, a wealthy farmer, was shot and instantly killed on Main street by John R. Crook and his son, 17 years of age. Father and son emptied their revolvers into Sego's body. The elder Crook was placed in jail at St. Joseph, Mo., but the son escaped into Kansas. The trouble grew out of the courtship of Orsie Sego, 17 years of age, a student at Atchison, Kan., and Beulah Crook, 15 years of age, which was objected to by Sego.

Took Out Policies Fictitiously.

Parkersburg, W. Va.—S. G. Duckworth, who was a substitute agent of the Equitable Life Assurance Society, was arrested here and charged with taking out policies under fictitious names, forging death certificates and collecting the amount of the policies. He is held under one charge, but is said to have collected a dozen or more policies aggregating many thousands of dollars.

Nicaraguan Marries American Girl.

Washington, D. C.—Alphonso Zelaya, the 21-year-old son of the president of the republic of Nicaragua, was married to Miss Marguerite Baker, daughter of Dr. W. W. Baker, of this city. The marriage took place at the home of the bride's parents.

Fire in Ice Cream Factory.

New York.—Fire starting in the factory of the New Jersey Ice Cream Company spread to the Warehouse of Samuel Seuhr & Sons, completely gutting both buildigns. Loss, $100,000.

Pontotoc Cace Up Again.

Jackson, Miss.—The railroad commission cites the officials of the Mobile, Jackson and Kansas City railroad to appear here April 4 and show cause why they should not operate trains into Pontotoc.

Beaumont, Tex.—B. Overton, aged 25, was shot and killed at the Beaumont rice mill by A. Mold, night watchman, aged 60. Mold alleges that Overton had grossly insulted him, had then gone to his room in the mill and procured a revolver. When Overton reappeared with his pistol Mold opened fire, hitting Overton three times. Overton's home was in Virginia.

The Rose Bush

A child sleeps under the rose bush fair;
The bud swells out in the soft May air;
Sweetly it rests, and on dream wings flies
To play with the angels in Paradise.
And the years glide by.

A maiden stands by the rose bush fair;
The dewy blossoms perfume the air;
She presses her hand to her throbbing breast
With love's first wonderful rapture blest.
And the years glide by.

A mother kneels by the rose bush fair;
Soft sigh the leaves in the autumn air;
Sorrowing thoughts of the past arise,
And tears of anguish bedim her eyes.
And the years glide by.

Naked and lone stands the rose bush fair;
Whirled are its leaves on the wintry air;
Withered and dead they fall to the ground,
And silently cover a new-made mound.
And the years glide by.

A SEA FEUD

BY J. C. PLUMMER

(Copyright, 1906, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

"Let him go. To hades with his min' knife. Let the dago loose," Tom Bradd struggled to free him-from the grasp of two brawny lors who held him. Mr. Buck, the sinewy mate, had his arms inlaced about Nicola's waist utterly mindful of the cruel looking stiletto king in the powerful Italian's hand. was the setting of a tragedy, an errupted one it's true, but like flesh eatly chafed the blood was so near surface that another touch and would begin to flow.

Captain Newton advanced to the in hatch, his long, patriarchal beard ling to his waistband. His shaven per lip twisted as he talked very e unto that of a dog when he ris.

"Stop it, gall darn ye, stop it," he ndered. "I'm short handed now,
I won't have any man killing on here hooker. Batten down your ills, you two fellers, till you get to Grande and then you can chop h other into bits and devil take at's left, but there's to be no
ppin' on the Apollo."

His words were unheeded and the bloodthirsty men still struggled get at each other.

"Now mark you," continued the cap-n, "if you're bound to fight, make twoman killing of it, for, by the rd, I'll throw the man that's left re over with the man that's killed."

I shall never forget that scene:
ife incarnate threatened on that le chip of wood on the mighty ocean all around utter peace. The sea barely rippled by the soft trade d which distended the sails as if ssing them and above a sky unmished by the tiniest cloud. I was to the sea and its ways and mar-led that Captain Newton did not the men and confine them in peak, but he seemed to feel a idence in his management which proved of weight by the result, his cold-blooded declaration had effect on the two would-be com-ants of a bucket of cold water on fighting dogs. The skipper meant at he said and would carry out his ning to the letter. The law in e days was all in favor of the ers and Jack's statement was as ather against an anchor. Captain wton would not hesitate to carry his threat for fear of legal punish-nt.

The two sailors released Bradd, who mmenced the work he had stopped fight Nicola, and the Italian, find-himself free from the mate's hold, lked dignifiedly forward and went
w. The crisis had been passed, porarily at least.

What began the feud between the no one knew. It existed when y shipped in New York and they spat hate at each other during the age, but this was the first time actual collision had been threat-d.

It's only put off," remarked old
, oracularly: "blood'll fly yet."

If Tom ever gets past the dago's
, good-by Italian," said a sailor.

But he's got to get by it," retorted
, "and it's ten to one he'll have a in him before he does."

"Let the dago loose!"

Bradd was a stockily built man and od sailor. While he impressed as a good-natured man, one could that he would make an ugly foe aroused. O'Neill very graphical-expressed the crew's sentiment as Bradd. "Tom's a good fellow to on the yard arm wid ye in a and a bad one to have agin ye in ght."

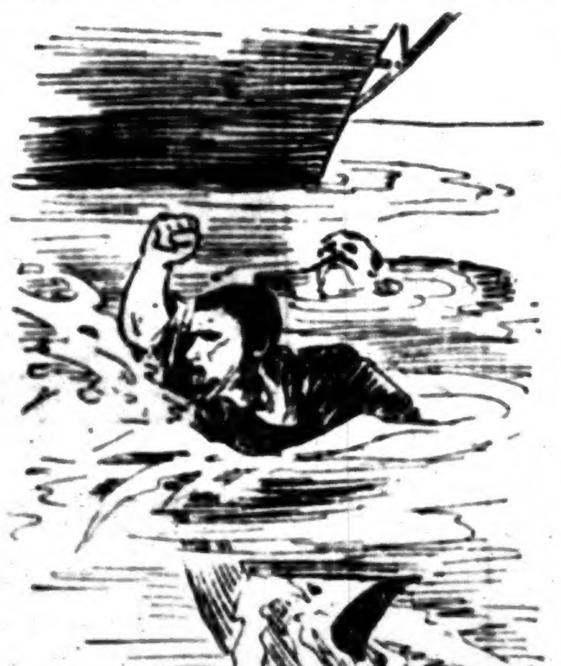
It's an uncomfortable thing to have enemy on shipboard. On land one avoid him, but aboard ship one eats, sleeps and works with him day after day and may feel the knife slipping into his ribs some dark night. But Bradd treated Nicola with contempt and made no effort to keep out of his way night or day, despite the crew's warnings.

There were several days of bright sunshine, calm sea and cloudless sky, and on one of these mornings the mate was watching the washing down of the deck from the break of the poop. The holystoning finished, he ordered Nicola to some duty on the fore-topgallant yard. The Italian looped a line about his neck and gripping a marline spike in his teeth climbed the weather rigging. Just as he swung himself over the top he lost his hold and fell like a plummet into the sea.



Seemed seized with convulsions.

"Man overboard," yelled O'Neill, who was at the wheel, and he flung a life buoy over the rail.

The skipper was on deck in one jump.

"Heave her to," he shouted.

"Braces," came sharp and curt from the mate, and the men hurried to obey, casting glances aft.

The brig was making good headway. The wind was fair and Captain Newton was making all the use he could of it, having out studding sails and bringing her to the wind with all this canvas flying took time. Two men started to lower the boat, but it was full of wood and that took time. I glanced over the taffrail, and saw no trace of Nicola.

"He's a goner," exclaimed Mr. Buck.

"No, there he is," said sharp-eyed O'Neill, pointing over the lee quarter, and there, sure enough, was a black speck, the head of Nicola. He was swimming but slowly and laboriously.

The brig had been brought to and the boat unloaded, when a cry came from the poop.

"Hi, hi! Shark, see him!"

Abeam was the triangular fin of a shark cutting the water as it made a straight course for Nicola.

"It's all up," muttered the mate; "nothing can save him now."

There was a splash, and to our astonishment Bradd had leaped overboard and was swimming fiercely. He lay a course which must bring him between the shark and Nicola.

"Gall darn it!" snarled the captain; "two men instead of one gone, and who'd have thought of Bradd going over the rail for the dago."

I never saw a man swim as did Bradd. He seemed to grasp the water and pull himself along, but when our eyes fell on that ominous fleeting fin we felt it was merely the sacrifice of one man's life to save another's. Having laid a right angled course Bradd gained on the shark, which was swimming in a straight line for the Italian and was a cable's length ahead of the fish when he reached a line with the slowly swimming Nicola and then he seemed seized with convulsions. He splashed the water with his hands and legs, reminding one of the actions of a duck which has reached a pond after a long, dry land journey. His motions were so violent that the sea frothed about him, and the shark was evidently as surprised at these evolutions as was the crew of the Apollo. Obviously they were not to his taste, for he darted off in an opposite direction. By this time the boat had been lowered and in a half hour both men were aboard the brig.

"I didn't think you were that big a fool to risk your life for a dago who's hungry to put a knife in you," remarked Ned, reproachfully.

"Risk!" exclaimed Bradd; "there wasn't any. If you'd been in the In-[illegible] ocean you'd know the shark is the biggest coward that swims and any man can scare 'em off who makes a big splutter in the water, and then I hate the bloody things and I'll balk 'em of a meal any day."

Not a word had Nicola spoken to any one since he had been brought on board, but now he came out of the forecastle and approached Bradd. He held out to him the stiletto with the hilt towards his enemy. I never saw such a grand gesture of utter surrender as that. If the Italian had filled the air with an eloquent speech it could not have been half as impressive. Rough as was Bradd, old beachcomber of twenty years, he appreciated it.

"Keep your bloomin' knife," he said, and the broad, freckled face broke into a smile.

In that most monotonous and very dirty Brazilian town, Rio Grande do Sul, two very drunken men walked arm and arm down towards the quay. One sang a coster song in a deep bass and the other in a screechy tenor a barcarole. They were Bradd and Nicola, and the sea feud was at an end.

SHIPPED THE GENUINE ARTICLE.

South Carolinian Had Got Whisky Intended for Dispensary.

When a South Carolinian wants good whisky he does not as a rule buy it from the South Carolina State Dispensary, but orders it direct from the distillery, the whisky being delivered to him by express in what is termed in the State "four full quarts." A week or two before Christmas a well-known man in the central part of the State ordered "four full quarts," and on its receipt was surprised to find out that it was not as good whisky as he had been getting.

Accordingly the man most concerned wrote a letter to the distillery, telling them that a mistake had undoubtedly been made. A few days later he received the following self-explanatory letter:

"Dear Sir:—Yours of the sixteenth instant to hand, and we hasten to apologize for an error of one of our shipping clerks. The clerk in question expressed to you four full quarts of the brand you ordered intended for the South Carolina Dispensary. By express to-day we send you four full quarts of the genuine article. Again craving your pardon for the error and soliciting your further favors, we beg to remain,

"Yours very respectfully,
"————."

Artistic Girl.

She lives in a big old house on the edge of the city.

The other day her mother was showing a visitor through the house.

"This is Jeannie's room," said she, as she pushed open the door to a big many-windowed apartment, looking out on fine old trees.

The visitor opened her mouth with a little gasp. The floor of Jeannie's room was carpeted with dead leaves!

"Just one of Jeannie's fads," explained her mother. "She keeps the windows open so the leaves will blow in. She won't have them swept up. She says it makes her feel as if she were out in the woods."

And Jeannie's mother and the visitor rustled around Jeannie's artistic room, swishing as noisily through the dead leaves as if they were wandering through a November forest.—Philadelphia Bulletin.

Some French "Bulls."

Some amusing instances of French "bulls" are given by "T. P." The following sign is said to have been observed on a Paris shop:

"Fabricant des Meubles Anciens," and not far from it, on the same street, the sign:

"Reparation des Bebes Incassables."

The following verbal "bull" is credited to a Frenchman who, while promenading with a friend, noticed a passing cab drawn by a pair of horses, one black and the other white.

"Look," said one, "you don't often see a pure white horse and a pure black one harnessed together."

"That's so," was the response. "Do you know why the black horse is on the near side?"

"No."

"Why, they always put the horse that isn't the same color as the other on the near side."—Harper's Weekly.

Cupid Unveiled.

The spell of romance oft subsides,
Goes out from me like ebbing tides,
Leaving the judgment hard and firm,
Like sand and shingle, for a term;
And then with vision clear I see That Cupid is Propinquity!

There's no affinity will draw
A mile two folks who never saw
Each other! Subtle influence
That works, Marconi-like, intense
Through wondrous spaces, them between.
Say, tell that tale to a marine!

Of all the archers ever known
Dan Cupid less of skill has shown!
His little arrows can not go,
At most, beyond some yards or so!
He's no long-distance artist, he!
He's but the God Propinquity!

But take a maiden, tender-eyed,
And man, and place 'em side by side,
Bring on a beach, a moon, a sea,
Or nothing more than a settee,
(We must concede realities!)
Propinquity will do the "biz!"

—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Not Mistaken.

The story is told of a college professor who was noted for his concentration of mind.

The professor was returning home one night from a scientific meeting, still pondering over the subject. He had reached his room in safety, when he heard a noise.

"Is some one there?" he asked.

"No, professor," answered the intruder under the bed, who knew of the professor's peculiarities.

"That's strange! I was positive some one was under my bed," commented the learned man.

JENNY LIND'S GREAT TRIUMPH.

Won Jealous Rival by Sweetness of Simple Song.

A beautiful little incident is told concerning Jenny Lind and Grisi, when they were rivals for popular favor in London. Both were invited to sing the same night at a court concert before the queen. Jenny Lind, being the younger, sang first, and was so disturbed by the fierce, scornful look of Grisi that she was at the point of failure, when suddenly an inspiration came to her. The accompanist was striking his final chords. She asked him to rise and took the vacant seat. Her fingers wandered over the keys in a loving prelude, and then she sang a little prayer which she had loved as a child. She hadn't sung it for years. As she sang she was no longer in the presence of royalty, but singing to loving friends in her fatherland.

Softly at first the plaintive notes floated on the air, swelling louder and richer every moment. The singer seemed to throw her whole soul into that weird, thrilling, plaintive "prayer." Gradually the song died away and ended in a sob. There was silence—the silence of admiring wonder. The audience sat spell-bound. Jenny Lind lifted her sweet eyes to look into the scornful face that had so disconcerted her. There was no fierce expression now; instead, a tear-drop glistened on the long, black lashes and after a moment, with the impulsiveness of a child of the tropics, Grisi crossed to Jenny Lind's side, placed her arms about her, and kissed her, utterly regardless of the audience.—Exchange.

Be Alone Sometimes.

Every person needs solitude now and then; it is a condition of real mental health and activity.

A nervous-looking woman with a bag in her hand walked up to the desk of a quiet family hotel.

"Will you let me have a room? I am Mrs. ——," mentioning a name well known in the business world.

The clerk looked amazed as she went on almost hysterically:

"I know it seems queer my wanting a room here when you know that I live in the next street, but it just seems as if I should break down if don't find a place where I can be absolutely alone and get rested for once. At my office I am at the beck and call of everyone, and when I get home at nights I have to struggle with every detail of the housekeeping and hear all the family troubles besides. I simply must be alone for a few hours. I can't stand it any longer."—Weekly Scotsman.

Told By a Stage Coach Driver.

Joseph Hobbs, whose death occurred a few months ago at Exeter, N. H., was in his younger days the driver of a stage coach between Nashua and Lawrence. He was an inveterate story-teller, and was always sure to have a large audience. The following was one he used to tell:

"When I was driving coach from Nashua to Lawrence I used to always stop over night in a small town about half-way between the two cities. One day three or four of us got a large piece of cardboard and printed on it: 'The fellow who is courting a certain married young woman had better leave town, as the husband is on to him.' And, would you believe it, in less than two hours after that sign had been posted on a tree in the village every man in town had left, except three old cripples and one man who had not read the sign."

Terms of Payment Suited.

The late J. Warren Bigelow, for many years a prominent member of the Worcester (Mass.) county board of commissioners, was fond of relating his story:

One winter day a man stood in front of a store where men's shirts were displayed. A few were hung outside, and one particularly took his fancy. Without waiting to inquire the price, he seized it and started down the street.

The owner happened to see him, and immediately gave chase. Seeing that the thief outran him, he cried out: "Well, if I don't get the pay in this world I shall in the world to come."

"Oh," called back the man with the shirt, "if you want to wait till then I'll take another shirt."

Child Knew by Instinct.

William O'Brien in his newly published "Recollections" tells this story of Dr. Coke, the archbishop of Cashel: "Once on one of his examinations of the children for confirmation the archbishop put to a little girl the question from the catechism: 'What is the preparation for matrimony?' The little one blushed and giggled and put the corner of her bib in her mouth by way of answer. The question was repeated: 'Oh, sure, your lordship knows it yourself,' was the timid reply. 'Yes, but you must tell me, my child. What is the preparation for matrimony?' 'Well, my lord, a little courting, of course!' at last came the reluctant answer from amid a rosary of blushes."

Stock on a Maine Farm.

The Hon. Solon A. Carter, state treasurer of New Hampshire, has a cottage at one of the Maine beaches where he passes the greater part of his vacation each summer. Last season a typical "down easter" furnished him with farm produce, and, wishing to be sociable, one day when the man called Col. Carter asked him how much stock he kept on his farm.

"Four cows, 'nd a bull, 'nd two oxen, 'nd a calf, 'nd a hoss, 'nd two shares of Maine Central," was the reply.

START OF FLORIDA FEUD

"Speaking about feuds," said John L. Humphries of Tampa, Fla. "I think that the strangest, in its inception, is one between two families in Marion county, in our state. It came about this way. You know in our state sometimes land disappears during the night and a man wakes up to find his garden a great sinkhole. This is, of course, due to the fact that Florida is built on coral and not very substantially built at that, especially in some of the interior counties. Harry Redding had a nice patch of Irish potatoes, and Oliver Vance, his neighbor, had what he called a farm and near the house was a sinkhole.

"One night Redding's potato patch disappeared and the next morning he had a nice large sinkhole filled with water where his garden patch was. The same night Vance, who had a sinkhole when he went to bed, woke up to find the hole was filled with dirt, in which there seemed to be a lot of pebbles about the size of a man's fist. Naturally he was surprised. He examined the pebbles to find them potatoes, and after calling the family up they got to work and gathered in six bushels of potatoes ready for market.

"That's where the trouble began. Redding claimed that under the law where a man's stock wanders on to the premises of another, without his fault, he can go after it. He argued that the same doctrine applied to potatoes which had wandering habits. For he was very sure that the potatoes on the Vance farm belonged to him. Vance and his friends invoked another principle of law that a man owns his land from heaven to hades and he refused to dig up the potatoes for the benefit of his neighbor.

"All that happened ten years ago," continued Mr Humphries, "and the Reddings and the Vances are still armed against each other. Two or three skirmishes have taken place between the parties and one of the Vance boys, 18 years old, was wounded by fire from the enemy.

"They have never spoken to each other since that eventful night ten years ago. Lawyers and politicians have gone out to help them settle their difficulties, but they were obdurate, and if the feud grows for twenty years as it has already Florida and Marion county will have a feud equal to the best that Kentucky has ever produced."—Denver Republican.

WELDED THE BROKEN RAIL

When the 8:23 limited pulled into Wheatley, in this county, one evening, it was discovered, says the Le Seur correspondent of the St. Paul Pioneer Press, that one of the rear wheels on the last coach was broken, a piece having been split off from one side so that there was a slightly flat place on the wheel, and, as it was feared, the broken wheel in pounding over the track had broken a rail. Only by a miracle was the 8:56 local saved from being wrecked.

Three miles south of Bentley the flattened wheel had broken out a section of rail about seven feet long—broken it out so badly that it was torn from the spikes and lay across the rails, where it was found five minutes before the local was due by Willy Schultz, a boy of 14 years, who lives on a farm near by. The lad knew that the local soon would be along and he was frightened. He put the piece of rail in place and then started down the track toward the approaching train, running as fast as he could. He had not gone twenty feet, however, when there came a blinding flash of lightning from a dark cloud that covered the sky, and he was struck down unconscious and nearly bereft of life.

It must have been ten minutes before he regained consciousness, for when he did so he saw the train coming toward him at great speed. He staggered to his feet, the remembrance of the broken rail still in his mind, and waved his hands, but the engine did not stop, and just as it was about to crush him, he stepped from the rails and the train sped on.

But the engineer at the last moment had seen the boy step out of the engine's way, and, throwing on the lever, stopped the train after it had run several hundred feet beyond the break in the rail.

When the engineer jumped down and came running back to see what the trouble was, young Schultz told him and showed him the place where the rail had been broken, but now it was perfectly sound. The flash of lightning that struck Schultz down spent the main portion of its force on the track in the immediate locality where the fracture was, and had evenly and perfectly welded the broken rail in place at both ends. The track was as safe and solid as it was the day it was laid.

JUST THOUGHT OF CLIENT

Dr. McBryer, who was very fond of speedy horses, had purchased a new one that had a mark of 2:10, and also possessed some very headstrong ways. Nevertheless, the doctor was proud of his new trotter, and was anxious that his friends should enjoy with him its bursts of speed. So about a week after the thoroughbred had been added to his stable he invited Judge Rodgers to take a drive with him. The judge said he felt the need of some fresh air and would go gladly. They started out of town at a lively clip. In the country the doctor gave the horse his head, and the buggy rattled over the road at a hair-raising rate of speed. The judge clinched his jaws and manfully determined not to ask the doctor to slow down, knowing that if he did so he would be accused of lacking nerve. At last, about five miles out, the doctor pulled up and turned around preparatory to starting home.

"How do you like him, judge?" asked the doctor.

"Fine! Best goer I ever saw. Great pleasure to ride behind him," declared the judge.

"Well, on the way back I'll just show you what real trotting is."

The horse covered the first mile as if it were spurting down a homestretch to win a $10,000 purse. The judge's hat was jarred off and his hair blew straight back from his head. Still he would not cry quits. Then an automobile whizzed by and the horse was frightened. With the bit in its teeth, it took immediate charge of the driving party, and neither doctor nor judge ever traveled so fast as they did behind that horse. Still, the judge, noting that the doctor merely pulled taut on the reins and occasionally chirruped soothingly to the horse, would not show any signs of alarm. They reached the edge of town, and the horse seemed to put on more speed. From side to side of the street they bounced, and then the judge leaned over to the doctor and gasped:

"Doc, if you'd just as soon, I'll get out at my office. I've just thought of a client whom I promised to see at this hour!"—Chicago Tribune.

WEIRD TALE FROM JAPAN

In a recent trial in Tokyo it was disclosed that a certain Osaburo Noguchi had killed three persons under remarkable circumstances. He was in love with Soye, the sister of a well known Japanese poet, Ichitaro Noguchi. The latter, who was afflicted with leprosy, disliked the man. To win the regard of the poet, and at the same time to protect his lady love from the disease Osaburo attempted to cure the leper. He had heard it said that human flesh would cure leprosy. Early in March, 1902, he also read in a book a statement of the same old superstition. Then he formed a determination to kill a boy in the neighborhood. On the night of March 27 he caught an 11-year-old boy, named Kawai, as the boy was going home from an errand. Clasping closely to his breast the face of the young boy he smothered and killed him. He brought the corpse into a byway and tore off a lump of flesh from the hip of the boy. He then gouged out the eyeballs; it is supposed that this was with some idea of concealing the motives of the murder.

On the following morning he bought a small cooking pot and konro (portable earthenware furnace), hired a boat and rowed out to sea. There he made soup with the flesh, and, putting it into a bottle, threw overboard all other objects. On his way home he bought a bottle of ordinary soup and served the mixture of these two soups to the poet and Soye. The mess had no effect upon the poet's leprosy.

At a little later time Osaburo married Soye. Soon, however, the brothers-in-law quarreled. After vainly seeking a reconciliation Osaburo stole into the house one day and strangled the sick man. Some time afterward Osaburo enticed a druggist into the woods, strangled him and took $175 which the man had. This crime was traced to the murderer and the investigation which followed laid bare his other crimes.

DIVINE MISSION OF SORROW

Upon my lips she laid her touch divine,
And merry speech and careless laughter died;
She fixed her melancholy eyes on mine,
And would not be denied.

I saw the west-wind lose his cloudlets white
In flocks, careering through the April sky;
I could not sing, though joy was at its height,
For she stood silent by.

I watched the lovely evening fade away;
A mist was lightly drawn across the stars.
She broke my quiet dream; I heard her say,
"Behold your prison bars!

"Earth's gladness shall not satisfy your soul,
This beauty of the world in which you live;
The crowning grace that sanctifies the whole—
That I alone can give."

I heard, and shrank away from her afraid;
But still she held me and would still abide;
Youth's bounding pulses slackened and obeyed,
With slowly ebbing tide.

"Look thou beyond the evening star," she said,
"Beyond the changing splendors of the day;
Accept the pain, the weariness, the dread,
Accept and bid me stay!"

I turned and clasped her close with sudden strength,
And slowly, sweetly, I became aware
Within my arms God's angel stood at length,
White-robed and calm and fair.

And now I look beyond the evening star,
Beyond the changing splendors of the day,
Knowing the pain He sends more precious far,
More beautiful than they.

PRESIDENT Gulledge calls a special meeting of the Chilton Cotton Association for next Saturday week, April 7, and urges a large general attendance. He says there is a lukewarmness in the affairs of the Association, but we hope this is not so, and that his anxiety for the good of the Association leads him to magnify any apparent decrease of interest. It must be borne in mind that the regular monthly meetings of the Association are held on Saturdays when merchants and other business men are usually very busy, and unless there is some special reason, cannot afford the time to attend meetings of any kind. The good work of the Cotton Association is recognized by all classes of citizens, and all are willing and anxious to aid in its further development. We hope to see a big meeting at Clanton, April 7.

MANY THINGS.

"Better late than never." That is what I think about fulfilling my promise, made time and again to friends who have asked me to write something for publication in the Banner. When a man gets to be a "Jack at many trades" he usually puts off doing things that he is not compelled to do. I enjoy writing for those who will give what is written an appreciative reading and be helped thereby.

First, Brother Editor, let me extend congratulations to you upon the marked improvement you have made on the Banner. I am prepared to appreciate this, being a newspaper man myself. I know your efforts are being appreciated by your readers, not only in Chilton, but elsewhere, for I have heard them express it as I have talked with them in their homes. Just recently heard an intelligent, well informed young man remark, "The Banner is one of the best weeklies I have seen."

Second, let me extend congratulations to you who have the good fortune of reading an up-to date, conservative weekly. I use the term "conservative" advisidly, The value of conservatism in a newspaper cannot be overestimated. And what a power for good a paper becomes when its object is the improvement of the country and development and elevation of all the people. Will you contrast Chilton county of ten years ago with Chilton county of the present? Then there was not a bank, perhaps not a brick building except the court house, very few schools and churches, farm stock of every sort the poorest kind, the people steeped in ignorance as a general rule: but what do we find now? Three successful banks, new, up to date buildings, the county dotted over meeting houses and school houses and a better system of education, almost all the children above seven years of age can read and write, stock of every kind much improved and agriculture beginning to be recognized as a science well worth one's while. When you make this contrast, bear in mind that The Banner has been a potent factor in bringing about these desirable changes.

Someone is ready to ask, "About what are you going to write?" From the caption of this article you will see that I am to write about "Many things." So I am About what could one write except things, since life is made up of things? That one word, "things" carries with it a larger meaning than the average reader is wont to admit. Shakespeare became a genius because he studied things. He saw "Tongues in leaves, books in brooks, sermons in rocks and good in everything." This writer knows a little about some things, such as farming, stock raising, gardening, education, Christian endeavor, child training, etc., and it is about these things he will write short articles from time to time. He may say some cutting things, but let them cut, just so they do good. I am not a candidate, nor a job hunter of any kind. If I have an axe at all, it is already ground. Yours for service,

ROBERT JONES.

New Cedron.

Please allow me space to say a few words from New Cedron. We had the worst rain on the 18th of this month since the year of '86; the farms look like they are ruined for this year; may be for the best for all we know.

The wreck on the M. & O. the 19th, was bad; it killed the engineer and crippled the fireman very bad. The engineer's name was Armstrong, well liked by everybody that knew him.

The Sunday school is progressing nicely now. Rev. Gibson filled his regular appointment at Concord last Sunday.

Messrs. W. W. Davenport and A. E. Williams visited Billingsley last week and report a nice time.

The health of our community is very good at present.

The rain on the night of the 18th inst. did much damage.

It seems that winter stays with us, but some are planting corn.

Prof. Davis' school was out last Friday. We dislike very much to see him go, but hope he will teach our next school.

The D. D. Lumber Co. is progressing nicely. In fact, we will soon live in town. We have one store and a commissary. Just as soon as they get the planer started they will have a fine mill.

Some of our boys attended the concert at Fairview last Friday evening and report an excellent time.

Everybody is cordially invited to attend the debate at this place on the night of April 7. Come, let's have a time.

"My mule is sick, my mule is sick!"
Cried little farmer Ned,
And if he don't begin to mend,
I know he'll soon be dead
So off to town the farmer went
To get good Dr. Hayes,
And when he was just out of sight,
The mule began to graze.
The doctor sent a sack of corn
Which was exactly right,
The farmer gave the mule a peck, which swelled him very tight.
If farmers then would feed on corn;
Instead of letting graze,
We'd soon get rid of sending for Our good little Dr. Hayes."

SCHOOL BOY.

Cliff Branch.

Wake up, Cliff Branch! We have not heard a word from you in a long time. There has been so much rain, the farmers look like they have been sent for and could not go. But keep in good heart, good farmers, God knows best.

Mr. John Lawrence's little baby, who has been very sick, we are glad to know is better.

Mrs. Roda Lawrence and Mrs. L. Garner spent Sunday eve with Mrs. Nelson Atchison.

Mr James Lanner spent Sunday with their relatives on Cliff Branch.

Mr. Takamar Wallace and wife and Mr. Race Lawrence and family spent Sunday at Mr. John Lawrence's.

We enjoyed a good sermon at the Methodist church at Pleasant Hill. BUSY BEE.

Dear Editor—Please allow me just a small space in your paper as I wish to say just a few words. The day has been a very rainy day and you know it makes anyone feel dull, especially a rural letter carrier, for he has got to get out tomorrow rain or shine, good roads or bad ones, and I think the patrons ought to see that they have good roads, for it is bad enough when they are in good fix. I think I ought to know, for I have been a carrier from this place ever since Jan. 15, and have some of as bad roads as anybody ever tried to drive over in a buggy. My route starts in Bibb county and leads through a part of Chilton and an Perry too, and I think the best roads that I have are in Perry county. I have to cross Oakmulgee creek once in Bibb and once in Chilton, and I just want to say that the part I cross in Chilton is sure bad. I have been going horse back for some time and if something is not done I will have to continue to go that way for sometime yet. I have some very fine patrons. I would like to see a piece in this paper from some of the carriers in Chilton. I live in Chilton and carry the mail in three counties. I think if the Editor would give the rural letter carriers a chance to write a word about their trials and troubles it would be a little more interesting than it is. Well, I guess I had better leave off for this time. Success to the Banner.

We are sorry to say our school is out. We certainly do appreciate the kindness which our teacher has shown toward us in school. We met with joy, but we part in sadness. It was hard to part, we had stayed together so long like sisters and brothers. I think nearly the whole school was crying, to think they had to part with their kind teacher and say good bye to all. We had a nice concert at the close of our school; we had some nice songs, plays, recitations and drills.

The health of this community is good at this writing.

Farmers are hustling around for another crop. We have had some springlike weather; the trees will soon have on their green summer coat. Success to the Banner and its many readers.

For Thin Babies

Fat is of great account to a baby; that is why babies are fat. If your baby is scrawny, Scott's Emulsion is what he wants. The healthy baby stores as fat what it does not need immediately for bone and muscle. Fat babies are happy; they do not cry; they are rich; their fat is laid up for time of need. They are happy because they are comfortable. The fat surrounds their little nerves and cushions them. When they are scrawny those nerves are hurt at every ungentle touch. They delight in Scott's Emulsion. It is as sweet as wholesome to them.

Our Sunday school is progressing nicely at this place.

Rev. Busby will fill his regular appointment here the first Sunday and Saturday before if sickness doesn't prevent. He did not come last meeting day on account of sickness.

The death angels visited the home of Mr. Tom Rhodes and took away his beloved wife. She leaves a devoted husband and several children and a host of friends to mourn her loss, but our loss is heaven's gain. Weep not, dear husband and children, but live the true Christian life that she did and you will meet her in the sweet by and by. She is not dead but sleeping. Asleep in Jesus, blessed sleep, from which none ever wake to weep. ONE WHO LOVED HER.

We organized a Sunday school at Shiloh church the 25th inst. We would be glad to have everybody that would like to join us. So all that can, come with the intention to join and make the Sunday school one of the best that has ever been organized at old Shiloh church.

I will say a few words about our ball game that is to be played on the Wyatt ball ground the 31st. All that want to play ball this season and want to be on a good team, I will say you ought to come and join us for we are going to have the fastest team on the road this season.

TWO OF THE BOYS.

Enterprise

Our school, conducted by Prof. W. T. Bean, closed on the 22d inst. Prof. Bean has made many friends while here with us. The term has been one of the most pleasant spent in the school room. It was with a sad heart we had to take the parting hand.

We had an interesting talk by Rev. B. F. Yeargan and Mr. W. Y. Keel. Let us not throw our books down, but let us keep on trying; it is the little things that make great things. An education is like the mountain stream, it is a little sparkling rivulet at first; it keeps growing till it beomes a little brook; it keeps growing till it goes on to join the brimming river; it grows and it flits on its seaward journey; as it rolls over rocks and rills, it sings a little rhyme: men come and men go, but I go on forever. So let us prepare for the duties of life. The closing address was made by Miss Mollie Yeargan.

MIDDLE LIFE

A Time When Women Are Susceptible to Many Dread Diseases—Intelligent Women Prepare for it. Two Relate their Experiences.

The "change of life" is the most critical period of a woman's existence, and the anxiety felt by women as it draws near is not without reason.

Every woman who neglects the care of her health at this time invites disease and pain.

When her system is in a deranged condition, or she is predisposed to apoplexy, or congestion of any organ, the tendency is at this period likely to become active —and with a host of nervous irritations make life a burden. At this time, also, cancers and tumors are more liable to form and begin their destructive work.

Such warning symptoms as sense of suffocation, hot flashes, headaches, backaches, dread of impending evil, timidity, sounds in the ears, palpitation of the heart, sparks before the eyes, irregularities, constipation, variable appetite, weakness, inquietude, and dizziness, are promptly heeded by intelligent women who are approaching the period in life when woman's great change may be expected.

Mrs. A.E.G. Hyland

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was prepared to meet the needs of woman's system at this trying period of her life. It invigorates and strengthens the female organism and builds up the weakened nervous system.

For special advice regarding this important period women are invited to write to Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass., and it will be furnished absolutely free of charge. The present Mrs. Pinkham is the daughter-in-law of Lydia E. Pinkham, her assistant before her decease, and for twenty-five years since her advice has been freely given to sick women.

Read what Lydia E. Pinkham's Compound did for Mrs. Hyland and Mrs. Hinkle:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"I had been suffering with displacement of the organs for years and was passing through the change of life. My abdomen was badly swollen; my stomach was sore; I had dizzy spells, sick headaches, and was very nervous.

"I wrote you for advice and commenced treatment with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound as you directed, and I am happy to say that all those distressing symptoms left me and I have passed safely through the change of life, a well woman. I am recommending your medicine to all my friends."—Mrs. Annie E. G. Hyland, Chestertown, Md.

Another Woman's Case.

"During change of life words cannot express what I suffered. My physician said I had a cancerous condition of the female organs. One day I read some of the testimonials of women who had been cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I decided to try it and to write you for advice. Your medicine made me a well woman, and all my bad symptoms soon disappeared.

"I advise every woman at this period of life to take your medicine and write you for advice."—Mrs. Lizzie Hinkle, Salem, Ind.

What Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did for Mrs. Hyland and Mrs. Hinkle it will do for other women at this time of life.

It has conquered pain, restored health, and prolonged life in cases that utterly baffled physicians.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Succeeds Where Others Fail.

Freak of Lightning.

Detective Delahay, of the Southern Rhodesia constabulary, was struck by lightning in a recent storm. He was hurled to the ground insensible and when he had recovered consciousness made his way home in a dazed condition, all the damage that he noticed being a burned mark on his trousers. Next morning he was unable to attend to his duties and felt generally unwell. A colleague then discovered that the two outer fingers of the officer's right hand were fleshless, the bones having been burned bare.

Under the auspices of the Central Association For Stopping the Sale of Intoxicating Liquors on Sunday a day of prayer and intercession was observed at Exeter hall, London. The proceedings lasted without intermission from 11 a. m. to 6 p. m. The time was passed with prayers and hymns interspersed with speechesc.

FOOD HELPS

In Management of a R. R.

Speaking of food a railroad man says:

"My work puts me out in all kinds of weather, subject to irregular hours for meals and compelled to eat all kinds of food.

"For 7 years I was constantly troubled with indigestion, caused by eating heavy, fatty, starchy, greasy, poorly cooked food, such as are most accessible to men in my business. Generally each meal or lunch was followed by distressing pains and burning sensations in my stomach, which destroyed my sleep and almost unfitted me for work. My brain was so muddy and foggy that it was hard for me to discharge my duties properly.

"This lasted till about a year ago, when my attention was called to Grape-Nuts food by a newspaper ad. and I concluded to try it. Since then I have used Grape-Nuts at nearly every meal and sometimes between meals. We railroad men have little chance to prepare our food in our cabooses and I find Grape-Nuts mighty handy for it is ready cooked.

"To make a long story short, Grape-Nuts has made a new man of me. I have no more burning distress in my stomach, nor any other symptom of indigestion. I can digest anything so long as I eat Grape-Nuts, and my brain works as clearly and accurately as an engineer's watch, and my old nervous troubles have disappeared entirely." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

A Noted Briton.

Mr. John Morley—Honest John Morley, as somebody has nicknamed him —is a good speaker. He is not, however, so ready a speaker as any one might suppose who has only read his speeches and not actually heard them delivered. There are always a high literary flavor and form about Mr. Morley's public utterances no matter what the subject may happen to be. He has a quiet and unassuming manner when upon his feet, and his eyes are almost as eloquent as his speech, for they light up and "catch" the hearer, as it were.

New Cure for Seasickness.

The ship physician of the Hamburg-American liner Patricia publishes his account of a new method for treating seasickness by means of an electric-vibration chair. Six of these chairs were placed aboard the Patricia and connected with the electric light conduit. The sedative effect on the patient when vibrated in the chair was noticeable, reducing the pulse and nervous excitement. The use of these electric chairs will be extended to other steamers.

THE PULPIT.

A SCHOLARLY SUNDAY SERMON BY THE REV. L. L. TAYLOR.

Subject: "Square Deal in Religion."

Brooklyn, N. Y.—As the subject of his sermon Sunday the Rev. Livingston L. Taylor, pastor of the Puritan Congregational Church, spoke on "The Square Deal in Religion." He took two texts: Proverbs xii.:22: "They that deal truly are His delight," and Psalm xi.:7: "The righteous Lord loveth righteousness." Mr. Taylor said:

The kingdom of heaven is a square deal on earth. From the night visions of the shepherds to the day dreams of St. John it is peace and good will on earth, among men, which the hosts of God are seen bestirring themselves to promote. And He who came from heaven lived brother to all men, that they might ever after dwell as brethren here. But there can be no kingdom of brotherly men on earth with any other throne set up than that of a fatherly God in heaven. The square deal has its vertical lines as well as its horizontal. The horizon never limited Christ's vision. He lived for the day when men would treat God right. In that day no man will have anything to fear from any other man. The thinking world is coming around more and more to Christ's estimate of religion as the power that must set things right among men. But in His day and in ours the problem of the square deal involves religion itself. It has always been hard to get a square deal for religion. It has always been hard to maintain a square deal in presenting the claims of religion. It has always been hard to keep a square deal at the heart of religion. These things should be borne in mind by us all as we enter upon the special religious activities and privileges of the Lenten season.

The square deal in religion involves a square deal for religion. And this in turn involves two things: first, a fair-minded attitude toward religious phenomena, institutions, doctrines and persons, and second, a determination to deal fairly with our own religious nature, a determination to give the soul a square deal.

Men deal more fairly with the fact of religion than they used to. They are settling down to the conclusion that the race is "incorrigibly religious." They are beginning to understand that the world's history could not have been what it has been if men had no capacity and need for religion. Religion must be recognized as a legitimate human interest unless we want to throw out of court the most persistent of all classes of facts. Religion must be recognized as one of the great human interests if we are to maintain any sort of proportion in our view of human life as a whole. Religion must be recognized as the supreme human interest if we would be consistent with any reasonable definition of religion. If religion is an affair of the soul in its relations with the infinite nothing short of this is reasonable or right. We should expect to see men, as we do, striving to make religion supreme, not content with anything short of the religious interpretation of the universe and of human life, determined to have some sort of religious system, spending and being spent in the service of religious institutions, their churches, their missions. We should deal as fairly with these facts as we do with the facts which convince us that it is natural for men to have music, that it is natural for men to express themselves and to find pleasure in the varied forms of art, that it is natural for men to concern themselves with the right and wrong of things and of their own lives.

But fair dealing with the fact of religion requires that we should recognize the limitations and the inevitable imperfection of all the forms in which the religious aspirations of men find expression. It is nothing to the discredit of religion if our best efforts to embody it fall short of those visions of its glory with which our souls are blessed. It is no less a treasure because we have it in earthen vessels. Religious systems are confessedly imperfect. Religious persons are full of faults. But they exist. They are facts. And they are as good evidence of man's religious nature as they are of the imperfection of all things human.

But how about our own religious nature, yours and mine? Have we been treating it fairly? In 1876 George Romanes, a brilliant young British scientist, came to the conclusion that he had no right to a soul or a God, and that it was his "obvious duty to stifle all belief" and to "discipline his intellect with regard to this matter into an attitude of the purest skepticism." "I am not ashamed to confess," he wrote at the time, "that with this virtual negation of God the universe to me has lost its soul of loveliness." And he was oppressed by "the appalling contrast between the hallowed glory of that creed which was once mine, and the lonely mystery of existence as I now find it." A little less than twenty years later George Romanes became convinced that in seeking to deal unflinchingly with the facts of physical science he had ignored the most significant of all facts, the most directly known, the most completely attested of all facts, the facts of his own religious nature. He came to recognize that it is "reasonable to be a Christian believer." Before his untimely death he had returned "to that full, deliberate communion with the church of Jesus Christ which he had for so many years been conscientiously compelled to forego." In the multitude of his thoughts within him he had secured a square deal for his soul.

Our difficulties may not be his, but we have them. The things which make it hard for us to secure our souls their chance may be very different from the things which made it hard for him. Scientific men of to-day have less to make them feel as the seemingly triumphant materialism of the seventies made young Romanes feel about having a God and a soul. But our difficulties may be of another class entirely. Perhaps they are far less creditable to our intellectual sincerity, less creditable to our moral purpose, evil inclinations and the multiplied opportunities for gratifying them that make it hard for their souls to get fair hearing. "The lust of the flesh, the lust of the eye and the pride of life are not of the Father," John tells us. But something more is true. They out-Herod Herod in their conspiracy against what is heaven-born in us. They are not only "not of the Father," but they are the deadly foes of all that is of the Father. Happy are the souls in which the flight into Egypt comes out as it does in Matthew's Gospel of the Infancy. Let us not hesitate to play Joseph to our threatened soul. All the dreams and angels that we need will be forthcoming if we are faithful, and we shall get back to Nazareth. Somehow Herod will be circumvented. And though it be neither scientific doctrines nor evil propensities which do most to make it hard for our souls, but just the petty preoccupations and the daily burdens and the round of more or less irritating duties of our common life, we are under the same sacred obligation and have the same encouragement to secure for our souls the square deal God means them to have. Let us never forget that Jesus Christ is the great champion of a square deal for every soul, and that that means ours.

A square deal in presenting the claims of religion should be religiously maintained. God is eternally against anything else. Jeremiah never said anything which bears more unmistakably the seal of a divine ratification than when he called it "a wonderful and horrible thing" that had come to pass in the land; that "the prophets prophesy falsely, and the priests bear rule by their means; and my people love to have it so." But a square deal in presenting the claims of religion rules out, not merely wilful falsification and perversion of the truth, it rules out intolerance and demands a square deal for the religious convictions of other people. It rules out dogmatism and demands a square deal for whatever new light may break forth. It rules out the insinuation of doubt and demands a square deal for the feeblest and most unintelligent faith. It rules out insincerity of whatever kind. But it does not rule out loyalty to deep convictions, nor definiteness of teaching, nor the replacing of the broken reed of an outworn doctrine with the strong staff of a living truth. To be absolutely loyal to the truth, and yet deal fairly with all the spiritual interests affected by the manner in which the claims of religion are presented, is no light thing to achieve. But of one thing, those to whom we go with the call of Christ must be left in no doubt, and that is that, so far as in us lies and God gives us light upon our way, we mean to be square with them. God made our ears so that they instinctively protect themselves against cant. They close as quickly as the threatened eye.

The square deal in religion involves a square deal at the heart of religion. The central doctrine should be the righteousness of God, the righteous dealing of God with men, a square deal and nothing less for all men, a square deal and nothing more for "the saved." Paul never gets tired of telling us that God does not save us by doing anything wrong. He is continually declaring God's righteousness in His way of saving men, that He is at once "just and the justifier of him that hath faith in Jesus." Paul proclaims the triumph of the square deal in Christ. In Him "mercy and truth are met together; righteousness and peace have kissed each other." All that God offers to us in Christ He has a right to offer. He comes before the bar of our conscience with His great gospel of forgiveness. If it is not ratified there it can never give us peace. It is not the less sensitive consciences which have borne the most unequivocal testimony to the peace which God gives in Christ Jesus. But there should be nothing to settle between your conscience and your doctrine of salvation. We are not saved by dishonest bookkeeping. Nothing is credited to us which does not belong to us in God's sight. Every item which justifies God in His mercy toward us may not appear. But no scheme that could not pass muster with us in our dealing with men can represent the redemptive dealings of God with sinners. The man who finds peace with God through Jesus Christ just believes that whatever safeguarding of righteousness was necessary when God's mercy set out to save him has not been neglected.

But while we need not fear that God will offer us more than He has a right to, we need have, on the other hand, no fear of giving too much to Him if we give all.

"Were the whole realm of nature mine,
That were a present far too small;
Love so amazing, so divine,
Demands my soul, my life, my all."

Negative Living.

Living to escape trouble is a poor kind of existence. The smaller animals in the forests and mountains have to give a large share of their attention to avoiding catastrophe, but man was made for another kind of life. "How are, you?" a man called out to his friend in passing. "I can't complain," was the ready answer. Poor fellow! The best that he could say was that he was successfully dodging disaster for the moment! The present moment ought to make the highest point of joyous accomplishment our lives have yet known. God means that it should. We have more to be thankful for today than ever before since we or the world came into being. Even our unconscious habits of speech will indicate this if we are living abundantly.

God's Care.

People talk about special providences. I believe in providences, but not in the specialty. I do not believe that God lets the thread of my affairs go for six days, and on the seventh evening takes it up for a moment. The so-called special providences are no exception to the rule—they are common to all men at all moments. But it is a fact that God's care is more evident in some instances of it than in others, to the dim and often bewildered vision of humanity. Upon such instances men seize and call them providences. It is well that they can, but it would be gloriously better if they could believe that the whole matter is one grand providence.—George MacDonald.

All We Have to Do.

The discipline which we choose for ourselves does not destroy our self-love like that which God assigns us Himself each day. All we have to do is to give ourselves up to God day by day, without looking further. He carries us in His arms as a loving mother carries her child. In every need let us look with love and trust to our heavenly Father.—Francois de la Mothe Fenelon.

WORTH QUOTING

Emperor William has issued orders that artists who desire to caricature the imperial person can do so without any fear of the penalties for lese majeste. That's a good way to take the point off the cartoonist's pencil, comments the Cleveland Plain Dealer.

No man who sits in the seat of the scorner, avows the Christian Register, can understand human nature; least of all can he make others less contemptible in character and more worthy of honor.

Enormous as the poultry industry of the country already is, says the Poultry Guide, with its combined poultry and egg production valued annually at $500,000,000, it is expected to grow rapidly in the next few years. In hotels, restaurants and household dining rooms chicken is supplanting other higher priced meat for the table. A great many thoughtful men who make a study of food questions believe that chicken will soon be the poor man's meat; that the increasing price of other meats will put them out of his reach, while poultry will be marketed at a price he can afford.

President Wilson of Princeton, at the dinner of the North Carolina Society, brought a grave indictment against the automobile in his statement that "nothing has spread socialistic feeling in this country more than the use of the automobile. To the countryman they are a picture of arrogance of wealth, with all its independence and carelessness." If the countryman regards the automobile in that light, it is a pity, thinks the New York Sun, for rightly used, the motor car will be a great agent of progress. We are inclined to think, however, that it is not the car or its proper use, but rather the motor maniac, that the countryman, with good reason, dislikes.

Hazing generally has apparently reached the point where the public interest demands that it be taken out of the hands of college and school authorities and be dealt with by courts, laws and police, like other offenses against the security of life, person and property, asserts the Baltimore American. In Indianapolis four students were shocked with such a powerful current of electricity that they made the narrowest kind of an escape from electrocution. It is significant of the strange wave of brutality which seems to be passing over the times that hazing now is not content without employing the element of torture in the "sport" afforded by treatment of its victims.

Expense, and great expense, may be an essential part of true economy, declares Stuyvesant Fish. If parsimony were to be considered as one of the kinds of that virture, there is, however, another and an higher economy. Economy is a distributive virture, and consists, not in saving, but in selection. Parsimony requires no providence, no sagacity, no power of combination, no comparison, no judgment. Mere instinct, and that not an instinct of the noblest kind, may produce the false economy in perfection. The other economy has larger views. It demands a discriminatory judgment and a firm, sagacious mind. It shuts one door to impudent importunity, only to open another, and a wider, to unpresuming merit.

Mark Twain has taken up the cudgels against overspeeding autoists, and in a characteristic letter in Harper's Weekly he proposes a novel means of detecting and punishing them. The law, he says, "dresses a convict in a garb which makes him easily distinguishable from any moving thing in the world at a hundred and twenty-five yards, except a zebra. If he escapes in those clothes he cannot get far." He suggests that this principle be extended to include "his brother criminal, the Overspeeder," who every day, throughout America, runs over somebody and escapes. At present, he points out, the automobile numbers are so small that ordinary eyes cannot read them, upon a swiftly receding machine, at a distance of a hundred feet. He suggests enlarging the figures, making them readable at a hundred yards. For offences of over speeding he would have the figures enlarged, as a penalty, in place of a fine,—to be re-enlarged for each subsequent offence. "With auto numbers readable as far as one could tell a convict from a barber-pole, none of these criminals could run over a person and 'escape.'"

Phenomena of Lightning.

All the phenomena of lightning and all its forms are determined, doubtless, by the kind and amount of resistance it encounters. Its light is due to the resistance of the atmosphere. Its noisy and often terrifying but quite harmless, accompaniment of thunder, is due to the sudden separation and reunion of bodies of air from sudden heating and cooling, and perhaps in part to the explosion of gases into which watery vapor is decomposed by the intense heat of electrical flashes, the result of each explosion being their recombination in the proportions of water.

NDTHRIFT COUNT.

HAS COST HER A DAY.

xtravagances of Count Castellane.—In the Eleven Their Married Life He Has Over $9,000,000.

Count Boni de Castellane reconciliation with the his income will be so cut to practically extinguish one greatest spenders that even Paris has ever known.

the American investments in titles Anna Gould's has been the most costly. to cold figures, the price ttle had been approximately each and every day for the 11 they have been married, or the every four weeks of Presi sevelt's salary for a year.

Count has smilingly spent $4 cherry and cheerfully given to pay the bonded indebted a small city for a piece of rac. He has made for himself tation as a spender that the the famous literary men of other capitals to write about he has inflamed the Parisian more than once so that he to placate the city by great charity.

of his little foibles was a vaude performance given at Auteuil for 350 guests, he presented an bill, no act of which cost him an $500.

That has been the one idea Count from the moment he got ds on the Gould fortune. He for others to give fetes or to els or antiques only that he eclipse them, and generally he ceeded. He has lived to hear aises sung, and the Countess the cost.

his world-famed mansion on the Bois de Boulogne, known as ed Palace," Boni spent more than he can ever accurately He liked the location so well he paid $740,000 for the land and before he got through he oduced a palace that any king ope might envy.

was told when he started to ate the historical Trianon at lles, in which Mme. Pompadour lived, that it was going to cost ndously, but he smiled and his bankbook, and for spite d to spend an additional mil furnishing the place.

of the few details of the palace t of fountains built in the gar which he could run for ten min at the trifling cost of $1,000. Then the idea that he wanted to be htsman, so he bought the yacht la for $200,000 and planned to r on a scale that totalled $150,- year. Later he had to sell this but that's another part of his n he was elected to the Cham of Deputies he felt so good red that he gave a feast that d have made Lucullus turn green. bill was $200,000. He seemed to that amount, for it figures fre ntly in his accounts.

another time he got the idea modern dress was all wrong and it only required a daring individ to revive the styles of past centu Toward this end he gave a y ball and all men appeared in costumes of the Louis XVIII Bill $125,000. But then his were always costly.

While his palace was building, some he lots he needed were occupied although it was altogether un ary, he impatiently bought the ited houses and evicted the ts. That cost a pretty sum.

metimes the Count's methods what might be termed question and in the light of the recent al it is probable that one of his mysteries is revealed. About years ago he presented to his wife necklace that he had paid $100,000 Anna Gould realized how he was ing her fortune, and when she d at the bauble she didn't think was worth the money, so she hur to the jeweller. She found that took a lofty attitude and insisted his business was with the Count. "You have cheated my husband," declared hotly, "and you must take back."

Then the secret was let out. The eller lost his temper, and, taking necklace in his hand, said angrily: "If you think, madam, I have cheat you are wrong. When I sold this klace to M. Le Comte it had four s of diamonds. It has but two s now. Can Madame tell me re the other two rows are?"

Then the one-time Anna Gould went e and thought it over. Possibly knows now where the other half the necklace went. Perhaps it may mentioned when her divorce comes trial.

The costly addition to the Gould ily th it might be useful to w the time occasionally, and he ded to have one of the finest ks in France. When the art ers heard of this they started to re what he wanted. In the end paid $60,000 for a Sevres creation it is said that for a year a clockmaker had the task of making it keep time.

For his Countess he bought a tortoise shell wardrobe in which Louis Seize once kept his royal robes. About $250,000 is said to have been the cost of this. In his boudoir he has the bed used by Napoleon on the night of his coronation, and the rest of his private quarters had decorations in keeping with the bed. One of his bills was for $10,000 for a small set of tapestry furniture.

One of the greatest extravagances was the purchase of the Palazza della Scala, in Verona, that he might get the eleven ceilings painted by Tiepolo. Scarcely had he written his check for a gigantic sum to secure the palace when he made the artists of the world gasp by putting a force of men at work tearing it down. Tiepolo was a native Venetian who died in Spain nearly 150 years ago, and his mural decorations are of enormous value. The Count had the ceilings cut out intact and then set up in his palace in this city.

For three Celadon vases with old French mounts he gave $16,000; for a set of two Rose du Barry jardinieres and two plates of the same pattern $10,000; and for two pairs of Louis XVI gilt candlesticks $4,400. One bill he received for $104,000 covered a Louis XVI table in dove marble, a pair of old Sevres vases, a Louis XVI Entre-Deux, a pair of old French silver vases and severl minor articles.

Another bill for $180,000 represented among other things a wardrobe, cabinet, small and large writing tables of the Louis XIV period. Two of his other large bills for antiques were contracted, one for $85,050 on May 27, 1896, and another for $62,200 on June 18, 1897. The Count could show innumerable bills for $10,000, $20,000 or $30,000, for little odds and ends.

For the pleasure of insulting President Loubet he paid $100,000 to engage Montjarret, once the postillion of the French Republic. Montjarret became the little Count's outrider, simply because Boni didn't like the Republic or the president, and he was willing to pay Montjarret's price. The outrider had led the processions of all the French presidents since Grevy, and he was always cheered when he appeared at the head of a state procession.

These are some of the things Anna Gould has had to pay for to be a Countess. Given in detail the list would fill seven or eight columns of a newspaper.

INDIAN CHARM FOR SNAKE BITE.

At Least One Recorded Case Where It Worked a Cure.

The report from the township of Sandwich West that an attempt had been made to counteract the effect of the poison in a boy's leg produced by the bite of a rattlesnake by a charm caused some inquiries to be made, and it was ascertained that snake poison charmers have been known in Essex county for the past hundred years. Tradition says that this power was received from the Indians, who roamed through the forests on both sides of the Detroit river years before the white man made his appearance.

Henry Meloche, who conducts a fish store in Windsor, and who is nearly sixty years old, said yesterday that when he was a small boy he witnessed the charm tried on his father, and claims that, without any medicine or medical aid, his parent recovered after the charm had been worked. He said:

"My father was bitten in the field at 8 o'clock in the morning and a messenger was at once despatched to Belle River for Jacques Latonier, who was famous as a snake poison charmer. He came to our home as fast as his horse would carry him, and when he grieved he found the limb greatly swollen and a string, which had been tied around the leg to prevent the poison from reaching the body, was buried in the flesh.

"Latonier, after making an examination of the wound, said is was a snake bite and he produced a piece of string made from a deer skin and proceeded to tie it around the leg. As he tied the first knot he muttered a single word and before he finished the work he had placed seven knots in the string and had uttered as many words. The words were in the Indian language, and almost immediately after finishing his incantation we noticed that the swelling began to fall.

"In a few hours the leg was down to its natural size and the deer hide string fell about the ankle of its own accord, as it became too loose to remain on the leg.

"I never saw it attempted on any other person," concluded Mr. Meloche, "but I have often heard of Latonier visiting different people who were bitten in the old days. Snakes were plentiful in Essex county fifty years ago, and it was not uncommon to be bitten by rattlers every year."—Detroit Free Press.

A New Dish.

It was Tuesday morning, the clothes had been washed, dried and folded the day previously, and common sense pointed to the fact that it was ironing day, but cautious Scandinavian Tillie, the new maid, was not going to make the mistake of going ahead before being sure that she was right.

Before committing herself to the obvious task, she poked her head into the dining-room to say appealingly:

"Meesis, I skuld like to speak something."

"What is it, Tillie?"

"Skal I cook some flat-iron?" asked Tillie, earnestly.

Buttons Made From Potatoes.

A large number of the buttons now in use, purporting to be made out of horn or bone or ivory, are in reality made out of the common potato, which, when treated with certain acids becomes almost as hard as stone. This quality of the potato adapts it to button-making, and a very good grade of button is now made from the well known tuber. The potato button can not be distinguished from others save by careful examination, and even then only by an expert, since they are colored to suit the goods on which they are to be used, and are every whit as good looking as a button of bone or ivory.

In Russia and Saxony they are a little more sensible, for in both countries a youth must refrain from matrimony until he can count eighteen years and the woman till she can count sixteen.

In Switzerland the men from the age of fourteen and the women from the age of twelve are allowed to marry.

In Turkey any youth and maiden who can walk properly and can understand the necessary religious service are allowed to be united for life.

To go further afield, mere children of 10, 9 and even 8 years of age are, by Indian custom, often married. This applies to the girl only, although native boys of from 12 to 14 become husbands and the nominal heads of households.

In China, too, the cuseom is nearly as senseless. Boys and girls who ought to be on the school bench or playing battledore and shuttlecock set up their family gods.

It is curious to note the the "marriageable age" standard increases in cold or temperate latitudes and that the lowest point is touch in tropic latitudes, lack of civilization also having much to do with it.

What is believed to be the tiniest horse in the world is the property of an Italian nobleman who makes a specialty of breeding dwarf horses on his estate in Lombardy. The diminutive creature barely measures nineteen inches at the withers, scarcely the size of a large dog. The owner possesses many such equine dwarfs.

GREAT SCOTT.

The Biggest Man of Addison County, Vt., Tells an Interesting Story.

E. C. Scott, meat dealer, Vergennes, Vt., Past Commander of Ethan Allen Post, G. A. R., says: "A severe attack of typhoid left me with weak kidneys. Every night I had to get up frequently to pass the urine, which was ropy, dark and very painful to void. I had no appetite, but drank water continually without being able to quench my thirst. Terrible headaches and dizzy spells oppressed me and my back was lame, sore and stiff. A month's treatment with Doan's Kidney Pills rid me of this trouble, and now I am strong and healthy and weigh 230 pounds. I give the credit to Doan's Kidney Pills."

Well Trained Horses.

The horses of the German cavalry corps undergo special training under the most scientific methods. All horses are bought at the age of three years and have to undergo a special "hardening" process, where their muscles are trained down to the exact limit of efficiency. They undergo one year's training before they are placed in the cavalry service, and they are not given their full activity until they are six years old. The German horse batteries are said to be the quickest and best trained in Europe. The gunners follow their guns on horseback and do not ride on the caissons, as with most other armies. This is said to save a great deal of time, and to aid in the quick manipulation of the weapons.

Covered With Crusted Scaly Eczema When One Month Old—Cured by Cuticura at Expense of $4.50.

"When I was one month old I was taken with eczema. After being under the treatment of two doctors for one month, and no improvement, my mother was advised by a druggist to try Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I was one crust of sores from head to foot. My mother could brush the scales off my body, and my finger and toe nails fell. After using six cakes of Cuticura Soap and about as much Cuticura Ointment I was completely cured. I am now seventeen years old, and my skin has not a scar. I am still finding wonders in Cuticura, after washing a fever blister two days it was completely gone. Obituary.

Whereas the divine Creator, in His omnipotent power, has seen fit to call unto Himself the spirit of our beloved sister in Christ, Mrs. Winnie Roy, who died at the home of her son, Mr. W. J. D. Roy, near Mountain Creek, at the age of seventy-one years. Sister Roy loved the Baptist church, of which she was a member for a number of years and was one of its bright lights. She had been sick for some time, but bore her pain with all patience, and when the angel of death knocked at her door she murmured not, but simply answered "I am ready." She was carried on Friday to Shady Grove where the funeral was conducted by the writer in the midst of a number of relatives and friends. She leaves many relatives and friends to mourn her departure; may the God of all comfort and abide with the sorrowing ones, is the prayer of their friend and brother.

J. W. Jones.

One would think the Laxative idea in a cough syrup should have been advanced long before it was. It seems the only rational remedy for Coughs and Colds would be to move the bowels and clean the mucus membranes of the throat and lungs at the same time. Kennedy's Laxative Honey and Tar does this. It is the Original Laxative Cough Syrup, the best known remedy for Coughs, Colds, Croup, Whooping Cough, etc. Tastes good and harmless. Sold by Upchurch Drug co.

A Chicago Alderman Owes His Election to Chamberlain's Cough Remedy.

"I can heartily and conscientiously recommend Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for affections of the throat and lungs," says Hon. John Shenick, 220 So. Peoria St., Chicago. "Two years ago during a political campaign, I caught cold after being overheated, which irritated my throat and I was finally compelled to stop, as I could not speak aloud. In my extremity a friend advised me to use Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. I took two doses that afternoon and could not believe my senses when I found the next morning the inflammation had largely subsided. I took several doses that day, kept right on talking through the campaign, and I thank this medicine that I won my seat in the Council." This remedy is for sale by Upchurch Drug co., Clanton; A. Horn, Thorsby.

Please allow us a small space to say a few words in regard to the closing of our school, Friday night, under the skilful management of Miss Lottie Johnson, who will surely be missed in our community for she has taught two schools down here. We would be glad to go to school to her again. We think she is a good girl and we know she did all she could to learn the children, and we think most of the children learned to love her and she loved the children. We hope we will get a teacher to teach our next school that will try to do as much for the children as she did while she was with us. We don't think that anybody need be afraid to select her for a teacher, for we think she will do all she can to learn the children. We would be glad to have her with us again but we are afraid we will not. Miss Lottie's concert was the best we have ever had down here, and everybody behaved just as nice as they could. I will say again that she will be missed in the Sunday school, as she was a good teacher. May God be with her in all her schools.

The farmers are moving right along with their farms; some are done planting corn and are now putting in fertilizer. We have a hustling community and we are coming right up to the front in farming. I think we have as good farming place as there is in the country and the people are realizing they can make a living without planting so much cotton.

Verbena, April 2, 1906

Editor Banner—I am offering this communication mainly as an additional notice or reminder of the importance of our meeting in Clanton on the 7th inst., and while the Banner man argued in his last issue that the average business man can't attend our meetings on account of his press of important or profitable business, yet I see business men of Chilton county ten miles from home attending base ball matches. What about this? Who pays his way while at this? It is said, and well said it is, that consistency is a jewel, and I will here add that there are few who possess it.

We have important matters to come before us, and I trust that each member of the Cotton Association of Chilton county will go and carry those of his neighbors and friends who do not belong to it. It is not the righteous but the sinner we are after now, and I fear that 5¢ cotton and that alone will ever convert some of the good people of our country. Further, I trust, not for my sake but for the sake of decency, that when we assemble in the court house next Saturday that we will find it habitable at least and not as before for past three or four times. There are public funds, the court house is in the hands of a legal custodian and it is expected that all public gatherings will have respectful consideration.

The reference of 'Squire Milford to me as suitable material for Representative in the next Legislature was unauthorized by me, yet I feel honored by his remarks and for which I thank him.

The latest interesting event in these diggin's was Saturday night, when Henry Johnson and Cliff Burkhalter came to my office with well stringed violin and guitar to entertain your humble scribe and a party of friends he had on hand. The thought occurred that we would have a wholesale entertainment So we called up each family living on our telephone lines for eight miles in each direction, and all those who had not retired expressed themselves as enjoying the music as if played in their immediate presence. This was a grand treat to all who like music. B, F. Gardner's family as well as the family of W. Y. Keel, S. F. Patridge and L. N. Henderson, frequently call me up to listen while they give me vocal or instrumental music from one to nine miles away. Clanton don't know what she is missing by having no 'phones.

F. A. GULLEDGE.

Apperson-Roper.

On the 27th of March, at 3 o'clock p.m., at Fairview church, Mr. J. F. Apperson led, to the sweet strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march, Miss Etta Mae Roper to Hymens alter. The church was tastefully decorated, the color scheme being pink and white combined with evergreen, the couple standing under an arch. The bride wore a beautiful creation of white silk and carried lillies of the valley and ferns, while the maids attired in white silk carried pink roses. The bride is a young woman of sweet character and attractive manners. She is well known in this and adjoining counties, having taught for several years. Mr. Apperson is a well to do and prosperous farmer of Autauga county. The attendants were: Miss Pearl Roper, maid of honor, Mr. Ed Wallace, best man, Miss Lottie Johnson and Mr. G. M. Durbin, all of whom were dressed in harmony and keeping with the occasion Messrs. Tom Roper and Walter Carter were the ushers.

Rev. Mr. Williams of Verbena performed the ceremony to the sweet melodies of "Annie Laurie." Mrs. Chandler of Clanton presided at the organ. They left for Billingsley, their future home. They have the best wishes of a host of friends.

Billingsley.

We are indeed glad to find that flower and vegetable gardens for the school are gaining in public esteem so rapidly. The more we study the propriety, and we may say the pressing need, of this sublime branch of education the more we feel in love with it. It will open up hitherto dormant faculties, the child will grasp ideas of nature's growth and expansion from personal observation from day to day. The unfolding of buds and flowers will be watched with unceasing admiration. Yes, to see all this and call it their own, will swell their bosom with profound delight. It is a God-given right to assist the little ones; may every teacher see the responsibility in pushing this unprecedented object lesson here in our own dear Southland, where every opportunity invites the progress of the most fascinating industry ever offered to the dear little ones. Let us not be so far behind other less favored communities. Give the children a little space to plant a few vegetable seed and flowers. Then watch the bright eyes sparkle with delight on seeing their own first flower, and cabbage, cucumber and squash. Give the children flowers and music and they are safe from idleness. O what is sweeter than to hear school children singing all with cheer and hopefulness, ready for higher steps in the great opening for duty. This greatest of all pleasue should not be confined to schools. Let everyone who bears the honored name of parent, give their little ones an opportunity for the happiest time of past or future life. If you have but one acre, and it rented, please give them a few feet of the best ground in which to begin prosperity and pleasure. I have flower and vegetable seeds to furnish our school at Billingsley. Let not the Banner family pass this article lightly by. The principles anchor in heaven.

ANNOUNCEMENT.

FOR REPRESENTATIVE IN THE LEGISLATURE.

I hereby announce myself a candidate for Representative of Chilton county in the Legislature, subject to the action of the Democratic party.

J. J. HAWTHORN.

CHILTON COTTON ASSOCIATION.

To the People of Chilton County:

Those who are, as well as those who are not, members of the Southern Cotton Association, are respectfully invited to attend a called meeting of said Association, on Saturday, April 7, 1906, at 10 o'clock a.m. We have a large membership in Chilton county. For the last few months, however, it appears there is a lukewarmness which I trust to dispel at the said meeting. I trust all farmers, merchants, lawyers, doctors, as well as men of all other vocations, will attend, as there will be business before said meeting that will or should engage the attention of all.

F. A. GULLEDGE,
Pres. Chilton Cotton Ass'n.

Collins Chapel.

The closing exercises of the school will be held Friday, April 6, 1906, and we expect a fine time. Ex Gov. Johnson will be here to speak on educational matters; Judge Adams, by special invitation of the children, will make an address; Judge Reynolds, W. M. Adams, Prof. H. L. Hicks and others will also make addresses, and the exercises, under the superintendence of Prof. R. A. Rasco will be unusually interesting. 9:30 a.m. is the time set to begin.

Riderville.

Dear Editor—I would like to have a little space in your paper if there is any room. We are having so much rain now that the farmers can't do anything in their fields, but they must be patient, for God knows best.

There was a singing convention at Valley Creek on Saturday and Sunday last. There was a large crowd out and everybody enjoyed themselves very much. Messrs. C. T. Gregg and F. S. Connell carried a wagon load of young ladies from Riderville and all reported a nice time.

Mr. Arthur Martin was in Riderville Sunday and everybody was glad to see him.

Our Sunday school is progressing nicely, we have a large attendance every Sunday. Rev. T. F. Davis, pastor of the Methodist church at Stanton, will fill his appointment Sunday at his church and will preach at Riderville Sunday night. Everybody is invited.

Miss Rider is visiting relatives in our little city; glad to have her with us. Success to the Banner and its readers.

About Rheumatism.

There are few diseases that inflict more torture than rheumatism and there is probably no disease for which such a varied and useless lot of remedies have been suggested. To say that it can be cured is, therefore, a bold statement to make, but Chamberlain's Pain Balm, which enjoys an extensive sale, has met with great success in the treatment of this disease One application of Pain Balm will relieve the pain, and hundreds of sufferers have testified to permanent cures by its use. Cason was heard to say, "If you repeat that I'll kill you." About that time they clutched, Cason cutting Smith two ugly gashes about the neck. Smith fired three shots, killing Cason instantly. Lovonia, Ga.—The case of the state against Mrs. Amanda Cobbs went to the jury at 4 o'clock Saturday afternoon. After deliberating an hour the jury returned a verdict of not guilty. It was stated at the time that Professor Cobb was suspicious of the conduct of his wife and was watching the house.

Prisoners Scared by Fire.

Dothan, Ala.—The burning of a building within a few feet of the Houston county jail at an early hour Saturday morning badly damaged the wood work of the jail and created a panic among the thirteen prisoners confined there. Their cries and prayers, led by a negro preacher were plainly audible to the crowd watching the flames. They were finally removed to a vacant room in the city hall building. Two firemen and a policemen were injured during the fire.

Washington, D. C.—The abandonment of a number of army posts in the west and southwest is proposed in a recommendation for the redistribution of troops prepared by Lieutenant-General Bates, chief of staff, and approved by Secretary Taft. Among the posts recommended for evacuation are Remming Gold, Tex., and Reno, Okla.

Primary Date Unsettled.

Dawson, Ga.—The democratic mass meeting here Saturday, Hon. A. C. Hill presiding, tabled a resolution calling the primary election for county officers for May 16. Resolutions were adopted defining the qualifications of voters in the primary whenever called by the executive committee. The qualifiactions are substantially those prescribed by the state democratic executive committee of 1904. The new county committee, chosen Saturday, selected Capt. W. B. Oxford chairman, and decided not to call the county primary till after the state committee names the date for the state democratic primary. They will then appoint a day for Terrell's primary.

Alabama Rivers Overflow Banks.

Mobile, Ala.—After being out in the Little Bigbee and Warrior rivers for the past four weeks, the steamer Ouchita arrived Saturday, passing through the overflowed district of the Tombigbee, but brings no additional information. Her officers report passing through the inundated district Friday night, the river still rising, with no indications of the water receding within the very near future. They say rain continues to fall in the uplands district, which will cause backwaters to spread further over the lowlands. The Ouchita did not make a stop between Demopolis and Mobile, a distance of over 300 miles. They report observing many head of cattle huddled together on ridges, many of which will fall victims of starvation unless relieved within the next few days.

New Bank Will Open.

Ashville, Ala.—Ashville is to have a bank which will throw open its doors to the business world on July 1. Messrs. Ford and Senour, of Pulaski, Tenn., are the promoters of the new institution. The bank will be capitalized at $25,000, having a paid-in capital of about $15,000. A meeting of the stockholders was held on Thursday last, at which meeting James L. Herring was named as president; John B. Bass, first vice-president; W. B. Beason, second vice-president, and J. K. Senour, cashier.

Capitalists to Have Game Preserve.

Huntsville, Ala.—Captain Milton Humes, W. I. Wellman, James R. Boyd and John H. Wallace, Jr., went to Birmingham to meet a special committee appointed by the Interstate Club for the purpose of selecting a location for their club house and game preserve. The club is composed of several northern millionaires and proposes to spend several hundred thousand dollars in this section. Hotel Monte Sano has been offered the club as a suitable club house, while thousands of acres may be obtained on the mountain plateau for a game preserve.

Alabama Prodigies.

Dothan, Ala.—In school at present in Slocomb, fifteen miles from here, is Terry Foster, who has the distinction of being the youngest person ever officially granted a license by the state of Alabama to teach. Terry, who is only 13 years of age, stood an examination recently before the county examining board, in session at Hartford, and emerged triumphant with a license. Terry's father, J. S. Foster, resides three miles south of Dothan.

Living near Slocomb is another person who is something of a prodigy, it might be said. This is Mrs. Mary Lewis, who is aged 84. Mrs. Lewis' home is three or four miles from the town, and whenever she desires to do any shopping there she asks no odds of any one, but puts out on foot, makes her purchases and returns to her home in the manner she came. Still more unusual was a performance of Mrs. Lewis four years ago, when she, being in Bonifay, Fla., and desiring to arrive in Slocomb promptly for special church services, refused to wait for a dilatory relative who was to carry her in his buggy, and walked the distance of twenty-five miles, arriving but little if any fatigued by her trip.

Birmingham Man Caught by Floods

Tuscaloosa, Ala.—During the high water there have been many very dangerous accidents between this city and Holt. Friday Mr. Trady, traveling salesman for the Alabama Grocery Company, of Birmingham, came near meeting his death while driving through the asylum farm en route for Holt. He had driven for some distance where the back water from the Warrior had completely covered the high road bed, when his horse stepped off the road where the water was some fifteen feet deep. Mr. Trady swam some distance to a high place, when he opened his knife and started back to cut the horse loose from the buggy, which he did. In releasing the animal he gashed his hand in several places, but to no serious extent.

A negro driver employed by the W. D. Robertson Grocery Company also happened to a serious accident. He drove over a place where there should have been a bridge, which was washed away by a heavy current, when he, together with his wagon and horse, were swallowed up in the water. A negro who was some distance away, seeing the great danger, rushed into the water and saved both the driver and horse. Both were tangled in the harness and were sinking for the last time. The negro was well rewarded for his bravery.

Grasped Live Wire.

Geneva, Ala.—T. P. Welden, 34 years old, was electrocuted here by coming in contact with a guy wire. A broken telephone wire had fallen across the electric wires and was lying against the guy wire, transmitting to it a current of 2,300 volts. There were no witnesses to the accident, but the presumption is that Welden caught hold of the wire in passing and got the force of the current.

Dr. Cunningham Opens.

Birmingham, Ala.—The political talk of the state at present is the announcement that Dr. R. M. Cunningham, who has so far kept in the background in his race for governor, will next week begin an active and vigorous campaign against Hon. B. B. Comer, who has had the field largely to himself so far. Dr. Cunningham includes in his plans challenges for joint debates, etc. In view of his present reputation as one of the most forceful and logical speakers in the state, the announcement that he is to open his campaign of speechmaking and spell-binding has been greeted was acclaim, even by his political opponents. Dr. Cunningham still enjoys a reputation as one of the most generally liked and popular men in the State, and he will carry with him an immense vote, whether or not he wins in the race he is making.

Aside from this the political horizon is clearing, and there remains little of doubt in the state campaign, with the exception of the ultimate result of the election. Two more announcements for alternate senator (candidates in waiting in the event of the death of Senators Morgan and Pettus) are expected, those of Hon. Jesse Stallings and of Col. John W. Tomlinson, both of Birmingham. It is conceded that all the other announcements of importance from all over Alabama are now in, and that it will now be a straightaway race to the August 27 primary.

Hunt for Newland.

Gadsden, Ala.—J. W. Newland and Joe Thomas, brother and uncle respectively of Fred Newland, the young man who mysteriously disappeared in Gadsden the night of March 19, have given up all hopes of finding their relative alive and have set several men to work dragging the river. They believe that Fred Newland was drowned. Whether he was killed or committed suicide they cannot say, but they do believe that his body will be found in the river if it is found at all.

Chief of Police White maintains that Newland boarded the Louisville and Nashville train at 7:09 o'clock Monday night for Anniston and that he reached that city.

Newland collected money loaned to railroad employes when he was here, and it is now known that he had several hundred dollars, whereas it was said at first that he had only about $10 expense money.

A search has been made of the river bank and no trace has been found of the missing man.

Parker for the Legislature.

Cullman, Ala.—George H. Parker, the present member of the legislature, has announced to succeed himself and will run in the democratic primary, which will be held the 14th of April. Mr. Parker did not announce until the last day given to candidates to qualify. The other parties in the race are Rev. J. N. Bright and Prof. James Kilpatrick. It is conceded, even by his opponents, that Mr. Parker will be elected.

Big Premiums in Alabama.

Montgomery, Ala.—The total insurance premiums collected in Alabama in 1905 were $7,380,437. Of that $2,628,704 was fire and $4,335,399 for life. The balance was miscellaneous.

The fire loss was 64.8, compared to 54 last year. The total losses in the state were $1,689,934. The average rate was $1.79, compared to $1.66 the year before and $1.64 for nine years. The life companies paid back only $1,629,209, which does not include matured and cancelled policies. There was a heavy loss in lapses. The net loss to the Equitable was 38.

Lee Cowan Held.

Montgomery, Ala.—A special to the Advertiser from Dothan says:

After a preliminary trial held before Probate Judge George Leslie, Lee Cowen, postmaster of Big Creek, was held to the next grand jury in $3,000 charged with the murder January 5 of Curtis Rogers.

Rogers was killed in the store and postoffice at Big Creek conducted by Cowan. There was no one in the building at the time except the two. The state claimed that the killing was done by Cowan and the defense averred Rogers was killed by the bullet from a pistol which became dislodged and fell from an upper shelf.

Fire in Cotton Mill.

Sylacauga, Ala.—Thursday fire was discovered in the picker room at the Central Mills. It was not an easy matter to get the fire under control, and the damage to the mill and machinery is said to be several thousand dollars, done by fire and water.

Death of W. W. Decker.

Albertville, Ala.—Mr. W. W. Decker, a prominent merchant of this place, died suddenly at his residence Friday afternoon. The trouble was heart failure. Mr. Decker was one of Albertville's best citizens. He leaves a widow, three children, a father, two sisters and three brothers. The interment took place Saturday at the Albertville cemetery.

WILL REMAIN OUT

Until New Scale is Signed—Coal Miners by Thousands Abandon Work.

GENERAL ORDER NOT ISSUED.

In Many Districts of Bituminous Fields Suspension Short Lived—Operators Ready to Grant Advance.

Indianapolis, Ind.—No general strike order was issued by the national executive board of the United Mine Workers as a result of the all day meeting of that body here Saturday. The meeting was held for the purpose of completing arrangements to carry out the policy committed to the board during the national convention of the miners, which closed Friday afternoon. This will be made effective by authorizing the district and sub-district officers to sign contracts wherever the operators signify their willingness to pay the 1903 scale, which provides for an increase of 5.55 per cent in wages.

The district officers and board members have notified the local unions that the miners may cease work at the expiration of the present wage scale at midnight and remain out until ordered back to work under a new contract.

It was reported unofficially at the national headquarters of the miners that operators representing the total tonnage of Iowa signified their willingness to sign the 1903 scale on Tuesday.

The signing of contracts by the operators in Western Kentucky is accepted by the miners' officials as an indication of what may be expected elsewhere. Application was received at the national headquarters of the United Mine Workers for the signing of all the miners in that territory, and the authority was transmitted at once by telegraph. The 3,000 miners in this region will continue at work.

Bennett Brown, representing several large mines in Southern Illinois, made personal application to President John Mitchell today to be allowed to sign the new contract. He was told that the papers would be in readiness for him on his arrival at Springfield, and that the district officers there have power to act in the matter and order the men back to work.

It was said also at national headquarters that all the mines in Indiana south of the Baltimore and Ohio Southwestern railroad have made application to be allowed to sign the new scale. The owners of these mines are not members of the Operators' Association in the central competitive field.

President John Mitchell refused to discuss the outlook, and would not make any statement regarding his declaration in the convention that 50 per cent of the central states' mines will be signed up within ten days.

It is announced by the district and board members that the miners will avail them selves of the opportunity to remedy many local grievances in making the separate contracts. They will also not enter into a contract with an operator unless, besides meeting all of the scale contract requirements, he promises to attend and participate in the next interstate movement conference, when it is called. The miners are thus to make strenuous efforts to preserve competitive district lines through the interstate relationship between themselves and the operators.

GOES OUT OF BUSINESS.

Standard Oil of Kentucky Ceases to Do Business in Ohio.

Cleveland, O.—The semi-official announcement is made here that the Standard Oil Company of Kentucky will cease to do business in Ohio, and that that business, together with a million dollars of assets in this state, would be taken over by the Standard Oil Company of Ohio.

F. P. Squier, vice-president of the Ohio Standard Oil Company, when asked for a verification of the report of the withdrawal of the Kentucky company from this territory, replied that while the official announcement had not been made, he understood that the transfer was to be made as reported. The Standard Oil Company of Kentucky is capitalized at $1,000,000. The headquarters of the company are in Cincinnati, and that of the Ohio company are here.

Shreveport, La.—A special to the Times from Texarkana, Ark., says: Fire has destroyed the general office building and freight depot of the Kansas City Southern railway, the Grand Central Hotel and several small buildings, entailing a loss of about $60,000. All the records of the railroad company were lost. The origin of the fire is not known.

PLUNGE INTO CREEK

Taken by C. & O. Passenger Train Near Quincy, Ky.

Portsmouth, O.—A Chesapeake and Ohio accommodation train ran into a washout just below Quincy, Ky., Friday night. The engine, baggage, express and passenger cars plunged into a swollen creek, but the passengers were reported safe.

Engineer John Spotts, of Covington, Ky., and the fireman were reported missing. Several others of the crew were badly hurt. The telephone wires are down and further details are not obtainable. A relief train has been rushed to the scene from here.

ATTEMPTING A RESCUE

Negro Drowned Along With Man He Sought to Save.

Vicksburg, Miss.—While duck shooting in Greasy lake, twenty miles north of Vicksburg, Alexander Grant, white, and Alexander Claiborn, colored, were drowned, the latter losing his life in an attempt to save his white companion. Mr. Grant was a wealthy cotton planter and merchant.

TILLMAN FOR ANOTHER TERM.

South Carolina Senator Announces for Re-Election.

Washington, D. C.—Senator Tillman has sent an address for publication in South Carolina relating to his candidacy for re-election. It is written in characteristic language and deals with the dispensary or liquor question, which promises to be the main issue in the democratic primary next August.

The senator points out that he believes as strongly as ever in the dispensary system and serves notice that he will conduct his canvass for re-election along that line and will call to account such of his opponents in the South Carolina legislature who refused to amend the law so as to prevent future scandals in the purchase of whisky for the state.

Charged With Defrauding Railroads.

Washington, D. C.—As a result of the investigation in New York city by the interstate commerce commission of alleged under-billing and misdescription of goods by various shippers it was stated at the offices of the commission that the present intention is to certify the cases to the department of justice for criminal proceedings with the view to bringing about indictments. This action, however, will be deferred until after the commission has conducted further hearings in other cities, where it is alleged similar unlawful acts have been committed.

At present it is contemplated by the commission to examine certain witnesses in Buffalo and Philadelphia, where it is said frauds of equal, if not greater magnitude than those alleged to have been committed in New York and vicinity have been perpetrated. These latter hearings will be conducted some time during the month of April. A member of the commission said that it was the determination of the commission so far as possible to break up the practice and that it was their belief that this could be done only through drastic action in the courts.

Complete Accord Reached.

Algeciras, Spain.—The committee of conference on Moroccan reforms has reached an agreement on all points. This agreement was sanctioned at the plenary session of the conference Saturday afternoon.

Complete accord was reached after a long conference held between M. Revoil, head of the French mission, and Count Von Tattenbach, of the German mission. The division and the policing of the ports of Morocco were arranged as follows:

Spain polices Tetuan and La Raiche; a Franco-Spanish mixed police will be established at Casa Blanca and Tangier and a French police force alone will have charge of Mograder, Saffi, Mazagan and Rabat.

This gives France four Atlantic ports.

The duration of this police agreement was fixed at five years.

The settlement of the question of the state bank of Morocco gives France three shares, including those of the French syndicate. The other nations have one share. Four bank supervisors will be appointed by the Bank of England, the Bank of France, the Imperial Bank of Germany and the Bank of Spain.

Ex-Bank Officials Indicted.

Guthrie, Okla.—Eight indictments were returned here against Charles E. Billingsley and three against James C. Robb, president and vice-president respectively of the defunct Capitol National Bank, holding them for the bank's failure. Billingsley was held under $12,000 bail and Robb and Neal were each held under a bond of $5,000 each. Neal is at present in the Oklahoma Insane Asylum at Norman.

Austin, Tex.—The senate and house have adopted a concurrent resolution indorsing the attitude of opposition to the proposed national quarantine bill maintained by the Texas delegation in congress. The resolution sets forth that the proposed bill would cast a baleful influence on the gulf ports and that the enactment of such a law would infringe upon state's rights.

When Henry Jones and his brother, Luther, were elected to the state house of representatives from adjoining districts, the same year, the occurrence was not deemed remarkable in any way.

Arriving at the state capital the night before the party caucus, Henry and Luther chose a modest room which they would occupy together in a quiet boarding-house on a side street. Therein they sat themselves down to consider the future.

"Lute," said Henry, the elder brother, to his junior, "I've been thinkin' over this legislative business considerable since I got elected, and the more I think the more scared I am that I'll make a durned fool of myself here this session. Hain't felt that way yourself any, hev ye, Lute?"

"Yep," assented Luther with brevity, and waited for his brother to continue.

"Mebbe you and I don't know so much as some folks, Lute," his brother went on, "but we do know that there's two sides to every question, a right side and a wrong one. Now, my idee is this: That whenever it comes to a vote on anything I'll go one way and you go the other. So one of us is bound to vote right. That wipes out the other man's wrong vote and leaves the state just as well off as though it didn't have us two numbheads on its hands for three months. See?"

Lute saw and approved; and the next day at the party caucus the scheme was tried and worked to a charm.

Henry and Luther were satisfied in their honest belief that what they were doing was for the best. And the history of their legislative careers might have ended without an incident had it not been for the Black Mountain Merger Bill.

It is not necessary for the purposes of this narrative to describe the Merger Bill in detail or to discuss its merits. Suffice it to say that one corporate interest, very powerful in the state, earnestly desired the passage of the bill; while another great corporation was just as earnestly opposed.

The lobbyists swarmed upon the scene, drawn to the state capital like flies to a jug of molasses. There was open corruption and secret intrigue. Plots were laid and counterplotted. Every string was pulled, every lever pressed, every argument used, every weakness played upon, every dark place threatened, in order to secure votes upon one side or the other.

And when at last it came to a vote Henry Jones voted no and Luther Jones voted yes, and there was a tie. The speaker could not vote, being a director in the Black Mountain Railroad, and the result was a deadlock.

Then the fury of the fight was redoubled. Here the Mergers stole a man by giving his son a $3,000 a year office. But the Anti-Mergers retaliated at less expense by pointing out to a "yes" member that it was his son who ought to have had the place. The Mergers kidnaped an Anti and sent him to sea in a cattle boat. The

The Philosopher

Some folks they're complainin'
Because it ain't rainin',
And some 'cause the weather is dry;
But I kinder content me
With all that is sent me,
An' don't go to askin' 'em "Why?"

There's lots of good fun in
The world that Life's runnin',
Though it's sometimes a song sigh;
But when troubles are rilin'
I jes' keep a-smilin',
An' don't go to askin' 'em "Why?"

If life has one flower,
One beautiful hour,
One song that comes after a sigh,
For me there'll be fun in
The world that Life's runnin'—
An' I won't go to askin' 'em "Why?"

THE PATRIOTISM OF THE JONESES

BY H. C. PEARSON

(Copyright, 1906, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

When Henry Jones and his brother, Luther, were elected to the state house of representatives from adjoining districts, the same year, the occurrence was not deemed remarkable in any way.

Arriving at the state capital the night before the party caucus, Henry and Luther chose a modest room which they would occupy together in a quiet boarding-house on a side street. Therein they sat themselves down to consider the future.

"Lute," said Henry, the elder brother, to his junior, "I've been thinkin' over this legislative business considerable since I got elected, and the more I think the more scared I am that I'll make a durned fool of myself here this session. Hain't felt that way yourself any, hev ye, Lute?"

"Yep," assented Luther with brevity, and waited for his brother to continue.

"Mebbe you and I don't know so much as some folks, Lute," his brother went on, "but we do know that there's two sides to every question, a right side and a wrong one. Now, my idee is this: That whenever it comes to a vote on anything I'll go one way and you go the other. So one of us is bound to vote right. That wipes out the other man's wrong vote and leaves the state just as well off as though it didn't have us two numbheads on its hands for three months. See?"

Lute saw and approved; and the next day at the party caucus the scheme was tried and worked to a charm.

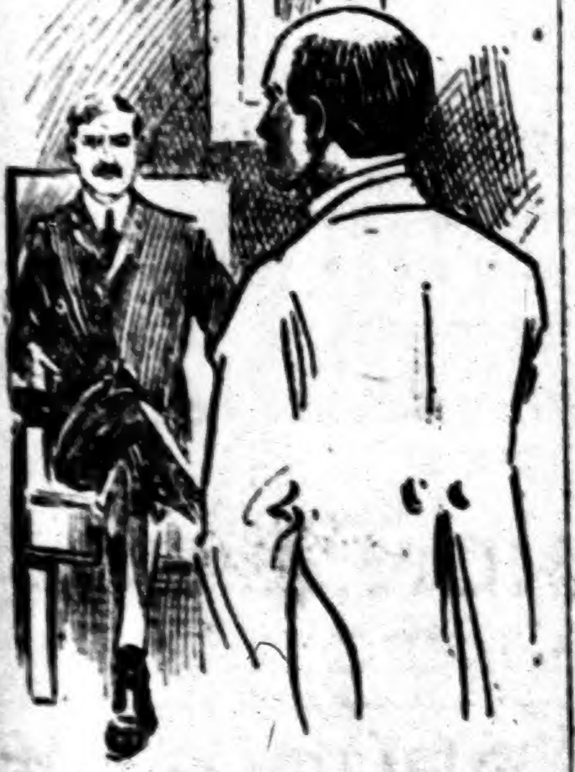
Henry and Luther were satisfied in their honest belief that what they were doing was for the best. And the history of their legislative careers might have ended without an incident had it not been for the Black Mountain Merger Bill.

It is not necessary for the purposes of this narrative to describe the Merger Bill in detail or to discuss its merits. Suffice it to say that one corporate interest, very powerful in the state, earnestly desired the passage of the bill; while another great corporation was just as earnestly opposed.

The lobbyists swarmed upon the scene, drawn to the state capital like flies to a jug of molasses. There was open corruption and secret intrigue. Plots were laid and counterplotted. Every string was pulled, every lever pressed, every argument used, every weakness played upon, every dark place threatened, in order to secure votes upon one side or the other.

And when at last it came to a vote Henry Jones voted no and Luther Jones voted yes, and there was a tie. The speaker could not vote, being a director in the Black Mountain Railroad, and the result was a deadlock.

Then the fury of the fight was redoubled. Here the Mergers stole a man by giving his son a $3,000 a year office. But the Anti-Mergers retaliated at less expense by pointing out to a "yes" member that it was his son who ought to have had the place. The Mergers kidnaped an Anti and sent him to sea in a cattle boat. The Antis arranged with the family physician of a "yes" member to declare that his patient would not live the winter through in this climate and to pack him off to Florida.



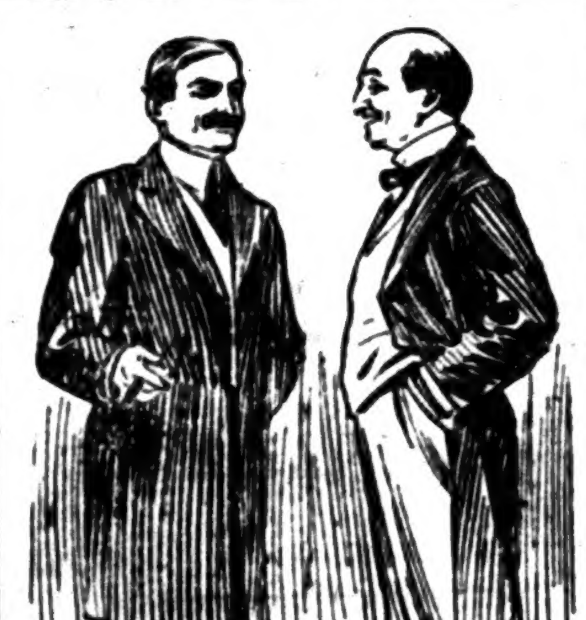
"I'll go one way and you go the other."

None of these attacks was directed against Henry and Luther. The leaders of the respective lobbies classed the Joneses as too honest to be bought, too stubborn to be argued with and too independent to be threatened. The last week of the session arrived. Six times had the question come up in one form or another, and six times the vote had been a tie.

At last, the end of his rope in sight, Jake Graham, head of the Merger lobby, sallied forth to seek Henry Jones. The interview was private and protracted, and the only report of it ever given was made by Henry Jones to his brother, Luther, that night in their boarding-house chamber. It chiefly concerned, it seemed, the deed to a farm in Wentworth, adjoining Henry Jones' home place.

This deed had been placed in an envelope on which was written: "To be delivered to Henry Jones as soon as he has voted in favor of the Black Mountain Merger."

"Luther," said Henry solemnly, "it looks to me like flyin' in the face of Providence for me to let that farm get away from me now."



"I guess they'll remember Joneses."

"Yes, Henry," assented Luther, "but you're breakin' our agreement, and that don't seem just right to me, especially as that farm don't benefit me none."

Henry's assent was prompt. "You're right, Luther," said he. "As an honorable man and a lovin' brother I don' want to break that agreement, and it seems like to me as though I wouldn't have to. Now I've been voting "no" on this bill all the time, but after listenin' to candid and convincin' arguments from the other side I feel that I was wrong and ought to vote 'yes.' Well, then I have been mistaken all along, maybe you have, also; and without attemptin' to influence you in any way, Luther, I would advise to be liberal and hear both sides."

And so it happened that the next day Luther Jones strolled casually by the Red Lion inn, the headquarters of the Anti-Mergerites. Nothing more natural than he should see within an old friend from a distant part of the state and enter to greet him.

Said friend, an amateur lobbyist, soon arranged for an interview between Luther and General Long, commander-in-chief of the Anti-Merger forces. The fish took the hook so easily that the wary General was inclined to be suspicious, but the mutual friend whispered that he had always had great influence over Luther, and the bargain was made.

One envelope was almost the duplicate of the other, but instead of a deed this one contained ten bank notes of one hundred dollars each and the inscription read "against," not "in favor of."

Next day came another test vote upon the Merger bill, and upon each side a spirit of confidence was manifest that was inexplicable to the other side.

Jake Graham called a conference of his lieutenants an hour before the house went into session. With them he canvassed every vote, made sure that every man would "stick," added the name of Henry Jones and saw in his mind's eye that majority of one as big as one hundred.

But he could not understand the mysterious elation that possessed General Long.

That worthy trusted no subordinates. When a spy brought news from the camp of the enemy that they were expecting to welcome a deserter from the Antis the General asked questions of no one but himself. Finally he took from an inner pocket his famous little red notebook, erased a name from a list the book contained, added the name of Luther Jones and grinned, that same, infrequent grin feared by district school teachers forty years ago.

At the appointed hour came the final call of the roll. Both sides stood firm until the last counties were reached and still there was no change. Now but two names. On one side of the speaker sat Graham, alert, erect, expectant. On the other side lounged Long, with pursed mouth and eyes half closed.

"Jones of Waterville," called the clerk, and Henry Jones, clearing his throat, said with emphasis, "Yes."

Then came pandemonium. The triumphant yells of the Mergerites, as they swarmed about Henry, drowned out the objurgations of the Antis and shielded Henry from them as well as from possibly more tangible tokens of the wrath to come.

In the midst of the tumult Graham leaned over to Long and held out his hand. "It's all over now, Peter, but you did give us a long run and no mistake."

"No," drawled Long in Graham's ear, "but I've got a Jones."

Graham made a mighty leap towards that corner of the hall where sat Luther Jones, but he was too late.

The speaker's gavel and the sergeant-at-arms had finally quelled the riot, and the clerk was calling the last name on the roll.

"Jones of Wentworth."

"No," said Luther Jones, mildly, but firmly, and waited for the storm to break.

Next day Henry and Luther went back to their farms, quite undisturbed by the headline prominence given them in the morning papers.

"Henry," said Luther, "it's all over, and I'm glad of it, but we didn't turn out to be the biggest fools in the lot, did we?"

"No, Luther," replied his brother. "When them corporations take to monkeyin' things again I guess they'll remember the Joneses."

CAT AND RAT ARE SHIP'S PETS.

In Peace They Share the Honor of Being the Chicago's Mascots.

A sailor approached the officer the deck after retreat on board Chicago yesterday and said, saluting: "Sir, may I have permission to go to the Saturn?"

"What for?" said that officer.

"To get the cat," was the reply.

That cat is the pet of the ship. When the flagship went to Hilo, the cruiser's cat stayed behind to get acquainted with the cats of the tropics. He evidently got pretty well acquainted, for when the cruiser returned and "the cat came back," he was a battle scarred veteran.

Beside the cat, the battleship boasts a rat. Not a plague rat, but a white rat from Bremerton, Wash. That rat is also a pet and is a glossy, well fed, well mannered rodent, as white as driven snow. The sailor who seems to be his special guardian says that the more he pounds the rat the better he likes him.

He crawls all over the boys, takes his cigarette smoke like a Spanish senorita, and makes himself quite at home wherever he is. But he never gets "shore leave."

The cat and the rat are the best of friends. Once in a while the rat gets a little too familiar to suit his catship and bites the cat's lips with his sharp teeth. Then the cat looks pained and turns up his eyes to the boys for sympathy. He never seems to think of such a thing as eating up his companion.—Honolulu Commercial Advertiser.

White Pine About Exhausted.

There is food for national reflection in the statement by a newspaper representing the Michigan lumber interests that "to all intents and purposes there is no white pine here any more." The fact can hardly be ignored that the case presents an examples of undiscriminating tariff policy. No intelligent protectionist will deny that the purpose of a protective tariff is to foster and increase the domestic production of the staple on which the duty is laid. No man with his eyes open can dispute that the effect of the tariff on lumber has been to hasten the destruction of the white pine forests. When forty years of that duty has ended in wiping out what was the most important supply of lumber in this country the reason for continuing the obstacle against drawing on other countries for our lumber needs is hard to perceive.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

New Seven Ages.

A little laugh,
A little fun;
A blossom bordered
Way to run.

A getting tall,
And serious, too;
And then the school
To labor through.

Then blossom bordered Ways of love—
Just two on earth
And stars above.

Then to the altar;
Then away
To homely cares
Of every day.

Then joys untold,
Then new delight!
A baby crying
In the night.

Then something more
Than parent's glee—
A gran'child
Climbing on your knee.

And then to sleep;
Green sod above;
But life's worth living
For the love.

Veteran Thirty Years in Position.

John Rome has been in charge of the main door of the house for thirty years and has a personal acquaintance with the lawmakers of the past and present not exceeded by any other employe at the capital. He is on the soldiers' roll, which means that he can not be removed except on conviction of charges. The soldiers' roll includes, as a rule, only veterans of the civil war, but Mr. Rome is not a veteran of the civil war. He is the youngest veteran living of the Mexican war and is the only survivor of that war on the house list of employes. He was a drummer boy, and while thus engaged at the bombardment of Vera Cruz, a cannon ball carried away the best part of his left arm.

MEMBERSHIP OF RUSSIAN DUMA.

Only 28 Out of 400 Will Come From the Cities.

The 400 members of the Russian Imperial Duma must have certain property qualifications. They must be able to speak Russian and they must take the oath of allegiance, on election. They will draw $5 a day during the session of the Duma, and mileage at the rate of two and a half cents a mile to and from the capital. As first designed these members were to be elected in rather a roundabout way. Groups of electors were first to be chosen from three great classes of Russian society: the land-owners, the village communities and the municipalities. The first extension of this scheme further admitted large numbers of the artisan class, the latest developments will, it seems, admit everybody, including the army and navy. It is worth noting, as showing that Russia is still a vast, sprawling village, that of more than 400 members to be returned to the Duma, only twenty-eight will represent cities; six for St. Petersburg; four for Moscow, and one each for the following eighteen towns: Astrakhan, Kishinev, Wilna, Voronej, Rostov, Ekaterinoslav, Kazan, Kieff, Riga, Nijni Novgorod, Orel, Samara, Saratoff, Tula, Kharkoff, Odessa and Yarpslav. Compare this vast rural representation with that of England, where the city and county members exactly counterbalance each other, and we get a measure of the difference between the two nations.—Harper's Weekly.

Ethical Value of Poker.

A. Clark Williamson of Chicago, writing to the Inter-Ocean, takes such high ground in regard to the game of poker as to make it worthy the consideration of moral philosophers and sociologists. In the first place, he says that poker playing is not gambling, but a scientific pursuit, a revealer of character, a guide of conduct to the moralist and the man of business. If you think you know a man do not feel sure of the fact until you have played poker with him, then his yellow streaks, if he has any, will begin to show through. Mr. Williamson closes with this impassioned appeal for the game: "A man may deceive his wife, he may four-flush his brothers in the lodge, he may succeed in bluffing his way into a leading place in business, politics or society, but he cannot sit in a poker game for an hour before he is an open book to everybody around the table." If such is the ethical value of poker it should be taught to catechumens and find a welcome in every Sunday School.—Boston Herald.

Not a Subject for Legislation.

A bill making it a misdemeanor to fee any waiter, servant or porter connected with any hotel, restaurant, lunchroom or public service corporation is to be introduced in the Maryland legislature. The measure is not to be a one-sided statute, however but will provide punishment alike for him who proffers the tip. It can safely be predicted that should such a foolish law be enacted it will remain a dead letter and soon be utterly forgotten. However disagreeable the tipping practice may be to some people—and there is no doubt that it has come to be something of a nuisance—it is certainly not a crime, and the criminal courts can employ their time much more profitably disposing of murderers and highwaymen, of which there is a superabundance, than by wasting it on "tipping" cases.—New Orleans Picayune.

The Dread Disease Pneumonia.

We spend time and money in fighting the white scourge and one of the important measures proposed by the Iowa legislature to act upon this winter is the founding of a state hospital for consumptives. Yet it is doubtful if this disease can lay claim to a larger number of victims than can pneumonia. In the presence of the rampant pneumococcus the physician is practically helpless. The question of recovery seems to be whether the patient is strong enough to bear with the poison produced by the germ until that poison is strong enough to kill the germ itself. It is a duel to the death between patient and germ and if the patient would win he must begin to train long before he has any suspicion that the struggle is coming. In other words, he must keep in good health.—Nebraska State Journal.

Harvest of the Shears.

A reporter recently took a journey of considerable length for the purpose of interviewing a rising literary light as to his next novel. On reaching the house he discovered the author seated in his garden, engaged in earnest conversation with a little boy who had a large towel pinned around his neck. The author received his visitor cordially, but seemed rather absent-minded. "Are you willing to tell me a little about your next important work?" asked the reporter. The literary man clicked a pair of shears and patted the boy on the shoulder. "We were just talking about it as you came up," he said. "Willie thinks I ought to do it with a bowl, but I think I can do it without. What would you advise? You see, his mother has always cut it before, but she's away just now!"—Las Angeles Times.

God's Peace.

Drop Thy still dews of quietness,
Till all our strivings cease;
Take from our souls the strain and stress,
And let our ordered lives confess
The beauty of Thy peace.

Breathe through the hearts of our desire
Thy coolness and Thy balm;
Let sense be dumb, let flesh retire;
Speak through the earthquake, wind and fire,
O still, small Voice of calm!
—J. G. Whittier.

AN OLDTIME COLLEGE BOY

Very quaint are some of the letters addressed by George Fothergill, a student at Oxford, England, to his parents, nearly two centuries ago. The following is from a letter dated Jan. 21, 1722: "When I consider your circumstances I cannot desire you to send so much, and I believe less would serve till midsummer, and it would perhaps straiten you to send 10 pounds ($50). I can scarce ask you to send me a little money, but I believe I could in some things lay it out as well as my tutor and, when I want, I had rather not have to go to him. If you can conveniently send me a pair or two of shoes, pretty well made, because summer seems now to be coming. They would be more lastly and cheaper than I could have them here. • • • Our countryman, Henry Hall, gives his service to you, and desires me to put you in mind of your promise to send him a little hung beef with the carrier, and if you could have sent me a collop it would be very good. If I live till Easter I shall be glad of news."

In 1723 he was admitted a "servitor," which carried an income of £8 ($40) with it, but "the holder had to wait upon the gentlemen commoners at meal times, carry in their commons from the kitchen and their bread and butter out of the buttery." As servitor he had also to call up three commoners to early chapel, at [illegible] m., who were willing to pay extra for the service, and by this means he earned another £5 ($25) a year. Feb. 2, 1723, he writes: "I humbly beg and entreat you not to think much if I should desire you to send 7 or 8 pounds, or 6, if you cannot well spare more, for my tutor, and what you can well spare more for myself. I hope you will not think it unreasonable if I should desire a guinea this time, since I laid out 4 shillings for an Horace out of my half one last time, and would not, therefore, have much left for this long winter. But if you will be pleased to send what you can spare to my tutor, I will endeavor to make some shift or other."

There are many passages like the following: "God will send some means to effect whatever He sees necessary. I have just had an instance of His providential care since I had wrote a great part of this letter, which I am the more joyful, the more thankful for, as I know my joy will be the joy of you all. I was this morning sent for by a lady, who has brought her son to be entered under Mr. Steadman, and to have a subtutor of his recommending, and he recommending me, I was pitched upon."

AID FOR DEPENDENT WOMEN

A veritable "old maids' paradise" is located in Scituate. That ancient South Shore town bears the distinction of possessing a fund of which the proceeds are devoted to the care of dependent maiden women.

So far as the Scituate Selectmen know there is not a life fund under the supervision of a town anywhere in the state. More than a quarter of a century ago Miss Eliza Jenkins decided that women approaching the sere and yellow leaf of life, who had, like herself, remained single from choice or otherwise, should be provided for when they became dependent wholly upon themselves. The idea of an old folks' home in Scituate was at that time entirely out of the question. Miss Jenkins straightway did the next best thing and left a fund of $3,000, the interest of which is yearly distributed among the worthy maidens of the town.

The Jenkins fund has always been in charge of the Selectmen. In the last few years they have placed about $20 each in the hands of half a dozen persons. This odd fund has benefited persons in Scituate for so many years that the townspeople have come to regard it as a very common institution; it is available only for native born women, and this is about the only restriction its donor made.

Many a person has been helped in the last twenty-five years to pay off a mortgage, buy fuel for the winter months or purchase seeds for the spring planting through this fund. The Selectmen know pretty nearly every one in the town, and it is comparatively easy for them to discriminate between the worthy and unworthy.

Soon after Miss Jenkins thoughtfully provided for the "old maids," another maiden woman, Miss Lucy Thomas, originated the idea of a similar fund for widows. She left $1,000, also under the case of the Selectmen, for native born widows. Interest has been drawn from this fund nearly as many years as from the Jenkins fund.—Boston Globe.

AUTO HAS A FASCINATION

"You'll never find me standing on the curbstone and shouting, 'Git a horse!' You'll never find me scattering carpet tacks in the roadway. You'll never see me wrinkling up my nose and saying, 'Pue!' I rather like the smell of gasoline unless it's too near the gas jet," writes Eugene Wood in Everybody's.

"I always stop and follow with my eyes when one honk-honks apast me. It's no use sending me on errands and telling me to be right back, if my way is near a fine smooth street. I've just got to stand and 'gawp' at them going by. And if there's one on the corner with a man trying to wind up the spring in front (or whatever it is), so that the machine will shudder just right, I join the throng of messenger boys, and men taking home the wash, and fellows out of work, and I stand, with my weight first on one foot and then on the other, trying to puzzle out what it is he does with the handle.

"I look at the folks riding in them, leaning back so grandly with their jaws tied up as for the mumps, and trying their blamedest not to let on how tickled with themselves they are, trying to pretend that it's an old story to them, and that they have had autos ever since the machines came out. It is my daily effort to figure to myself how it would be with me if it was me instead of them. I was in one once for a little while. Honest I was. Now that's no joke. I was. Rode quite a ways, too. Anyhow, half a mile. I can't really describe my sensations. The luxury got me rather rattled in my mind. I came as near as scat! to making the worst bargain in my life, just on account of that automobile, because the main thing in my mind was that I ought to have one."

GOV. GOODELL SCARED THEM

New Hampshire people have not yet forgotten the reign of terror which the inauguration of Gov. Goodell, fifteen years ago, gave to the liquor dealers of the state.

New Hampshire's temperance governor began his administration by a public proclamation, warning the liquor dealers of his intention to enforce the laws against the illegal sale of intoxicants. Then he discovered that, while New Hampshire was a prohibition state, there were no legal tools at hand, in the shape of administrative laws, by which the governor "could prohibit"; but the rumsellers did not know this, as the ex-governor recently explained to the writer.

"There was a rumor," he said, "that I was going to Manchester to seize all the liquor, and, although I had not the least intention of doing so, they packed up all the liquor in their possession and sent it out of the city.

"But the funniest thing happened when I did go to Manchester. The report of my actual approach to the city did not arrive until the evening before. When I reached the city I met a very weary and morose looking sheriff.

"'I have you to thank for being kept up all night,' he said. Much astonished, I asked him to explain. 'Why, those fellows didn't have time to pack up this time, so they got their creditors to attach all their stock in hand, thus preventing your seizing the wet goods. It has taken me all night to serve the papers.'"

This has furnished the ex-governor with a laugh that will last him the rest of his life. Later effective legislation gave the New Hampshire saloonkeeper, for a while, well-founded grounds for his fears.

NEVER YOU MIND, MY DEAR

Has the day been dark and the sky been gray?
Never you mind, my lad.
Whistle a bit in a cheery way;
Don't take the time to be sad.
Oh, Worry's a specter of visage grim,
First imp on the fiendish list;
But smile in his face when you look on him,
He fades like the morning mist.

Did the dream that you dreamed go somewhat wrong?
Never you mind, my dear.
Out of the shadow will float a song,
If only your soul will hear.
Ay, Worry's a phantom, and Worry's a ghoul,
And Worry's a goblin of night.
He flees from a smile, but he comes at a scowl,
And a sigh is his cruel delight.

Oh, I know of the hope that is buried from sight,
But bravely we'll bear it, my dear,
For the sunlight is born of the womb of the night,
And the comforter ever is near.
Yes, bravely we'll bear it, my dear—you and I—
And strength to our souls will be given,
Though Worry doth whisper and mutter his lie,
Earth swings to the science of heaven.

I would fain hold your head on my comforting breast Till a smile glimmers out through the tears,
But the battle of each is for each, and the rest
Know little that gladdens or sears.
So we'll both do our best, whatever it be,
And we'll smile through the pitiful rain,
Till the phantom of Worry forever shall flee,—
And we know that e'en Sorrow is gain.

Reports Denied by Wynne.

Robert J. Wynne, consul general to London, while in Washington had his attention called to some stories printed in a western paper charging that there had been "goings on" in his London career. Mr. Wynne glanced over the publication and and said philosophically: "It's no more, perhaps, than might have been expected. You see, when I was in the post office department I upset the calculations of more than one daily paper which enjoyed special privileges in connection with the rural free delivery. That is their way of fighting back. But there is nothing to the tales. I need only tell you that I have never been a guest at such a dinner as is described and I have, unfortunately, never been presented at court."—Exchange.

WE believe that the Democratic party of Chilton county is awaiting the action of the Executive Committee.

AUTAUGA Democrats will hold their primary election August 27. The Executive Committee has endorsed Hon. H. S. Doster for State senator.

WITH sorrow we learn that Stephen M. Hughes, editor of the Tallassee Tri-County Weekly, committed suicide Tuesday. He had been in bad health for some time.

THE question of national aid to highway construction and improvement has reached that stage where the people must act in some decisive way. There is no surer way of eliciting Congressional attention than by demanding that aspiring gentleman shall express themselves on this proposition before the Congressional elections are held this year. If gentlemen want the suffrages of the people they must be willing to meet the demands of the people. If all those who favor national aid to good roads will emphasize their demands to candidates, nothing can be more certain than that they will be heeded.

Kincheon.

Health of our community is very good.

There has been so much rain, the farmers getting behind with their work. But keep in good heart, brother farmer, I have heard it said that a bad beginning brought forth a good ending. I hope we may yet be able to make a full crop of everything except cotton, I want it to be a little short. Messrs. I. M. Deason and J. D. Sims are still hauling off and selling sweet potatoes. It looks like from the amount of potatoes they have hauled off and sold since Christmas that they did not make anything but potatoes last year, and it looks like they are not going to try to make anything but oats, this year. Boys, their fall oats are looking fine; we all ought to sow our oats in the fall.

We have organized a Sunday school at the Popwell school house and it seems like it will be a success. Our superintendent failed to to the first Sunday, but I think he will come around alright.

Our school, conducted by Prof. L. D. Riggins, is moving along nicely and I think will prove to be as good or the best school that we have had taught in this neighborhood.

Come again, Bro. Jones, we greatly enjoyed reading your letter in the Banner last week and hope I will have the pleasure of reading a letter from you every week.

RED.

New Cedron.

Our Sunday school is progressing nicely.

Rev. Till Deason filled his regular appointment here last Sunday and preached an excellent sermon to a large congregation.

Mr. Grover Vance paid New Cedron a flying visit Sunday last.

We are sorry to say that Miss May Askins is on the sick list, but we hope her speedy recovery.

Mr. Fonza Culp, who has been visiting relatives in Mississippi, returned a few days ago.

Mr. John Billingsley visited his father at Thorsby Friday last.

Mr. Frank Powell of Billingsley is visiting friends at New Cedron.

Prof. L. D. Riggins was welcome visitor in our community Sunday.

Mr. Robt. Culp has returned from a pleasant visit to Florida.

We are sorry to say that Mr. Jim Scott is on the sick list.

Mr. Jim Chambers and wife visited Mrs. G. W. Askins recently.

Misses Ida Williams and Ida Devaughn visited Mrs. Nannie Limbrick recently. Best wishes to the Banner.

Teachers' Institute at Jemison.

On the morning of March 23, at the appointed time, Supt. Moore called the Institute to order. Devotional exercises were conducted by Rev. J. A. Beal.

Mr. Jackson was present and gave the teachers a hearty welcome to Jemison. R. E. R. Hicks for the response being absent, J. T. Williams was appointed to respond.

Next in order was the enrollment of teachers. The attendance was very good, there being 28 teachers present, though several who were on the program were conspicuous by their absence. The following teachers were enrolled: Misses Ada Askins, Julia Parrish, Yula Stricklen, Miencben Fay, Mary Gallagher, Ella Williams, Em Smith, Jessie McGee; Mrs. Curry and Mrs. Mullins; Messrs. J. H. Anderson, Adin Batsin, W. T. Bean, O. L. Bentley, E. B. Calloway, W. J. Harwell, H. L. Hicks, E. W. Miller, J. W. Moore, W. A. McCreless, J. M. Parrish, W. M. Sorrell, R. E. Sessions, R. A. Smith, W. J. Stoudenmire, St. Clair Thornton, J. O. Williams and J. T. Williams.

Rev. P. G. Maness being absent, Rev. J. A. Beal kindly consented to discuss "Ethics of school training." He gave an interesting and timely talk on the subject. Some one said, "If he can do that well without any preparation, I would like to hear him when he has prepared to speak." Mrs Curry also gave some good thoughts on the subject.

A valuable addition to the program was made when Mrs. Curry read an excellent paper on "Elocution in the schools." The subject was also discussed by Prof. Sessions and others.

Off we go to enjoy a bountiful dinner.

The first thing in the afternoon session was a fine paper on "The teachers' present opportunity of improving country life," read by Mrs. Mullins. Prof. Sessions, Rev. Beal and others gave short and pointed discussions of the subject under consideration.

The next subject, "How to teach English grammar," was given thorough consideration by Prof. Harwell. This discussion was heard with much interest by the teachers, for it is a subject in which all are interested.

Misses Stricklen and Fay read excellent papers on "Supplementary reading." The papers were evidence that they have studied and understand the subject. Institute adjourned till Saturday morning.

Supt. Moore was kept away from the Saturday session by some important and urging business. The Institute was called to order at 9:45 by Prof. Sessions, and Prof. Judson Strock was elected chairman pro tem.

After devotional exercises, Prof. H. L. Hicks thoughtfully compared the teaching profession with other professions. Profs. Sessions and McCreless followed. It was said that in the estimation of the world the teaching profession occupies a low place in the scale of professions, but now everything seems brighter for the teaching profession than ever before.

Profs. R. E. R. Hicks and C. J. Eiland being absent, Prof. McCreless and others discussed "The importance of regular reviews and examinations."

A paper on "School incentives and how to use them," read by Miss Em Smith, was listened to with much interest and pleasure.

An addition to the program which seemed to be appreciated more than anything else, was a recitation by Miss Stricklen.

Messrs. G. L. Speer and B. J. Sessions being absent, J. T. Williams talked for a few minutes on the subject assigned to them—"How may playtime be used to the best advantage?"

The committee on resolutions made the following report: We, your committee, beg leave to submit the following report:

Resolved 1st, That we tender our sincere thanks to the citizens of Jemison for their unlimited hospitality to us during our sojourn with them.

2d, That the people of Jemison have been very kind to us and have taken great interest in royally entertaining us.

3d, That these resolutions be spread on the minutes of the Institute.

4th, That a copy of same be sent to the county paper for publication.

H. L. HICKS
A. L. BENTLEY } Com.
J. O. WILLIAMS

After the resolutions were adopted the Institute adjourned.

The Institute, as a whole, seemed to be enjoyed by teachers and visitors alike, and goes down in the history of Chilton county teachers as an occasion to be given a place amond pleasent memories.

A Message to Sunday School Superintendents.

It is earnestly desired that every Sunday school in Chilton county elect delegates to the State Sunday School Convention to be held in Montgomery, April 24-26 Special attention is called to the following facts which have been furnished by the State officers: The convention will be held in the First Presbyterian church on Adams street, between Court and Perry streets; the railroads have given a rate of one fare, plus 25 cents, for the round trip; the delegates will be entertained in the homes of the Montgomery people. As it is very important for the entertainment committee to know how many delegates to prepare for, each superintendent is requested to send, as soon as possible, the names of the delegates, expecting to attend the convention, to Mr. R. O. Blakey, Montgomery, Ala., the chairman of the entertainment committee. The basis of representation is five delegates at large from the county, to be appointed by the county president, Mr. Crumpton, all ministers of the Gospel, the superintendent and two other delegates from every school.

During the convention, Miss Kennedy, the State primary secretary, will hold two separate meetings for the benefit of primary teachers and as we expect to pay special attention to primary work in the county this year, it would be a good thing, as far as practicable, to elect the primary teacher one of the delegates. It is very important for Chilton county to be well represented at this convention. To most of us, the association work is comparatively new and this is the best opportunity we will have to become familiar with the work, methods and plans of the State organization, of which the county association is a part. It will do us good to meet and mingle with Sunday school workers from all over Alabama, it will do the schools good to have the new interest and fresh enthusiasm which we will gain at a State convention, so let every superintendent try to have his school represented in Montgomery, April 24 26.

SECRETARY.

State Sunday School Convention.

The railroads of the State have granted a rate of one fare, plus 25 cents, for the round trip to delegates attending the State Sunday School Convention to be held in Montgomery, April 24-26.

All ministers of the gospel are ex-officio delegates and each Sunday school can send its superintendent and two other delegates to represent it in the Convention.

The Sunday school workers of Montgomery will entertain the delegates. The superintendent is requested to send the names of his delegates to Mr. R. O. Blakey, chairman of the Entertainment Committee, Montgomery, Ala.

The Gordian Knot.

The Gordian knot was said to have been made of thongs used as a harness to the wagon of Gordius, king of Phrygia. Whosoever loosened this knot, the ends of which were not discoverable, the oracle declared should be ruler of Persia. Alexander the Great cut away the knot with his sword until he found the ends of it, and thus, in a military sense at least, interpreted the oracle, 330 B. C.

He who freely praises what he means to purchase and he who freely enumerates the faults of what he means to sell may set up a partnership with honesty.—Lavater.

and it cures the cold. That's what is necessary. It soothes the throat because it reduces the irritation; cures the cold because it drives out the inflammation; builds up the weakened tissues because it nourishes them back to their natural strength. That's how Scott's Emulsion deals with a sore throat, a cough, a cold, or bronchitis.

Yes. 100,000 times each day. Does it send out good blood or bad blood? You know, for good blood is good health; bad blood, bad health. And you know precisely what to take for bad blood—Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Doctors have endorsed it for 60 years.

One frequent cause of bad blood is a sluggish liver. This produces constipation. Poisonous substances are then absorbed into the blood, instead of being removed from the body daily as nature intended. Keep the bowels open with Ayer's Pills, liver pills. All vegetable.

MANY THINGS.

THINGS ABOUT THE FARM.

"There is no place like home." Especially is this true if that home is on a farm. The old saying, "He lives at home and boards at the same place," is more applicable to the independent, well-to-do farmer than any other class. I would not sound one pessimistic note. No one can afford to be a pessimist, when optimism pays so much better; however, we had as well face the fact now that all farmers are not independent and well to do. This must be largely their own fault. It cannot be in the fault of science itself. And this leads me to say that agriculture is truly a science. You will remember that I admitted in my introduction, last week, that farming in this country is beginning to be recognized as a science. When it is given the place among other sciences which it deserves, instead of people leaving the rural districts and flocking to the centers of population, you will see the tide turning back to the country Then will the country be adorned and beautified as it should be. Then will farming be pleasant and profitable.

Paul says, "Contentment with Godliness is great gain." The only successful man in a business of life is the contented man. Usually the contented man is a happy man. I regret to find considerable restlessness among people on the farm. So many think if they could just get to town, they could have everything heart desires and life would not be such a burden. The opposite is exactly the case. Others want to go to a new country, where land is better and where they can the sooner make a fortune. Let me say just here, that taking all in all, I do not know where a living can be made more easily than here in central Alabama. After all, do you not know there is more in the man than in the land? Some men will take an old, ragged, run down farm and in a few years it will blossom like the rose. The same man will buy an old mule, or an old sleepy, weather beaten horse and in a few months that same old mule will be fat, sleek and full of life. It is the man behind the work that brings success. One can make a pretty fair estimate of a man's character by noting the condition of his farm and kind of stock he keeps.

MOST BEAUTIFUL WOMAN.

MRS. WALTER FARWELL OF CHICAGO AND WASHINGTON IS HOLDING THE HONOR.

Is Daughter of the Wife of Stephen A. Douglass, Herself a Famous Belle.—Husband's Father Began Life a Poor Boy.

Who is the most beautiful woman in America? This was the question recently propounded in connection with the preparation of a Beauty Book which was designed to sell at something like twenty-five dollars per copy. It was intended to present in the expensive volume portraits of the handsomest women in each of the principal American cities but one member of the fair sex was to be selected as preeminently the most beautiful creature in Miss Columbia's domain.

Naturally there was great rivalry for the honor and the persons who sat in judgment upon the photographs of beautiful women which were submitted in the contest had a rather difficult time to reach a decision. Finally, the choice fell upon Mrs. Walter Farwell of Washington, D. C. and Chicago who was a bride of but a few months when the mooted question was decided in her favor. In arriving at a decision the judges studied the features of each subject critically just as a person might judge the good qualities of a picture and the award was made to Mrs. Farwell as the possessor of the greatest degree of perfection in every attribute of womanly beauty.

MRS. WALTER FARWELL.

AWARDED FIRST PRIZE AS THE MOST BEAUTIFUL WOMAN IN AMERICA.

For the benefit of any person who might be disposed to find fault with the decision of the committee it may be said in simple truth that none of Mrs. Farwell's likenesses do her justice. She is a tall, surpassingly graceful woman of the type so often referred to as the "Gibson girl," with slender but perfect figure; a marvelously clear complexion; hair that is tinged with gold; and a very animated manner. She has been famous ever since she first entered society for being one of the best, or rather one of the most artistically gowned women in the public eye.

Mother Was a Famous Beauty.

Mrs. Farwell comes by her beauty as a rightful heritage from her mother who was the most famous beauty of her day. Before her marriage Mrs. Farwell was Miss Mildred Williams. Perhaps this name does not suggest aught unusual to the older generation of our readers but the hidden significance will be disclosed when it is explained that Mrs. Williams, the mother of this stately beauty of the present day was in earlier years Mrs. Stephen A. Douglass, wife of one of the foremost men of his day and herself famous as the greatest beauty of the period.

Some time after the death of Stephen A. Douglass his widow married Gen. Williams of the United States Army. For a time the couple lived in Washington but Gen. Williams who was a man of some note became so incensed at hearing himself referred to only as the husband of the former Mrs. Stephen A. Douglass that he secured a transfer to a Western army post and remained in the wilds of western America for many years, not returning to the capital city until his wife's beauty was less conspicuous than formerly and he was himself less sensitive on the score of personal vanity.

Miss Mildred Williams was a great belle from the very day that she made her first formal bow to the social world. To be sure she had no dower but her own marvelous beauty but she made what the gossips pronounced a "great catch" when she married Walter Farwell of Chicago, one of the most prominent young millionaires of the Windy City.

Started with $10 Capital.

Young Farwell is the son of ex-Senator Farwell who started in life as a poor boy at Painted Post, New York, later removing to Illinois and eventually going to Chicago on a load of wheat with but $10 in his pocket. He secured employment in the county clerk's office; later became teller of a bank and finally established with his brother the great dry goods business which to this day causes the name of Farwell to be well known in mercantile circles. In 1887 the Farwell brothers built the Texas State Capitol receiving in payment therefor more than 3,000,000 acres of land. Much of this land they sold but considerable holdings of it went to form a gigantic ranch which was stocked with 150,000 cattle and helped materially to swell the Farwell fortune.

Both of Ex-Senator Farwell's daughters married men well known to the public so that the beautiful Mrs. Walter Farwell has two very prominent sisters-in-law. One is Mrs. Reginald De Koven, wife of the well known composer of Robin Hood and other operas, and the other is Mrs. Hobart Chatfield Tayler, who has gained fame and fortune as a writer of novels. Mrs. Farwell's home is in the beautiful family mansion in Chicago but she spends much of her time at the capital of the nation where she formerly resided and where her sister-in-law, Mrs. De Koven, has a handsome home.

Origin of Easter.

Easter is so called from the Saxon goddess, Easter, or as others think, from the Saxon, Oster,—to rise. In the East the day is known as the "Bright Day", and in Bohemia as the "Great Night."

The Russian Easter.

Easter Day is set apart for visiting in Russia. The men go to each other's houses in the morning and introduce themselves by saying, "Jesus Christ is risen." The answer is, "Yes, He is risen." The people then embrace, give each other eggs, and drink a great deal. They present a colored red egg to the priest of the parish on Easter morning. The common people carry one of these red eggs in their hands upon Easter Day, and three or four days after. They use it in token of the Resurrection, whereof they rejoice.

Oriental Egg Gamblers.

Hyde in his description of Oriental sports, tells of one with eggs among the Christians of Mesopotamia on Easter Day, and forty days afterward; "The sport consists in striking their eggs one against another, and the egg that first breaks is won by the owner of the one that struck it. Immediately another egg is pitted against the winning egg, and so on till the last egg wins all the others, which their respective owners shall before have won."

The great majority of Italian immigrants come from the southern provinces, mainly Sicily and Calabria. They are farm bred.

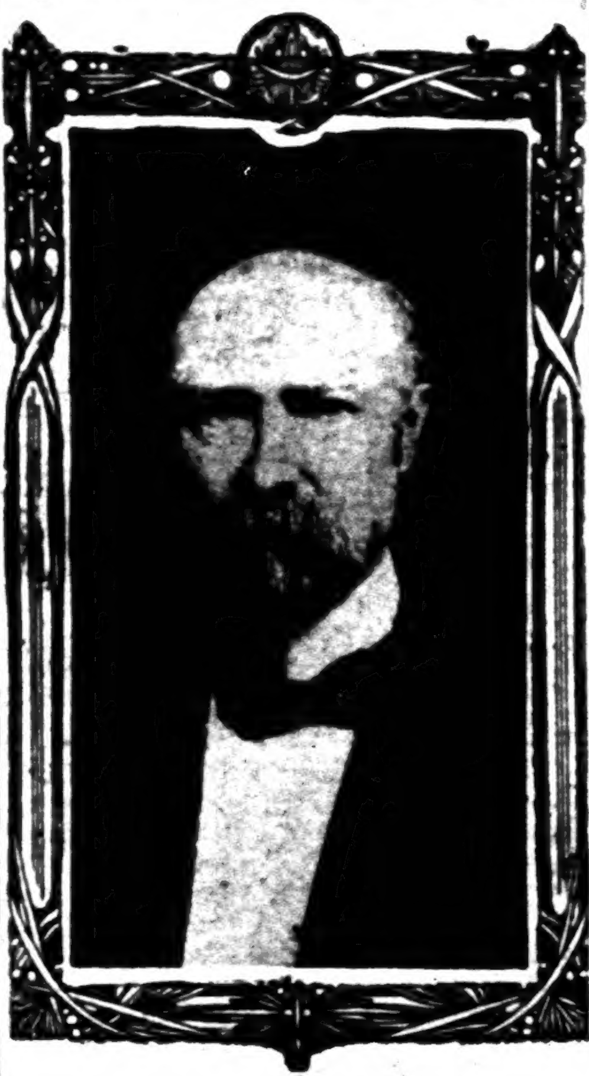
FAIRBANKS IS ACTIVE.

WORKING TO SECURE PLEDGES FOR THE PRESIDENTIAL NOMINATION IN 1908.

Is Sure of Indiana Delegation—Is Also Counting on Illinois, and Thinks Chances Good in Ohio—At Work in South.

Vice-President Fairbanks is 6 feet, 3 inches in height, the tallest man in the Senate. He is also looming up pretty tall as a presidential candidate for 1908.

Unless other candidates bestir themselves, Mr. Fairbanks will at no distant day have a sufficient number of delegates pledged to make him the most formidable candidate for the nomination.



VICE-PRESIDENT FAIRBANKS.

Mr. Fairbanks has had the Presidential bee in his bonnet for many years. He was a great favorite of President McKinley, and many persons believe that Mr. McKinley desired to see Mr. Fairbanks succeed him in the Presidential chair.

There have recently been long conferences between Indiana politicians, Mr. Fairbanks, and his friends, and there is good reason to believe that a great deal has been accomplished in the way of perfecting the organization formed for the purpose of securing the Republican nomination for Indiana's son two years hence.

Beveridge is in Line.

Everything is said to be lovely for Mr. Fairbanks in Indiana. He has cleaned up the opposing faction in the Republican party there, headed by the youthful Senator Beveridge, who is understood to have responded so readily to the treatment applied that he now gives three cheers every time the name of Fairbanks is mentioned in his presence. Senator Beveridge is no longer in a position to hamper the progress of the Fairbanks' boom in Indiana. In the factional fight over the State chairmanship, Mr. Beveridge suffered an ignominious rout, and even if he does not train with Mr. Fairbanks in the future, he will not actively oppose him.

Following Senator Hanna's Methods.

In his campaign to secure delegates for William McKinley in 1896, Marcus A. Hanna began his operations in the South. He had securely nailed down that section before the representatives of other candidates had begun to work. Mr. Hanna enlisted in the cause a number of young men, who went out looking for delegates and got them. Mr. Fairbanks knows something about the methods of Mr. Hanna, and his representatives are now treating with leading party men in the South. While the Republican party in the South is short on votes on election day, it is long on delegates in the national convention. This fact is keenly appreciated by Mr. Fairbanks.

Chances in Illinois.

The Vice-President is certain of Indiana's delegates, and he is counting upon Illinois. His fortunes in that State are in the hands of Charles G. Dawes, former Comptroller of the Currency, one of Mr. Hanna's "young men" in the pre-convention campaign made in the interest of the candidacy of Mr. McKinley. Fairbanks had strong and influential friends in Illinois and his chances of securing the delegation from that State are probably better than those of any other man who has been mentioned for the Presidential nomination, with the exception of Speaker Cannon. Mr. Dawes is understood to be the western manager of the Fairbanks boom. At least, such a report was circulated recently, and it has never been denied.

The Vice-President and his friends profess to believe the next standard bearer of the Republican party will be a western man. Ohio has two favorite sons in the persons of Secretary Taft and Senator Foraker. Both are very strong in Ohio and both are widely and favorably known throughout the country. The Fairbanks men believe that the rivalry of Taft and Foraker will prevent either of them securing the united support of Ohio's delegation to the next convention. Therefore, Fairbanks is figuring on the Buckeye state. Some of the Hoosier's friends are very enthusiastic, and to hear them one would think that the formalities of a nominating convention and an election might just as well be dispensed with.

Of course if Mr. Roosevelt should run for reelection, as it is being prominently argued that he will, notwithstanding his publicly expressed attitude against another term, it is admitted that he would be the practically unanimous choice for nomination and the work of the Fairbanks party would have been in vain.

INDIA'S RICHEST POTENTATE.

He Owns a Carpet Made of Precious Gems and Diamonds and Rubies by the Bushel.

During the stay of the Prince and Princess of Wales in India they will doubtless meet and be entertained by a personage who has every reason to be regarded as the richest of men in the Orient, if not in the whole world.

This is the Gaikwar (or Rajah) of Baroda, a potentate who well illustrates Milton's famous line concerning the "Barbaric pearl and gold" which the "gorgeous East" showers on its kings. No doubt, in point of annual income, there are richer men—Mr. John D. Rockefeller, for instance—but, from the standpoint of personal possessions the Gaikwar probably has no rival in the world.

When he came to the throne some twenty-five years ago the present ruler of Baroda found stored in the vaults of his palace wealth so colossal that a description of it outdoes the "Arabian Nights" itself. Certainly Aladdin never thought of a carpet of jewels, such as the Gaikwar possesses. To say that there is nothing like it in the world is only feebly to describe its glories, which can be better indicated by the statement that it is about four yards square and composed of ropes of rubies, diamonds, pearls, woven into a regular carpet well-defined pattern and border. Thousands of dollars' worth of jewels, every one of the finest quality, went to make up this wondrous carpet, the product of three years work by skilled artists and jewel setters.

Now, if the Gaikwar of Baroda were only moderately wealthy, this monarch of carpets would doubtless occupy the place of honour in his palace. But as he possesses jewels enough to set up a dozen ordinary monarchs the jewelled tapestry occupies an odd corner, and is shown to visitors as merely but one of the treasures of the palace.

Less of a curiosity, but far more valuable, is the Gaikwar's diamond necklace, a trinket the value of which several times make a man a millionaire. This necklace is the most magnificent in existence. And even the honor of possessing the second finest is denied to the rest of the world, for that also is amongst the Gaikwar's family jewels, being worn by his wife, who is, besides, dowered with brooches, bracelets, rings and other ornaments, the value of which is computed in millions of dollars.

Another notable ornament worn by the Gaikwar is a collarette made of five hundred diamonds of the purest water, which includes in its glittering rows the famous "Star of the South," the fourth largest diamond in the world.

Such a dazzling collection—such a "welter" of jewels—was, needless to say, not made in a single life-time. For centuries the Gaikwar's ancestors have been accumulating their treasures, until to-day the jewels alone could be measured in bushels. As for the rest, there are pictures in bronzes and statuary to the value of several millions of money.

A royal procession in Baroda is worth going many miles to see. Horses and elephants, all splendidly caparisoned and blazing with gems, lead the way; but the cynosure of all eyes is the Gaiker, not merely because of his personality, but also by reason of the stupendous wealth represented by the jewels with which he adorns himself.

He is, perhaps, the one man in the world who could wear that mammoth amongst gems, the great Premier Diamond, without incongruity.

Sleeping Car Acquaintances.

Representative Smith of Maryland is the subject of a good story these days. When he hears it he merely smiles and looks wise. Mr. Smith, the little narrative says, was standing a few days ago in front of the White House talking to two Secret Service men, when a boy came dashing out of the Executive Mansion.

"Who's that?" queried the Congressman.

"That's Archibald Roosevelt," he was informed.

A moment later another youngster appeared through the same door and Mr. Smith repeated his question.

"That's Kermit," said one of the guards.

Just then a third boy came swirling along on roller skates.

"I guess that's another one of the Roosevelts," suggested the man from Maryland.

"Yes," was the answer, "That's Quentin."

"By gum," commented Mr. Smith, "they've all got names like sleeping cars. I feel just as if I were standing on the station platform at home watching the limited express shoot by."

A DARKY CHRISTENING.

WEIRD SCENE AMONG THE SOUTHERN COLORED BAPTISTS—FEET WASHING.

Third Letter of Account of Trip into the Sunny Southland.—Interesting Visits to Jacksonville, Savannah and Richmond.

The first Sunday we spent in Eustis we drove to Lake Gracie, just in the rear of the hotel grounds, to witness the Baptist colored immersion. It was a perfect June morning, with settings of pure gold. It did not seem possible that it was windy March at home. The orange groves reached down to the very edge of the lake, which lay placed, like a mirror. Several of the guests rowed across from the hotel to witness the ceremony. Presently the preacher, followed by his candidates and flock, came through the woods singing one of their wild refrains. A few words from the Good Book, a prayer, all kneeling, and then an exhortation delivered with much vigor. The baptism was quietly performed with the exception of the case of one of the sister candidates who felt so happy, that two men were obliged to carry her out of the water. In the evening we all drove to Egypt, the colored settlement, and I never in my life attended such a service. It was the first Sunday in March, which is a high day in the church—"The Primative Baptist." The church building is a little wooden structure with bare benches along each side and a rough table in front of a box of a pulpit. When we entered, a prayer meeting was being held. As many of the native congregation cannot read, the hymns are lined, two lines at a time—and such strange music I never heard. They don't seem to sing the words; it is just a loud monotonous refrain, and was perfectly deafening in that small building. The prayers were mostly ejaculations to the Lord, accompanied with clapping of hands and loud expressions from all the brothers and sisters. The sermon was the most rambling discourse imaginable, beginning with Genesis and ending in Revelations, accompanied with vigorous pantomine of face, arms and legs. Then the darkies screamed and yelled at the top of their voices and during all of which one of the sisters got "happy" and surged over into another seat, screaming and jumping up and down. Several buxom sisters held her until she became quiet. Then the collection was taken up, each one going up to the table and laying his money on it; while all the time this dreadful singing continued without a break or interruption.

A Modern Amazon.

Then "Aunt Savannah," the Captain of the frail sex, became busy. She was attired in a white and gray cotton mother hubbard gown tied around the waist with a white apron, around her neck she wore a black, fur collar and on her head a very broad, brimmed black hat turned up on one side in a jaunty manner. This colored lady, weighing 285 pounds, as I was told, proceeded to set the communion table. From his chair in the pulpit, the minister called out, "Let us know, sister, when you are ready, and we'll begin business." "All right," responded Aunt Savannah cheerfully, "Ise ready." Then right in the midst of the service another woman became happy, jumping over in the seat back of her directly among the women and babies, and I don't know why the babies were not killed. Such a scattering I never saw before. Pandemonium reigned, but all the time the plate of bread was being passed.

CONFEDERATE MONUMENT AT SAVANNAH.

Washing Their Feet.

Then came the "foot washing." Two ten-cent basins were placed on the table; the men and women took off their shoes and stockings; the preacher washed the first elder's feet, wiping them with the towel which was girdled around his waist; then passed the basin and towel to the elder, who washed the next one's feet, and so on until all were done. Aunt Savannah then began a like ceremony on the sister's side of the church; and all the time the dreadful singing, shouting, clapping of hands, stamping of washed and unwashed feet continued in a deafening racket. Finally the table was taken away, and we saw the "Holy Dance." The men and women formed a ring, whirling round and round, swaying their bodies, clapping hands, singing, shouting, swinging and wringing their here Winter Strawberries Grow.

March 15th we took the train for cala, the next day reached Lawtie, a uiet little town settled by northern- s devoted to strawberry culture. Here e spent a week driving, walking, sit- ng on the broad piazza of the hotel n the sun, getting tanned and fat. othing here is cultivated but acres nd acres of strawberries, little tiny lants; but raise the leaves and you an pick nearly a quart from one vine. he number of quarts shipped north uring the season is fabulous, but oc- asional freezes do damage.

The mornings and evenings were al- ays cold, so we had a wood fire in he big fire-place in our room, of fat itch pine wood, and it was very fas- inating to watch the fire light, as it lickered here and there, lighting the oom so that we needed no lamp. All hrough the South the mocking birds vere singing, calling and answering ach other day and night. Returning o Jacksonville we devoted the few hours we had to visiting the shops and he Exposition building. Here in the Alligator Pool we saw a number of the ncanny looking beasts, the largest of which was ten feet long, so utterly hideous and ugly that he was most fas- cinating to me. Our next stop was at Savannah, where we drove all over the city and out on the beautiful shell road to the old cemetery, called "Bon- aventure" (Beautiful Way), where the trees, great live oaks, covered with gray moss, are a hundred years old.

Great Natural Arches.

Roads have been cut through the woods and the effect is indescribable; it is like driving through great cathedral arches, so sombre and solemn, and so grand withal, a fitting place for the dead. Savannah is a beautiful old city, with many parks and squares planted with palms and palmettos, right in its heart. The magnolias seem the favorite tree, and they grow to a great height. The houses are large and broad, with verandas all around the two stories, and they must be needed in the hot summer. We had a very full day, and at seven o'clock took the sleeper for Richmond. We rode all the next day, reaching our destination in the evening, and drove to Ford's Hotel, where we had stopped thirty-five years ago on our wedding trip. But the hotel had changed, the city has grown, and nothing looked natural except Sunset Park and the old Capitol Park. The grass was turning green and the numerous gray squirrels were so tame they came and ate from my hand. We drove all the morning, visiting the beautiful statue of Gen. Robert E. Lee—a bronze equestrian on an immense granite pedestal. In the afternoon we drove to the park and hunted up Mr. Pollard, the Virginian who captured my husband during the war. It was their first meeting since that memorial time when they were mere boys, one wearing the blue and the other the gray, and they had a most interesting "war talk."

The next morning we took our train for Washington exactly five weeks from the day we left. It has been truly a delightful trip, beneficial in health and education, perfectly charming in every way, whose memory will go with me through life.

PRINCE WHO LIKES HORSES.

Brother of Heir to German Crown a Rough Rider.

Eitel Frederick, prince of Prussia, and younger brother of the crown prince of Germany, is considered one of the finest horsemen of Europe. The German people love him greatly for this, along with his kindness to his animals, a quality sometimes wanting when great daring is possessed by boys.

When the prince was sixteen he was given the freedom of the royal stables and told that he could select one of the fine Arabian ponies for his own use. He asked if he could look after him just as boys in lesser stations in life do with their ponies, and his father's reply was.

"I want my boys to know how to work and care for everything that belongs to them."

Eitel did care for his pony and spent many moments learning all about the needs and nature of horses. He discovered that his Arabian could jump and, riding him one day, he cleared a four-barred fence, which greatly delighted the emperor, who was riding with him.

A short time after this his father gave him a powerful hunting horse. The boy looked like a midget on him, but would not ride him for three or four days.

"A horse needs to know you," he gravely said, "before he makes up his mind whether you will be kind and reasonable with him, or harsh."

After boy and horse had become acquainted he invited his father to take a ride in his company. The two set out for a gallop through the forests. Emperor William is regarded as a splendid horseman, but he told a circle of friends after this ride, that Eitel had given him a ride for his life. He leaped ditches and hedges, took the roughest roads, held his horse under perfect control and won the greatest praise.

It is told of this boy that he cannot go into the royal stables without every horse in the stalls turning his head and whinnying a glad welcome.

GREAT CHIEF JOSEPH.

A NOBLE AND BELOVED AMERICAN INDIAN WHO DIED OF A WOUNDED HEART.

Pathetic Tale of Government's Broken Promises.—His Ancestors Welcomed Lewis and Clark in Their Western Explorations.

C. J. BLANCHARD.

The most picturesque character of the western frontier passed away last year when Chief Joseph of the Nez Perces, or, as they knew him, In-mut-too-yah-lat-lat (Thunder traveling over the mountains), folded his blanket about him and passed beyond the Great Divide. The members of his tribe, all of whom were singularly devoted to him, and the privileged few of the white race who knew him intimately, believe that this great leader, perhaps the greatest Indian leader of the period, died of homesickness and heartache.

To know Chief Joseph was to have revealed to you a glimpse into a vanished past. There was a loftiness and dignity mingled with a charming naiveté in his manner, and a tender pathos in his speech, that made you forget the Indian and recall the old Hebrew prophets of the days of the Captivity.

CHIEF JOSEPH AND MONUMENT UNVEILED BY WARRIORS OF H'S TRIBE.

As the chief and historian of his tribe, Joseph's plea for the Nez Perces has often been heard in Washington. In its deep sense of eternal righteousness and of the deadly wrong suffered at the hands of the white man; in its smothered fire and in its hopeful longing for the coming of justice and better times for the tribe, it was the most powerful and pathetic appeal ever made by an Indian.

From the viewpoint of close association with the red man, his faults are magnified and his virtues forgotten. From the viewpoint of the reader of Cooper and other romantic writers on Indian topics, his vices are obscured, and his virtues unduly exaggerated. Judged from the impartial standpoint of a rather long acquaintance, which contains meetings in camp and city, in the writer's opinion, Chief Joseph was the finest type of the red man this country will ever know.

He died of homesickness, and that statement will provoke no sceptical smile from one who knows the Indian character. The earth that contains the ashes of an Indian's dead is sacred and hallowed. The longing in an Indian's heart for the land of his birth is as strong as that which turns our wandering footsteps back to the old home. When Fate in the shape of an unkind Government forcibly wrests from him the land of his fathers, his grief, though repressed and concealed, is as poignant as our own would be, if we were so treated.

Loved Home of the Tribe.

I recall one expression of Joseph's in this connection. "My father is buried in Wallowa Valley. I love that land more than all the rest of the world. A man who would not love his father's grave is worse than a wild animal."

Have you ever been in Wallowa, that beautiful valley of Winding Waters? It is America's Switzerland. Its lofty mountains rear their heads so high that a snow mantle rests there all the year round. Their feet are in lakes which rival Luzerne. Down the steep slopes, through narrow walled canyons which the sunlight never enters, the streams come rushing like cataracts. In their cold ripples the gamey trout lurks expectant eager to give battle for his life when the angler tempts him to the hook. In the autumn the salmon, in countless numbers, leap the waterfalls, and are caught and dried by the Indians for winter food. On the forested slopes, in shadowy ravines, and over the rolling hills, the deer and elk, the caribou, the grizzly and the cinnamon, and the wary mountain sheep abound. It is a game paradise, with rich pastures for ponies.

It was in this valley that the grandfather of Chief Joseph welcomed the daring explorers, Lewis and Clark. Speaking of them, Joseph said: "They talked straight, and our people made them a great feast. All the Nez Perces made friends with Lewis and Clark, and agreed to let them pass through the country, and never to make war on white men. And this promise the Nez Perces have never broken. No white man can accuse them of bad faith, and speak with a straight tongue. It has always been the pride of the Nez Perces that they were the friends of the white men."

Encroachments of the White Men.

It was not to be expected that the Indian would be allowed to remain forever unmolested in the possession of this beautiful valled. When the western fever broke out, settlers came at first in small numbers, and the valley being large, all lived in peace. But it could not last. There came a day when by means of presents and fair promises a portion of the band signed a treaty dividing their lands. Joseph's father refused to sign away his birth-right, and withdrew his band from the council. In 1863, another council was held. A chief, named Lawyer, with authority of a part of the tribe, sold nearly all of the Nez Perces country, including the Wallowa Valley. The latter was the particular property of Joseph's own people; its boundaries, for years, had been marked by poles; had never been disputed. The old chief said: "Inside is the home of my people—the white man may take the land outside. Inside the boundary, all our people were born. It circles around the graves of our fathers, and we never give up their graves to any man."

In spite of the treaty, the Indians remained in unmolested possession for eight years, when the white men began to encroach upon the boundaries. The conditions threatened to become serious, and the Government asked for a treaty council. Joseph, owing to his father's age and blindness, represented his people. He refused to remove to the Lapwai agency in Idaho and give up the valley, so the council came to naught.

From that time on, the white settlers gave constant offense to the Indians. They stole their horses, drove off their cattle and branded the calves, and then claimed them. It speaks well for the strong hand Joseph held over his people, and for his desire for peace, that the Indians were patient so long. Finally, Joseph was notified by General Howard, that it was the purpose of the Government to remove the Nez Perces to the reservation, as they had sold their land to the Government.

Incontrovertible Indian Logic.

Joseph always denied such a sale. He said: "Suppose a man should come to me and say: 'Joseph, I like your horses and want to buy them.' I Say to him: 'No my horses suit me, I will not sell them.' Then he goes to my neighbor, and says to him: 'Joseph has some good horses. I want to buy them, but he refuses to sell.' My neighbor answers: 'Pay me the money, and I will sell you Joseph's horses.' The white man returns to me and says: 'Joseph I have bought your horses and you must let me have them.' If we sold our land to the Government, this is the way it was bought."

Great Chief Joseph.

In the war which followed, Joseph led his little band, as only a great general could lead them, but; the Nez Perces never had a chance to win. Joseph surrendered to General Miles, and for years the tribe was moved back and forth over the country regardless of promises made when they surrendered. After one of Joseph's visits to Washington, where he met the President, the Cabinet officers, and numerous Congressmen, he remarked: "They all say they are my friends, and that I shall have justice, but while their mouths all talk right, I do not understand why nothing is done for my people. I have heard talk and talk, but nothing is done. Words do not pay for my dead people. They do not pay for my country overrun by white men. It makes my heart sick when I remember all the good words and all the broken promises. You might as well expect the river to run backward, as that any man who was born free should be contented, when penned up and denied liberty, to go where he pleases.

Pathetic Plea for Freedom.

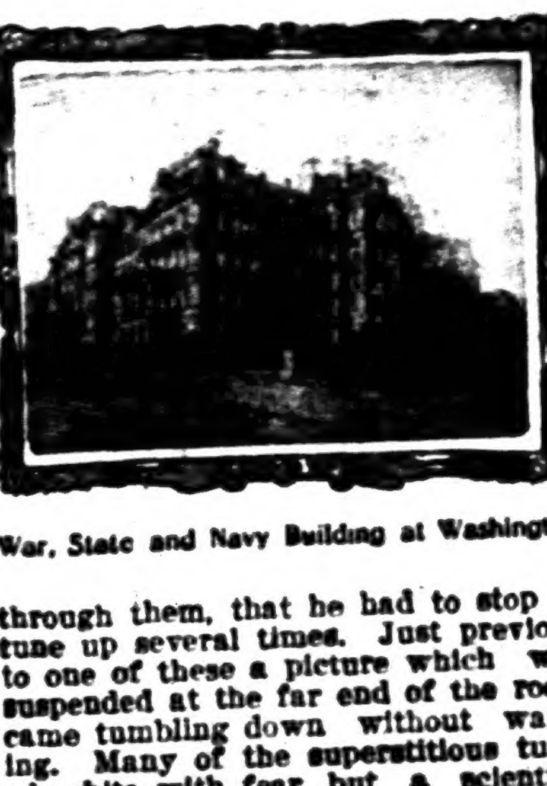
"Oh let me be a free man! free to travel, free to stop, free to work, free to trade where I chose, free to choose my own teachers, free to follow the religion of my fathers, free to think and talk and act for myself—and I will obey every law or submit to the penalty."

Gradually as the years passed away, Joseph grew to understand the hopelessness of achieving his heart's desire—a return to Wallowa, though he never ceased to make his plea for justice. When the end came a year ago, he was surrounded by the remnant of his band, who stood beside his deathbed in silent grief.

On the 20th of September last, these same devoted members of the tribe stood around the grave of Joseph and listened to the funeral address delivered by his successor and friend. On this occasion a monument was unveiled—a most unusual Indian ceremony.

Remarkable Effect of Vibrations.

From time to time scientists advance new theories of the cause of some of the miracles mentioned in the Bible, and now the miraculous fall of the walls of Jericho is said by men of learning to have been caused by the fact that the tone pitch of the trumphets of the followers of Joshua was exactly in harmony with the sensitive tone of the walls. When the trumpets were blown they set the walls of the biblical town to vibrating and in a short time their foundations were so weakened that the entire mass fell to the ground.



War, State and Navy Building at Washington

This statement was brought out at a private social gathering the other evening in Philadelphia where music was the feature. During the course of the evening a 'cello performer was called on for so many encores of weird pieces with minor chords running through them, that he had to stop to tune up several times. Just previous to one of these a picture which was suspended at the far end of the room came tumbling down without warning. Many of the superstitious turned white with fear, but a scientific man in the room went to some length to explain that the fall of the picture had been caused by a vibration of the wire set up by a note of a particular pitch made by the 'cello. He stated that every stretched string has some particular musical pitch which will set it vibrating. To emphasize his argument he asked the performer to strike different tones and in a short time other pictures in the room were set vibrating so violently as to make the movement perceptible to the eye.

The 'cellolst also succeeded in setting up vibrations on a piece of glassware on the mantel, which caused it to give out a musical note.

Affected Building Foundations.

A couple of days after President Roosevelt's inauguration, last March, the whole body of Rough Riders from Minnesota called on Secretary Taft in the magnificent State, War, and Navy Building. Accompanied by their brass band of some fifty or sixty pieces they lined up before e Secretary's office and with ragtime music serenaded the Secretary. Upon l aring the music the superintendent of the building at once asked the leader to refrain from playing any more in the building as there was a tendency to weaken the building's foundations. In fact, in this instance, the vibrations set forth were plainly perceptible, not only to those in the vicinity of the band but to clerks on other floors of the building.

MARKET GARDEN TYPE.

New Style of Auto Suitable for Carrying Farm Produce.

One of the first cable pictorial descriptions of the useful war automobile, as shown in the illustration, has just came to hand. This is a special farmer's type. It can be constructed in any small power, for jogging along purposes, from 30 to 120 horse. A special feature of interest to market gardners is the ability of the wagon to run for twenty minutes after having the tires riddled with bullets, which makes it thoroughly practical. It is entirely bomb-proof when beyond the range of the enemy's guns. A "starting crank" is fitted in front, but "the machine can be started automatically from the drivers seat," where the principal crank is supposed to be located. "On the top of the rear portion of the box" the specifications read, "is a turret from which projects a Hotchkiss gun which can be trained in any direction"—upon competing market gardners." A special quality of steel has been employed for armor." At 300 yards Lebel bullets fail to pierce, but glance off, thus insuring adequate protection to loads of eggs, live shoats and other tender vegetables.

"The machine carries two steel rails, which can be quickly unshipped and placed across a ditch." This feature is of great import to the average tiller of soil, as it means that if the machine becomes frightened or unmanagable due to the sudden appearance of horsemen or the flight of birds, and jumps ditches or fences, it can be quickly gotten back into the road, and sped along for the early morning market. The cost of this little delivery wagon is only $16,000; which of course places it within the reach of any farmer and every editor of a paper—that is if he happens to be close enough so that he can touch it. It is estimated that if all the garden and farm produce could be marketed by means of this simple and inexpensive device the cost to the city consumer would not be increased over 200% at the most.

The Lilies of the Chancel

An Easter Story

By Elizabeth Vore.

From [illegible]

stretch of azure sky, changing to al tints of evening; a smiling ex- of sea, with a long line of curling ers lashing the sandy beach— is what Rosa might have seen as ed by the calla lily hedge, with int breeze stirring the magnolia s.

It is doubtful if she saw any- g. Her eyes held a dreamy far- look, and the waving green es outlined like lacework st the evening sky, the wind- d stretch of sea and the scent of wilderness of bloom were lost up- r.

her arms was a profusion of lil- spray upon spray, almost more than slender arms could carry, for the w was Easter day. Tall and stat- as a lily herself, Rosa stood, lost editation, her face scarcely less and pure than the waxen blossoms, as colorless, save for the scarlet with its haughty curves. A proud face was hers, and cold as white mist that, like a dim ron, was stealthily marching in the sea.

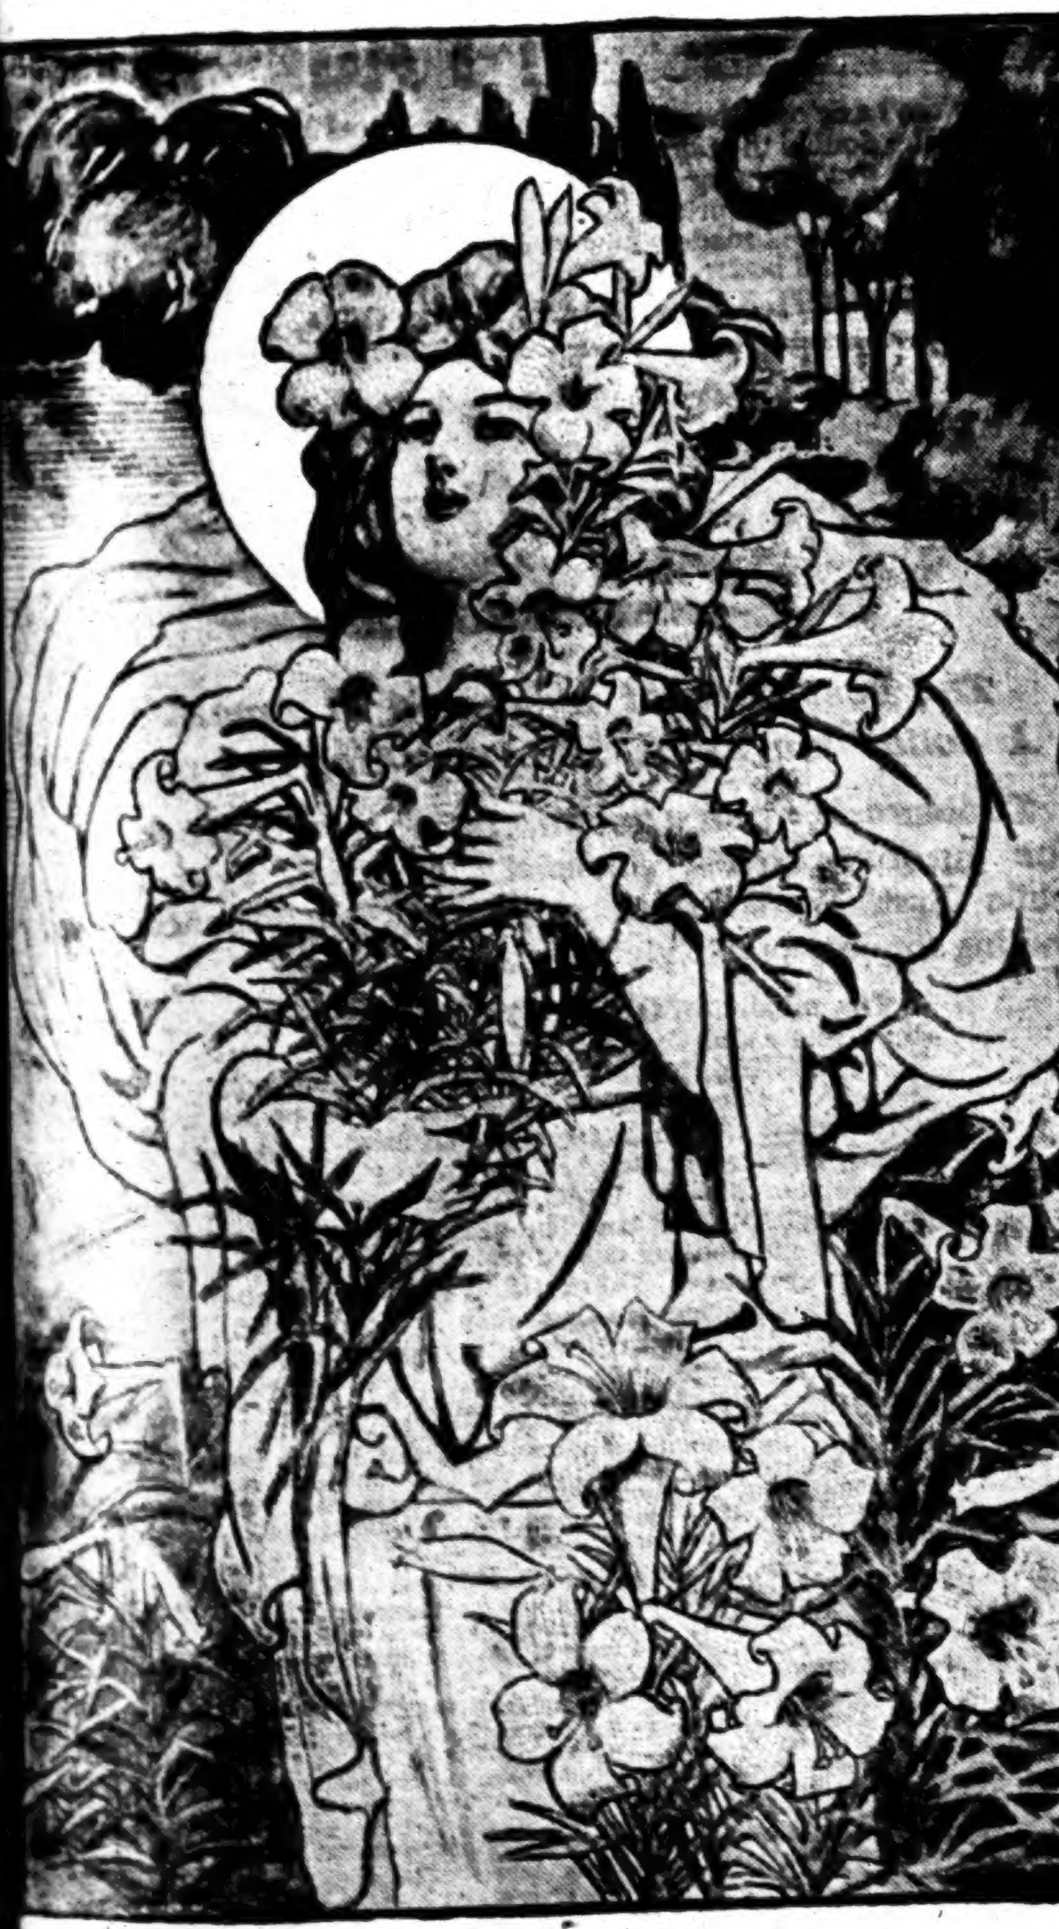
the still, languorous air, suddenly clear, sweet note rang out—the s of the old mission bells. The d music reached Rosa's ears, ing her from her reverie. Dis- ging one slender hand she made sign of the cross; her lips moved tly.

There was a sound near at hand of halting footsteps. A man, young, of haggard countenance, was ap- ching under the shadow of the s.

t Rosa only heard the vesper es.

Nearer the man drew until he stood bly before her, his head bared, shabby hat in his trembling hand. e raised his eyes, full of dumb wist- ess to her face. The passionate and despair of a tortured soul was them. He stood motionless, as on iting his sentence.

Sweet and high the chimes of the s arose and fell. Something like b escaped the man's lips; his thin, wn fingers worked convulsively.



"IN HER ARMS WAS A PROFUSION OF LILIES."

As if from a dream, Rosa started and turned her sombre eyes upon him. A swift crimson flooded her face and suddenly receded, leaving it as white as the lilies upon her heaving bosom.

"Diego."

The name fell involuntarily from her unwilling lips.

"It is I, Rosa mia," faltered the man, huskily.

She raised her head proudly and stepped back a pace; her beautiful mouth hardened.

He lifted his hand with a swift motion of pain and arested the unspoken words upon her lips.

"Nay, spare me, I beseech thee, carita; it is not to trouble thee that I am here. Only the desire to see thee face to face and ask thy forgiveness before I go away forever hath lent me courage. I cannot live near thee and know that I have lost thee. Tell me, adorado, by the love thy didst once bear me, that thou wilt forgive me, unworthy though I am."

"Thou," she cried in cold scorn. "Thou hast dared to come to me after all thy dishonor and crime. Know I not—is it not known to all the town—that only thy uncle's name and money saved thee from just punishment in prison? And once I plighted my troth—I once believed that I loved such a one as thou."

The man bowed his head on his hands and groaned aloud.

"Dios," he muttered, "It is more than I can bear. I know that I have been adjudged guilty of theft, yet, it was for thy sake that I—" he checked himself suddenly—, "and the saints alone know how hard, how unjust," he flashed out, "hath been my lot, and a man may repent, Rosa."

"I saw thee drinking in the plaza but yesterday," she said coldly, "Is that thy repentance?"

"It is killing me, adorado, every hand is against me. I am weak, unworthy, but I can forget in no other way."

"Thou hast come here against my command—see that thou dost not repeat it," said Rosa in icy tones. "And now go, for I would hasten to the chapel to carry my flowers for the chancel."

He raised his eyes imploringly to her face.

"Madre de Dios. I am in purgatory. Thou art so far above me—like the saints. Rosa! Rosa! I am unfit to touch thee—yet, I am going away forever. Give me one of thy lilies—only one, carita, because they are, like thou art, as pure as the angels of God."

He reached out his hand timidly, but Rosa drew back as if his touch were profanation.

"They are sacred lilies," she said, coldly. "I have none to spare. They are for the chancel—to be placed upon the altar. A thief may not touch them."

He winced and shrank away. He could not know that her hands were clenched until the nails made cruel marks in her tender palms. He only saw the stern, accusing eyes and heard the pitiless words that fell, like molten fire, and scorched themselves into his soul.

As one who had received a mortal stab, he turned and walked despondently away.

It was Easter day in the land of perpetual bloom, where winter is summer and summer is paradise. In the early morning, as the gray curtain of fog rolled back to the sea, and the sun, a disk of golden flame, bathed sea and sky in a flood of glory, Rosa wended her way to the chapel to add the last touches to the decorations for the Easter service.

Down on the beach a crowd had gathered. Men were running to and fro. One hastened toward her on his way to the town. He was hatless and disheveled, and, as he drew near, she saw that his face was ghastly.

"It is Diego Bernello," he said, breathlessly. "They have just brought him in and are carrying him to the chapel. The Padre is with him, but nothing can avail him now. He went out this morning with the fishermen, and, in coming in, the boat was overturned. Ah! but Diego was brave. Thanks to his courage, all were saved but himself. Two lives hath he rescued from death, and I, for one, declare that it had blotted out his transgressions—"

The speaker broke off abruptly and caught at Rosa's arm. Her face was ashen, and he thought she would have fallen.

With a bitter cry, she broke away from him and sped toward the crowd on the beach.

In the old chapel a hard battle was fought. A battle for a life by tireless hands that would not recognize defeat; at last when they were despairing, a shudder ran over the prostrate form.

"The Virgin be praised. He hath moved," whispered one near him.

"Diego," said a voice, stifled with sobs.

He opened his eyes feebly and gazed about him in a vague bewilderment. Had some one spoken, or had he dreamed it? Why was he in the chapel—the place sacred to the saints—he, the outcast, the despised, the heart-broken?

Suddenly his eyes caught the white gleam of waxen blossoms upon his breast; a great awe entered his face.

"Jesu Maria," he murmured. "The lilies of the chancel."

"Nay, but thine own, Diego mio," sobbed Rosa, brokenly. Her arms were about him, her tears were upon his face. "Thine own, adorado," she whispered tremulously; "all thine—the lilies of Diego. I have robbed the altar for thy dear sake."

"This is the day of resurrection," said the Padre, solemnly.

"Madre de Christo," the people muttered. "It is a miracle."

And it was—a miracle of love.

EASTER AT THE WHITE HOUSE.

Time Honored Practice of Letting the Children of Washington Roll Eggs on President's Grounds.

Easter Monday in Washington is an event in the lives of the children which is ahead of any other day in the year exepting Christmas and Fourth of July.

Why? Because Easter Monday means egg-rolling. For many years the little ones of Washington have congregated by the hundreds and thousands to roll eggs Easter Monday in the beautiful grounds surrounding the home of the President of the nation. There is no sign to keep off the grass and there are no restrictions. The children own the place. The green grass of the White House lawns is covered with children, children innumerable, rolling eggs on the grassy slopes.

If the day is pleasant it is a sight to be remembered. The children have been looking forward to the festival for days and weeks and great has been their anticipation. But genuine is the sorrow and many the tears among the little ones if Easter Sunday should be cold and rainy with promise of a bad Monday. Yet no weather has ever been so bad as to keep everyone away from the White House grounds on egg-rolling day. There are many hardy little spirits who will not be daunted by snow or cold or rain when it comes to rolling eggs.

If the day is pleasant and the air balmy and the turf warm and green, what a time the children have. Such games as they invent to play with their eggs—games of infinite variation containing infinite amusement. The grounds look more like a juvenile fair than anything else—an egg fair and the biddy hens around Washington must needs have been very diligent for many days before. If the day is fair, too, the glorious Marine Band, the finest band in the country, plays sweet music, and the children dance and gambol to its strains. Truly it is children's day in Washington.

Wonderfully Colored Eggs.

By 9 o'clock in the morning the grounds are actually taken possession of by the youngsters, little kids with wicker baskets and vari-colored eggs, wonderful eggs of green and blue and red and purple and gold and then eggs of lovely combination, and with beautiful figures, such as would make a wise hen cock her head on one side and wonder greatly what happened to her plain white eggs.

All sorts and conditions of children find their way to the President's grounds to enjoy Easter Monday. Some of the children are beautifully dressed in silks and laces and have French nurses to watch over them and carry their eggs for them, while other little ones are dressed in very shabby garments with elbows out and toes peeping from their little shoes. They perhaps have only three or four plainly colored eggs boiled in a piece of purple or red calico. No French nurses accompany them, carrying eggs with gilt picures, but they can roll their eggs and themselves on the green grass and soil their frocks and trousers to their heart's content, and they will enjoy the holiday perhaps more than their more fortunate companions. Usually the mothers of these little men and women come with them, tired-faced women often, looking as though it had been a long day since they had enjoyed such a time. Here and there are little groups of mothers and older sisters, talking together pleasantly, but keeping watchful eyes to see that the little ones do not get lost in the crowd or stray too far away.

Not Afraid of the Policeman.

It is a good natured crowd. The big policemen standing around possess no terror for the little ones on egg-rolling day. They know that all that big policemen are for on Easter, is to keep grown up people from interfering with the little ones who are rolling eggs. And when the little people get lost now and then, the big policemen are there to take them in charge and tell them not to cry until their mothers and sisters find them again. Then there are great rivalries among the children. Some of them are regular little gambers. One little fellow gets hold of a very hard egg and he goes around picking eggs with his acquaintances or acquaintances he finds, and wins their eggs from them until finally he strikes some other little fellow who has a harder egg than his, and then he loses a lot of eggs.

And some of the little rascals gamble on what is a "sure thing," with a china egg, sized and painted to resemble a genuine egg, or with a hen's egg run full of plaster of paris they will go around, and, of course win all the eggs they contest for, until some sharp little fellow finds out the game they are playing. As the day advances and the children get hungry, the peanut man and the popcorn man and the candy man at the gates do a thriving business, while at noon, many are the little groups under the trees, sitting around on blankets and shawls and eating lunches, for they are making a regular picnic of it and staying all day.

The Children of Presidents.

President Harrison's two grand children witnessed, with great enjoyment, the egg-rolling from the porch of the White House facing toward the Washington monument and looking past and across the Potomac to Arlington, the former home of General Lee, but where now are spread the silent tents of a vast host of the Union army who have passed across to the great beyond.

President Cleveland's two little girls, Ruth and Esther, were real little democrats. They took their own eggs and went out among the crowd of happy children, and they rolled eggs with the other children, as common clay as their associates, not the children of the President of the United States, but the children of an American citizen. Perhaps a little extra watch was kept over them, but they didn't know it and they thought that Easter Monday was the happiest day in their little lives.

The Roosevelt children are past the age of egg-rolling; but they enjoy with the President and Mrs. Roosevelt, watching the gay throng of youngsters who romp over the White House grounds on Easter Mondays.

There was a time however, when the children of Washington did not roll eggs on the President's grounds. Not that they did not roll eggs though. Oh no! The have always rolled eggs on Easter Monday. But they used to roll them in the Capitol grounds, down the steep terrace which was on the west front of the Capital. Then there came a time when the Capitol grounds were changed, and a big flight of steps built where the terrace used to be, and some dyspeptic in Congress objected to the children romping on the smooth grass of the big sward and rolling their eggs.

General Hayes was President then, and he heard of it, and how dissapointed the children were because they had no place to roll their eggs that year, and the kindly man said: "Why let them roll their eggs on the White House grounds and enjoy themselves." And thus it has been ever since, from year to year.

BRAVED DEATH VALLEY.

Nevada Woman Penetrated Fastness for Wealth—Was Accompanied by Only Half Breed.

The weird Funeral Mountain of Death Valley, Nevada, are to yield rich offerings of copper and gold ores as a result of the successful prospecting of Miss Lillian Malcolm, who it is stated, discovered these deposits on a ridge that towers three thousand feet in the air. In making this find she was accompanied only by an Indian half-breed.

Once Lillian Malcolm, according to her story, crossed the Chilcoot in Alaska, alone, in her search for gold. The railroad had not been built that has since minimized the difficulties of Alaskan travel in the Chilcoot region. Miss Malcolm declares that the tour of the Funeral Mountains however was more hazardous than her lonely journey through the Chilcoot, years ago.

MISS LILLIAN MALCOLM.

"No white person has ever visited the spot where I viewed the great copper deposit until I made my way there," she said in a recent interview. "I have never before seen such ruggedness in mountains as the Funeral Range presents. To climb up almost perpendicular grades means to slide down others before the objective point can be reached. I have been a prospector for ten years and have passed much of my time in the mountains of Alaska, Colorado and other places where there is gold. The Funeral Range is the worst of any. I made up my mind that I would search for gold and copper in the foothills of the Funeral Mountains. I was compelled to cross the range to get where I wished to go, and although I had no fear, there were minutes when, in climing, I did not dare to look back, but only kept right on.

"There were many places where a misstep meant sure death. All there was to do was to go head. Once started, there was no way to stop without confessing defeat. Finally I found what I was looking for. At first I could hardly believe my eyes. I had reached a point about twenty-five miles from the line of the Clark road and sixteen miles from the line of the 'Borax Smith' road, when the ledge loomed up immensely.

"Then I was happy. I have studied minerology, geology, and other lines leading to mining, and I have done assessment work with my own hands in deep shafts. In short, my experience has been such that I believe that I am competent to know whether my mineral discoveries are valuable.

"The ledge stands up clearly from fifty to seventy-five feet, with both gold and copper in it—but more copper than gold. Millions maybe there in easy reach—a quantity that I believe is almost beyond ordinary computation. If I am not mistaken the discovery is valuable not only for its richness but also because it opens up knowledge of an entirely new copper belt in the Death Valley."

Picturesqueness is added to Miss Malcom's trip by the fact that the Indian halfbreed that she took into the desert where so many strong men have died is "Bill Kee," who is "Scotty's" friend. This Indian is a good guide.

The next step that Lillian Malcolm contemplates is that of informing the railroad builders, now constructing lines into the mineralized regions of Nevada, of the topographical features of the country to be crossed in order to bring her copper and gold discoveries reasonably within transportation facilities, and the place that formerly required weeks for her to reach will soon be made accessible, when the present railroading surveys are carried out in rails. There is plenty of timber in the Panamint Mountains that can be utilized for mining purposes, and the toot of the steam whistle may yet be heard in the fearful fastnesses of desolation that have so long appalled stout-hearted men, only to be conquered finally by a woman in search of precious metals.

POMPEII, THE VALIANT.

Story of the Hero of a Hundred Bad Runaways.

Pompeii, of the New York mounted police squad, and one of the most intelligent members of the force, was retired from active service the other day. When the stroke of the auctioneer's hammer put the big bay out of service, he was saved from the ragman's cart and night hawk cab by the devotion of his fifteen-year friend and comrade, Mounted Policeman Redmond P. Keresey, of the West 152d street police station.

Pompeii had spent nearly twenty years in the service and knew the rules of the department better than many a roundsman. He was the show horse of the force. Catching runaways was his business, but mathematics was his diversion. He could add, subtract, divide and multiply, and for years had been a source of delight to the school children along Seventh Avenue, where he was on duty between 110th and 153d streets.

The children would gather around Pompeii in the afternoons and talk to him.

Good at Mental Arithmetic.

When a sum in arithmetic was given him Pompeii would listen attentively to the figures, ponder over them for a moment, and then announce the answer by striking the ground with his left forefoot. If the answer was the half of something Pompeii indicated it by bending his foreleg at the knee and holding it for a moment. His friends insist that he could tell time by looking at a watch and announce the hour and half hour in the same way as he did his sums.

Playing with the children was by no means the best part of Pompeii's service. The records show that he and his master have stopped more than a hundred runaways in the last fifteen years. In several instances lives were saved. Policeman Keresey and Pompeii have been almost inseperable ever since the latter joined the force. Again and again the comrades were parted for a short time when Keresey was transferred from one precinct to another, but each time the policeman managed to have his favorite sent after him.

Hurt While Stopping Runaway.

A short time before the arrival of Prince Henry in New York, Pompeii was badly hurt while stopping a runaway at Seventh avenue and 125th street. Two days later, while acting as a guide for the Prince some dirt got in the wound and blood poisoning set in. Keresey managed to get placed on reserve duty and gave all his time to nursing Pompeii back to health. The police veterinary condemned the horse as unfit for duty, but Keresey managed to evade the decision for a few days. Then Pompeii made a spectacular run along the avenue and stopped a bad runaway in such style that nothing more was said about retirement.

The fatal day was only put off, however, and last month the big bay was sold at auction at the stables of the West 152d street station. Keresey was on hand with $400, all the ready money he could scrape together, determined not to be separated from his old friend.

Hurt While Stopping Runaway.

Keresey himself bears some scars gained in the fierce rushes he has made with Pompeii. Five years ago his right leg was broken in two places, and two years ago his neck was wrenched and his skull nearly smashed in. Both injuries were received while with Pompeii's aid he was stopping dangerous runaways.

Only one man had the heart to bid against Keresey so he ransomed his old friend for $50, about twice what he was worth said the veterinary.

Then Keresey started on a vacation. When last heard from he was spending it on a bit of a farm he has at Rye, N. Y., and with him went Pompeii, happy in his last transfer.

"RAGS AND RICHES"
A Romance of Darkes London
BY ARTHUR APPLIN.
The Greatest English Story of Modern Times.
Lady Letty, the nineteen year old daughter of the Duke of Marford, goes into the East end of London and lives and toils with the poor. A thrilling story of life in the greatest city in the world. It should be read by everyone desiring to learn of the great secrets and sufferings and weaknesses of human nature. Every sentence of this story has a thrill. It carries you out of the humdrum of everyday existence into a sphere of enthusiasm and romance.
THE HEROINE—A fearless girl of the aristocracy.
HER ENEMIES—Captain Conroy and her own family.
THE HERO—Lord Arthur, considered a stupid fool.
OTHER LEADING CHARACTERS—Commissioner Bateson of the Salvation Army.
FLORRIE GRAY—An East End friend of Letty's.
BILL ALIAS—The Terror.
You should read this story, and, if you live in the country, you should have your children read it, so they may understand what life in a big city really means. They should read this story to learn what Lady Letty learned in her effort to reform London's East end. She sees there the motly crowds thronging the streets; the ragged and hungry looking children touch a chord in her heart. As you read this wonderful narrative of the conditions of life in a great city, you appreciate more fully the blessings of the country.
The squalor and sufferings are pictured by the author of this wonderful story; the men and women searching the turbulent sea, reaching out and saving lost souls; also the great work of the Salvation Army. Lady Letty becomes so strangely fascinated by the new views of life that she abandons her own palatial home, forsakes and denounces the aristocracy and takes up her life among the lower elements of modern life. The story fascinates strangely but it also educates. It is the greatest English story ever written. It has been the cause of the London city government recognizing the wonderful work of the Salvation Army in extending to General Booth the freedom of London.
If you love your children, and of course you do, you will want them to read this story that they may know the horrors, the dangers and the temptations of city life. If they are dissatisfied with the old farm, this is the story they should read that they may more fully understand the full meaning of life in the city. There is one other character in this story and this character has big, tired eyes which gaze out from the throng at the beauty of Lady Letty with a strange envy. The teachings of the story point to the ideals of Christ. It is grand, instructive, fascinating and awakening. Every picture drawn by the skilled pen of Arthur Applin, its author, will be reproduced in our columns.

EASTER LILY GROWING.

TO BECOME AN AMERICAN INDUSTRY

GUY ELLIOTT MITCHELL.

The general policy of the Department of Agriculture has been to endeavor to produce at home such plants as are grown abroad and shipped into the United States. This is just as true with regard to luxuries as to necessities, and especially apropos is its reference to the Bermuda or Easter Lily. For some years efforts have been made to cultivate successfully the Easter lily in the South-eastern States, but it has been found that the climate of that section is not as favorable for the lily bulbs as it is in the Bermudas and Japan.

Experiments have demonstrated that bulbs of the Easter lily can be carried over a season in cold storage, with a result that they are benefited very materially as it subjects them to a condition approaching that existing in Japan, the native country of the species, where the bulbs are heavily covered with snow during the resting period. This discovery has opened new possibilities in the cultivation of the lily. Heretofore, bulbs have been planted in some parts of the South early in the fall, with the result that they sprouted considerably before cool weather set in. When severe weather, such as the South gets at some periods of the winter, does come, this growth is killed and the plant more or less injured. During the period before coming into bloom, the plants rendered sickly during the winter often suffer severely from lack of moisture, resulting in poorly developed bulbs.

On the Blue Bermuda Islands.

Lily growing on the Bermuda Islands is an exceedingly profitable industry. Practically all the land available for the production of bulbs is utilized for this purpose, and while the rotation of crops, together with the most approved methods of selection and cultivation, would undoubtedly be eventually a good policy for the growers to pursue, yet, except in the case of the more progressive growers, there is little likelihood of this being done, as it would materially decrease the revenue from lily farming for the time being. This will readily be understood when it is stated that an acre of lilies will bring from $1,000 to $2,000. Some growers on the islands who thoroughly appreciate the importance of careful methods are using small bulbs in preference to scales, and are selecting and fertilizing carefully, but they are heavily handicapped by the many small growers who cultivate their crops according to old methods; and in these cases there is no selection with a view to producing and perpetuating good types. Little manure is used. The methods of propagation are very faulty and they have not been changed since the beginning of the industry in the islands. For instance, in the growing of the bulbs for American markets the smaller sizes are planted in the fall and harvested in July, or before the bulbs have thoroughly ripened. In the process of handling, many of the immature scales drop from the bulbs. These are not thrown away, as they ought to be, but are carefully saved and planted with a view to raising small bulbs. These bulbs ultimately form a large part of the general crop.

As a result of all these conditions the bulbs marketed by Bermuda have become impregnated with disease, so that, at the present time it is almost impossible to secure a bulb or plant which does not show some trace of disease.

The American Method.

Investigations made by the Department of Agriculture have shown that by the use of seeds instead of scales, larger bulbs can be secured in a much shorter time than can be produced by the scale method. Moreover, it has been demonstrated that in this way plants can be grown which are entirely free from disease, and most important of all, that the seedlings give an opportunity to select better types than exist at the present time.

The very best of these seedlings, some of which will undoubtedly show superiority in several ways over the parents, can be retained for seeds, and by keeping up the system of selection there will develop in a very few years strains from seed which will be proven of great value.

George W. Oliver, the plant propagator of the Department of Agriculture has been working on this particular line for a number of years, with every indication of success. In some instances he has obtained blooming plants in from 7 to 9 months from germination of the seed, while in recent trials, as many as twelve magnificent blossoms have been cut from a plant within fourteen months after the plant has shown itself above ground.

In order to further this class of work, the Department of Agriculture has obtained plots of land in California and Oregon where it is believed the Easter lily can be grown as profitably if not more so, than it is in either Bermuda or Japan.

A point greatly in favor of raising the Easter lily from seed, to constitute the crop of marketable bulbs, is that from one to two years' time is saved in the operation over the scale method. The results of the work of the Department of Agriculture in obtaining blooming plants in so short a time after planting the seed would probably seem like a fairy tale to the participants of the lily conference held in London in 1901. One of the papers read at that time states that many species of Lilium must have from ten to twelve years to develop a flowering bulb from the seed. A noted scientist who was believed to be an authority on lily growing, stated that "In three or four years at most, flowering bulbs will be produced from seed if the young plants are properly treated." While the experiments of the Department of Agriculture have shown that some seedlings are longer than others in coming into bloom, yet when these do flower, they reward all the cultivator's labor by producing a great amount of flowers—instances being known of plants with from ten to fourteen flowers at one time.

Hybrid Philippine Lily.

The Bureau of Plant Industry of the Department of Agriculture last year took up the problem of shortening the time of growing, as any shortening in the time of growth represents so much gain to the cultivator. With this in view the Department imported a species of lily from the Philippines which was known to bear flowers in from two to three months after planting of the bulb. This lily has been crossed with the common Easter lily, and the r lt has been a hybrid, bearing as many flowers as the old Bermuda lily, with no difference in appearance from this plant, except that the hybrid will develop in four or five months, representing a shortening in time of from one to three months. While the experiments of the Department are not yet completed, the results attained so far warrant the belief that the new hybrid Easter Lily can be produced cheaper than the old variety which blooms not less than from six to eight months after planting of the bulb.

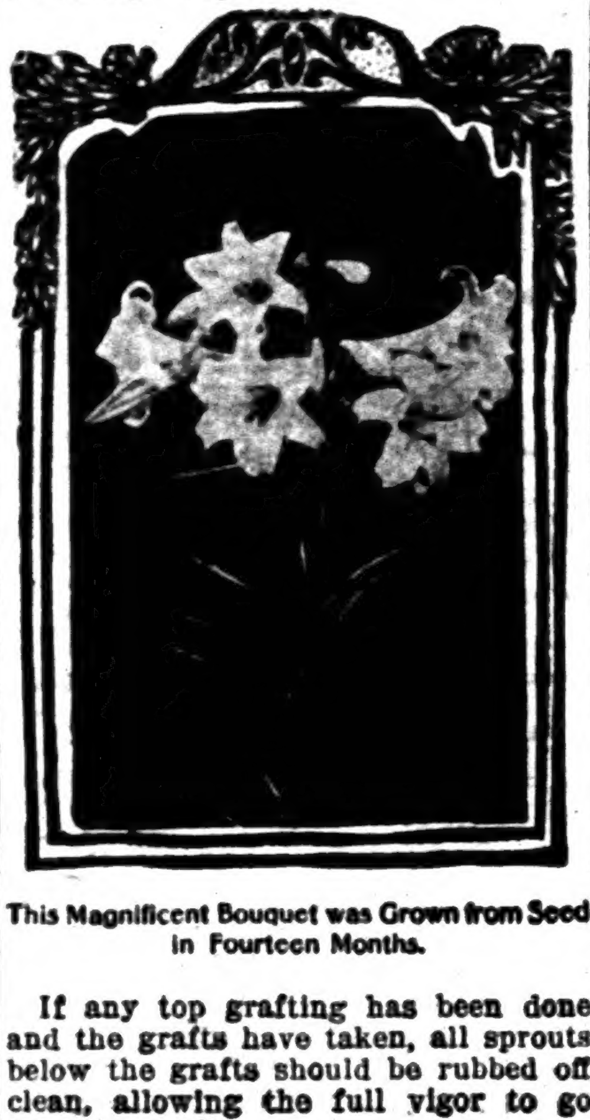
Orchard Notes.

Soon is the time when the apple borer will emerge from the trunk of the tree in the shape of a fly and look about for crevices in the tree trunks in which to deposit her eggs. A way often recommended is to take a hoe and hill up each tree about six inches. This will necessitate the laying of the eggs on the trunk where they can be easily gotten at and destroyed later.

May will be a good time to walk rapidly through the orchard and rub off the new shoots, or water sprouts, on the trunks of the trees. If much pruning has been done these will be found in abundance. When soft and green, as they are during this month, they can be easily removed, pulled out by the roots, as it were, whereas later they will have to be cut off, causing a liability to sprout again.



This Magnificent Bouquet was Grown from Seed in Fourteen Months.

If any top grafting has been done and the grafts have taken, all sprouts below the grafts should be rubbed off clean, allowing the full vigor to go into the graft.

For the best results fruit and other trees should be cultivated early and often during the spring and early summer, as that is the time when most growth is made. When the fruit is small there is plenty of sap for vigorous wood growth, but after the fruit approaches maturity the wood growth decreases.

Caring for Transplanted Trees.

It is well the first year a large tree is transplanted to put a tile at its base or a square box five or six inches in diameter, in an upright position, and stimulate the tree by pouring down soap suds or other water. This furnishes sub-irrigation and allows but little of the water to evaporate.

Trees should also be dug around from time to time if rapid growth is desired. A tree can grow up in sod and practically stand still or by the use of manure and cultivation it can be made to grow as fast as desired. The sod method is frequently followed by the man who has no time to spend on the convenience and appearance of his place.

As the warmth of spring approaches the system craves some fresh acid, and nothing is more grateful than rhubarb. A most satisfactory practice is to cover a couple of thrifty stools of rhubarb with an old half-barrel, inverted, and pile around it green manure. This will force it into quick growth.

Green Manuring.

Very sandy soils are more apt to show a beneficial effect than heavy soils from plowing under green crops as compared with applications of fertilizers or manures, for the reason that in such soils fertilizer or manure leaches quickly away, whereas the humus afforded by the green crop is more entirely retained, itself adding to the body of the soil. Sandy soils, too, are nearly all deficient in vegetable mold, and green manure is the easiest and cheapest method of supplying this factor.

THE PHILIPPINE LILY.

Planting overgrown nursery stock because it can be secured cheaper than young stock is a serious mistake. In the first place the handling is much greater, and, again, such trees will never make the sturdy and vigorous growth of the younger ones. To use them at any price is poor economy.

THE COMING FARMBOY.

The Educated Farmer Becoming a Power in State and Nation.

The time is fast coming, if, indeed, it is not already here, when the intelligent, industrious and energetic farmer will occupy a far more prominent place in the affairs of State and Nation that ever before. The rapid pace necessarily adopted by those engaged in professional and mercantile pursuits, in order to successfully meet the competition assailing them on every hand, is not conducive to the mental endowment of their descendants, and the farmboy of rugged constitution and industrious habits will be in ever growing demand to fill their depleted ranks. Much has been written in regard to the prominent part played by such breeding and early country training, in the successful management of great mercantile enterprises and the marvelous discoveries and achievements of great professional leaders and much more will still be written upon the same subject. The farms of the country have been and will continue to be the nurseries from whence the degenerating forces of those overworked brains and shattered nerves will be recruited.

More important still, there is also a most promising future for the farmboy who takes up agriculture as an occupation. Farming is no longer mere drudgery and muscular exertion, in which man occupies about the same place as the beasts of burden, but it is an industry calling for the keenest intelligence and the application of well defined principles.

If the farm boy can be made to understand that the cultivation of the soil and the feeding of stock are based upon principles as clearly defined as those underlying any mechanical or mercantile pursuit, and that the same skill and energy applied to the former as to the latter will yield equally profitable returns, he will be more greatly attracted to his home acres. When to these facts are added the opportunity to participate in public affairs and the assurance that because he becomes a farmer, he does not surrender all claim to public recognition and renown, he will enter upon the work of the farm with greater zest and courage and with less foreboding.

In order to obtain these results, it is necessary that the farm lad be fitted for the work as thoroughly as persons are fitted for other professions. He must study agriculture as one who is to become a physician studies medicine, or the one who is to be an attorney studies law. He must not only know how to do all things, but he must also know why the things are done. He must know the effect upon the soil of different methods of culture and the effect upon animals of various systems of feeding. He must know a thousand things unknown to his ancestors a generation or two ago, and then—and not till then will he be in a position to practice farming as intelligently and as successfully as the physician practices medicine or the attorney practices law.

It requires time, hard study and some money to acquire this knowledge, but not so much as is required to prepare for other occupations and professions yielding good returns. There is no study necessary for the laborer who uses pick and shovel at a dollar and a half a day, but preparation is necessary for him who earns three or four times that amount in any line of work. There is no preparation necessary for the farmer who is content to harvest what the soil produces of its own accord, but preparation is necessary for the farmer who produces three or four times the average yield of the soil. The man who manipulates the soil and directs the elements of nature in an intelligent manner in the production of that crop is an almost greater factor than the soil itself. Father and mothers who desire their boys to become or remain farmers, should encourage them to make the requisite preparation for their life work and then there will be fewer abandoned farms and fewer discouraged and disheartened farmers.

The Joke was Moss Grown.

He said it in all innocence.

It was at a nice, homelike little party the other evening, and Gabley had just told his time-worn story.

"Oh, strangle it," called out Jonothan Happlegood in his sonorous voice, which made everybody look. "That story is more ancient and rock-ribbed than the hills."

Then the three spinster Hill sisters of uncertain ages got up and stalked stiffly out of the room with that set, hard expression which is akin to the "automobile face."

One of the Ranks.

"Hello," said the Pipe to the Black Cigar.
In the Smokers' grand parade,
"I see you march with the Cigarettes
Instead of your own brigade."
The Black Cigar moved down the line,
Ashamed as he could be,
And simply said, with deep-bowed head;
"I've joined the 'ranks,' you see."

Courtesy to the Cloth.

He was a young and smart-looking Scots clergyman, and was to preach a "trial" sermon in a strange church. Fearing that his hair might be disarranged or that he might have a smudge on his face, he quietly and significantly said to the beadle, there being no mirror in the vestry:

"John, could you get me a glass?"

John disappeared, and after a few minutes returned with something under his coat, which, to the astonishment of the divine, he produced in the form of a bottle with a gill of whisky in it, saying:

"Ye mauna let on aboot it, meenister, for I got it as a special favor, and I wadna hae got it if I hadna told them it was for you."

The Man of the Hour.

He stood in the hall at midnight,
But the clock was not striking the hour,
For his careful touch had stilled it,
Ere the storm had time to lower.
He said, as the stairs he climbed softly,
"A hero of labor I'm like—
For surely this night I've averted
A most disastrous strike."

A Little School Boy's Suggestion.

Editor Banner: Please let me have a short space in your paper this week. I am a little boy, only ten years old. I appreciate reading the dear old Banner, and especially the pieces from the little children of my age. I was certainly glad to hear from little Lizzie Kate Culpepper. It suggested to me the idea of asking the Editor to let the little folks have one column of the paper every week. Of course, children like to hear from children, and my teacher told me that he believes in giving the little boys a chance.

The little school boy from Center Point gave a little piece of poetry last week which was very nice, and this caused me to put more study on a piece that I had been thinking of.

AFTER SICKNESS

A Member of the Upchurch Drug Co. Tells How to Regain Strength.

"Owing to the changeable climate and unseasonable weather, there has been a good deal of sickness in Clanton during the past few weeks," said this well known druggist, "and we want to say to the people of Clanton that the one thing to aid recovery after sickness is to give the patent a blood-building and strength-restoring tonic, one that will create an appetite and give strength to every organ in the body."

"Now," continued he, "from an intimate knowledge of almost every medicine on the market, we do not believe there is another remedy in this country equal to our delicious cod liver oil preparation, Vinol, for this purpose.

Vinol is not a patent medicine, as everything in it is named on the back label of every bottle; it contains every one of the body-building, medicinal elements of cod liver oil, actually taken from fresh cods' livers, but without a drop of the system-clogging oil to upset the stomach and retard its work

It acts directly on the stomach, tones up the digestive organs, creates a healthy appetite, makes pure, rich, red, blood, healthy flesh and muscle tissue, and creates strength for every organ in the body.

Mr. Edward A. Howe of Concord, N. H., says that after a long, severe sickness he was weak and emaciated, all tonics seemed of no avail, but Vinol restored in a marvellous manner, health, strength and appetite.

If Vinol fails to build up the rundown and convalescent, give new life and strength to the aged, cure stomach troubles, hard colds and hanging on coughs, we cheerfully refund every dollar paid us for it." Upchurch Drug co.

President's Income.

A correspondent says: "Is the president able to save anything out of the mere $50,000 a year salary he receives?" Many people believe that the $50,000 a year which the president gets as salary is the sum total of his official income. It is a mistake. This is how he is paid: Thirty-six thousand and sixty-four dollars is given him, in addition to his salary of $50,000 to pay the salaries of his subordinates and clerks. His private secretary is paid $3,250, his assistant private secretary $2,250, his stenographer $1,800, five messengers (each) $1,800, a steward $1,800, two doorkeepers (each) $1,200, four other clerks at good salaries ranging from $1,500 to $2,500, one telegraph operator, two ushers, $1,200 and $1,400; a night usher $1,200, a watchman $900, and a man who takes care of the fires, who receives $864 a year. In addition to this there is given him $8,000 for incidental expenses, such as stationery, carpets and the care of the presidential stables. And under another heading there is given him nearly $40,000 more. Of this $12,500 is for repairs and refurnishing the White House, $2,500 is for fuel, $4,000 is for the green-house, $15,000 is for gas, matches and the stable. The White House, all told, costs the country, in connection with the president, considerably over $125,000 a year. The president is also well-to-do in his own right, having inherited a competence from his father. Add to this the royalties he has received from his books, his income from magazine work, and it will be seen that the expenses incident to the marriage of Miss Alice will by no means pinch the purse of the house of Roosevelt.—San Francisco Argonaut.

A Woman Politician.

The considerable part which English women play in politics is well expressed by the London Mail in an article upon the recent death of Lady Grey, wife of Sir Edward Grey, secretary of state for foreign affairs. It said in part: "Even apart from her devotion to her husband, she was the keenest possible liberal politician, though the daughter of an old Tory squire, Maj. S. F. Widdrington (whose ancestor is mentioned in the ballad of Chevy Chase), and her personal popularity in the Border county was responsible for much of its liberalism. For Sid Edward she worked incessantly and brilliantly, from his first political campaign, two months after his marriage in 1885, down to the late battle, from whose triumph she has been so tragically called away." Lady Grey had a large desk at Falloden devoted to political papers, answered many of Sir Edward's letters, and throughout his five campaigns frequently took notes at his opponents' meetings of points in the speeches which she thought needed reply.

At a recent meeting of the French Women's Rights League in Paris a resolution was passed unanimously calling for the wiping out of all laws which relegate the wife to legal inferiority. A commission has been appointed recently to revise the civil code, and there was a strong expression on the unfairness of excluding women from this body.

Severe Congestion of the Kidneys Soon Cured by Doan's Kidney Pills.

Richard M. Pearce, a prominent business man of 231 So. Orange St., Newark, N. Besides the terrific aching there were whirling headaches, and I became exceedingly weak. My doctor could not help me, and I turned to Doan's Kidney Pills, with the result that the kidney congestion disappeared, and, with it, all the other symptoms. What is more, the cure has lasted for 8 years."

The Smallest Watch.

There are plenty of small watches in the world, and many ladies wear them, with faces no larger than a silver dime, in their bracelets. But Earl W. Eckel, who was found encamped at Eighteenth and Market streets when that region was first discovered, and has been identified with the neighborhood ever since, has the smallest affair yet. He wears it as a lapel button.

The face of this tiny watch is much smaller than a dime. The back of it, which is about as large as a 5-cent piece, contains the works. It is a splendid little timekeeper, and ticks away the hours without making any fuss about it.

It is, says the Earl, the greatest bore discourager in the world. The novelty of it directs attention to it, and no one can impose upon its wearer and forget the flight of time. It stares him in the face and conveys hints that are unmistakable and which he meegly heeds.

Echel picked it up in his travels, and has never seen another like it. The little watch was made in Switzerland, and is a remarkably fine piece of work.

Underground Telegraph.

There is now underground telegraphic communication between London and Scotland. Germany's underground system dates from 1870. France followed suit in 1879, as the result of a great storm that isolated Paris in 1875. Up to date her system has cost $36,000,000, but it is believed to have more than paid for itself. Lines constructed in 1880 are still in excellent condition.

OLD TIME FAVORITES

GOING HOME.

We said that the days were evil,
  We felt that they might be few,
For low was our fortune's level,
  And heavy the winters grew;
But one who had no possession
  Lokked up to the azure dome,
And said, in his simple fashion,
  Dear friends, we are going home!

This world is the same dull market
  That wearied its earliest sage;
The times to the wise are dark yet,
  But so hath been many an age.
And rich grow the toiling nations,
  And red grow the battle spears,
And dreary with desolations
  Roll onward the laden years.

What need of the changeless story
  Which time hath so often told,
The spectre that follows glory,
  The canker that comes with gold—
That wisdom and strength, and honor
  Must fade like the far sea foam,
And death is the only winner?—
  But, friends, we are going home!

The homes we had hoped to rest in
  Were open to sin and strife,
The dreams that our youth was blest in
  Were not for the wear of life;
For care can darken the cottage,
  As well as the palace hearth,
And birthrights are sold for pottage,
  But never redeemed on earth.

The springs have gone by in sorrow,
  The summers were grieved away,
And ever we feared to-morrow,
  And ever we blamed to-day.
In depths which the searcher sounded,
  On hills which the high heart clomb,
Have troubles and toil abounded—
  But, friends, we are going home!

Our faith was the bravest builder
  But found not a stone of trust;
Our love was the fairest gilder,
  But lavished its wealth on dust.
And time hath the fabric shaken,
  And fortune the clay hath shown,
For much they have changed and taken,
  But nothing that was our own.

The light that to us made baser
  The paths which so many choose,
The gifts there was found no place for,
  The riches we could not use;
The heart that when life was wintry
  Found summer in strain and tome,
With those to our kin and country—
  Dear friends, we are going home!

LEGEND OF THE RED ROSE.

One day within a garden fair
  Love found a maiden sleeping;
June sunbeams tangled in her hair;
  The sentry lilies keeping
With rival purity and grace
  Their loving watch above her;
While o'er the happy dreamer's face
  The whispering zephyrs hover.

Love tipped an arrow with a kiss
  And sent it passion-laden,
With cunning hands that could not miss,
  To wake the sleeping maiden.
It pierced her heart, she woke and smiled,
  With glances sweet and tender;
It made a woman of the child;
  Love's morning dawned in splendor.

She felt the arrow in her breast,
  She saw love's empty quiver.
The slender shaft she deeper pressed
  And smiled upon the giver.
Love beckoned her, she rose with pride,
  To fly with her bold wooer;
He pledged her she should be his bride,
  No lover would be truer.

A voice broke the dreamy air,
  A feeble father sought her;
She turned from love in deep despair,
  To prove a faithful daughter.
"O come," cried love, "thy life shall be Encrowned with joy and beauty;"
"Take up thy cross and follow me,"
  Commanded stern-eyed duty.

She wrenched the arrow from her breast,
  Her heart clung to it broken;
She laid them at his feet and blessed
  Her first and last love token.
A glory shone within her eyes,
  She clasped the hand of duty;
Heaven saw the noble sacrifice
  And filled her soul with beauty.

Love took his silver bow and made
  A grave; then, softly weeping,
In it her heart and arrow laid
  And left them in time's keeping.
The lilies, bending o'er the mound,
  Mourned for the heart they cherished;
And when the brown leaves strewed the ground,
  Upon its grave they perished.

The wind grew hoarse and ceased to shriek
  Among the barren bowers;
The sunbeams kissed dame nature's cheek,
  Her blushes bloomed in flowers.
One morn upon the moss-grown mound,
  The garden air perfuming,
With tiny arrowheads set round,
  They found love's red rose blooming.

PRINCESS DARELLA.

By Myra Hamilton.

THERE was intense excitement within the palace when the young Princess Darella defied her parents and flatly refused to wed the husband who had been provided for her. They persuaded and scolded her in turn; they talked of his wealth, his position and his blue blood, but they dared not mention his face, for in their hearts they knew he was hideous to look upon—he was old and wrinkled, with hardly a tooth left in his head.

The Princess was quite determined, however, so she merely shook her head in reply to their appeals. At last the King completely lost his temper.

"In sooth," he cried, "you are no daughter of mine. Never has such wilfulness been known in my family before. I chose a worthy, kind hearted man who is fit for you to marry, and you scorn him. For shame!"

"He shall never be my husband," declared the obstinate Princess. "I shall know the man I am going to marry directly I meet him," she added.

"What do you mean?" demanded the King indignantly.

"Last night when I was asleep," said the Princess, "a handsome young Prince came to me in my dreams, and he was, oh, so fair to look upon! He was tall and straight and young, albeit that his hair was tinged with gray. And if I wait fifty, sixty or seventy years, I shall be content if he claims me at the end of that time. But methinks an evil spell lies heavily upon him, otherwise he would come forward now."

Then the King grew simply infuriated with his daughter. He stormed and raved at her, and at last, as a punishment for her disobedience, he condemned her to live all alone on a little island that could just be discerned from the roof of the palace.

But the Princess Darella made no objections. When the time came for her to leave her home she stepped into the boat quite willingly. She chatted gayly to the crew as they bore her out to sea, and she gazed undauntedly at the little island on which she would probably be starved to death. When they left her on the beach, with her bundle of things lying at her feet, she still seemed quite content with her fate, and she waved her handkerchief to the boat as long as she could see it.

The first thing Darella did was to wander round the island in search of a nice dry cave to live in; and when she had found it she spread her few belongings about, and tried to make it look as comfortable and homelike as possible, and then, of course, she felt hungry. When she set out to gather herself some fruit and some berries to eat she was surprised to find that somebody had already placed a pile of delicious fruit in readiness for her.

"This is very nice," said the Princess, as she dug her little white teeth into a juicy pear. "I wonder who has been good enough to do this for me. I think I shall be very happy here."

And so she was. Although she never met any human being upon the island, all her wants were attended to in a most marvelous manner. A little heap of fruit was always placed outside the door of her cave every morning before she awoke, and when she went out for her daily walk round the island the cave was swept and tidied before she returned.

But one night, as she slept, she heard a voice crying out loudly to her to awake.

"Oh, what is it?" cried the frightened Princess, leaping off her couch and running from the cave. But she could see nothing, except one large bat that was circling over her head, and she knew well enough that bats could not talk.

"Listen," said the mysterious voice. "Your father has given his sanction to a plot that has been made to carry you off. He promises to give a bag of gold to the Prince who first reaches this island to-night. A few hours ago a fleet of boats left his palace and set sail for here. Each boat contains a Prince and several trusty men, and they are now racing, one against the other, to see who shall arrive first. What do you wish to do? Shall the Princes land and claim you for their bride, or shall we defend our island against them all?

But the Princess Darella was so bewildered that she could do nothing but cry.

"I don't like talking to a voice without an owner," she sobbed plaintively. "It gives me the creeps."

"I am very sorry," was the reply, "for I am afraid it cannot be altered. I have not the power to appear before you in my own shape yet. At present I am disguised as a bat, and if you will look up steadily you will be able to see me flying about."

So the Princess glanced up and saw the bat darting in and out of the trees, and it comforted her. She felt quite willing to stay with him, for he had such a nice voice.

"I think," she said, after a few minutes' consideration, "that I would prefer to remain on this island. I am very happy here, and I shall be more so now that I have found somebody who can talk to me. You see, I don't wish to marry unless I meet my Dream Prince, and there really seems to be no chance of that. But can you defend the island?"

"Certainly I can," replied the voice eagerly. "But you must help me, too."

"Yes, I will," said Darella promptly, "if you will tell me what to do."

"I want you to sit upon that high piece of rock," explained the voice, "and comb your hair until the fight is over. I will go down to the water's edge with my men and try to prevent the Princes landing."

"With your men?" echoed the Princess. "Have you an army here?"

"Well, not exactly that," replied the voice, in a rather hesitating manner. "But many of my companions are held by the same spell that I myself am, and I know they will do their best to aid me if I ask them. But I must be going. Look out to sea, and you will be able to watch the boats as they approach our shore. Now, begin to comb your tresses, and do not cease until I return to you."

So Darella clambered up on the rock and after she unbraided her lovely golden hair she commenced to comb it. But every time she drew the silver comb through, it came out in such handfuls that soon she thought she would become bald. The wind caught her beautiful curls as they fluttered from her head, and blew them toward

The Coffee Debate.

The published statements of a number of coffee importers and roasters indicate a "waspy" feeling towards us, for daring to say that coffee is harmful to a percentage of the people.

A frank public discussion of the subject is quite agreeable to us and can certainly do no harm; on the contrary when all the facts on both sides of any question are spread before the people they can thereupon decide and act intelligently.

Give the people plain facts and they will take care of themselves.

We demand facts in this coffee discussion and propose to see that the facts are brought clearly before the people.

A number of coffee importers and roasters have joined a movement to boom coffee and stop the use of Postum Food Coffee and in their newspaper statements undertake to deceive by false assertions.

Their first is that coffee is not harmful.

We assert that one in every three coffee users has some form of incipient or chronic disease; realize for one moment what a terrible menace to a nation of civilized people, when one kind of beverage cripples the energies and health of one-third the people who use it.

We make the assertion advisedly and suggest that the reader secure his own proof by personal inquiry among coffee users.

Ask your coffee drinking friends if they keep free from any sort of aches and ails. You will be startled at the percentage and will very naturally seek to place the cause of disorder on something aside from coffee, whether food, inherited tendencies or something else. Go deeper in your search for facts.

If your friend admits occasional neuralgia, rheumatism, heart weakness, stomach or bowel trouble, kidney complaint, weak eyes, or approaching nervous prostration induce him or her to make the experiment of leaving off coffee for 10 days and using Postum Food Coffee, and observe the result. It will startle you and give your friend something to think of. Of course, if the person is one of the weak ones and says "I can't quit" you will have discovered one of the slaves of the coffee importer. Treat such kindly, for they seem absolutely powerless to stop the gradual but sure destruction of body and health.

Nature has a way of destroying a part of the people to make room for the stronger. It is the old law of "the survival of the fittest" at work, and the victims are many.

We repeat the assertion that coffee does harm many people, not all, but an army large enough to appall the investigator and searcher for facts.

The next prevarication of the coffee importers and roasters is their statement that Postum Food Coffee is made of roasted peas, beans or corn, and mixed with a low grade of coffee and that it contains no nourishment.

We have previously offered to wager $100,000.00 with them that their statements are absolutely false.

They have not accepted our wager and they will not.

We will gladly make a present of $25,000.00 to any roaster or importer of old fashioned coffee who will accept that wager.

Free inspection of our factories and methods is made by thousands of people each month and the coffee importers themselves are cordially invited. Both Postum and Grape-Nuts are absolutely pure and made exactly as stated.

The formula of Postum and the analysis made by one of the foremost chemists of Boston has been printed on every package for many years and is absolutely accurate.

Now as to the food value of Postum. It contains the parts of the wheat berry which carry the elemental salts such as lime, iron, potash, silica, etc., etc., used by the life forces to rebuild the cellular tissue, and this is particularly true of the phosphate of potash, also found in Grape-Nuts, which combines in the human body with albumen and this combination, together with water, rebuilds the worn out gray matter in the delicate nerve centres all over the body, and throughout the brain and solar plexus.

Ordinary coffee stimulates in an unnatural way, but with many people it slowly and surely destroys and does not rebuild this gray substance so vitally important to the well-being of every human being.

These are eternal facts, proven, well authenticated and known to every properly educated physician, chemist and food expert.

Please remember we never say ordinary coffee hurts everyone.

Some people use it regularly and seem strong enough to withstand its attacks, but there is misery and disease in store for the man or woman who persists in its use when nature protests, by heart weakness, stomach and bowel troubles, kidney disease, weak eyes, or general nervous prostration. The remedy is obvious. The drug caffeine, contained in all ordinary coffee, must be discontinued absolutely or the disease will continue in spite of any medicine and will grow worse.

It is easy to leave off the old fashioned coffee by adopting Postum Food Coffee, for in it one finds a pleasing hot breakfast or dinner beverage that has the deep seal brown color, changing to a rich golden brown when good cream is added. When boiled long enough (15 minutes) the flavor is not that of rank Rio coffee but very like the milder, smooth and high grade Java, but entirely lacking the drug effect of ordinary coffee.

Anyone suffering from disorders set up by coffee drinking (and there is an extensive variety) can absolutely depend upon some measure of relief by quitting coffee and using Postum Food Coffee.

If the disease has not become too strongly rooted, one can with good reason expect it to disappear entirely in a reasonable time after the active cause of the trouble is removed and the cellular tissue has time to naturally rebuild with the elements furnished by Postum and good food.

It's only just plain old common sense.

Now, with the exact facts before the reader, he or she can decide the wise course, looking to health and the power to do things.

If you have any doubt as to the cause of any ache or ail you may have, remember the far reaching telegrams of a hurt nervous system travel from heel to head, and it may be well worth your while to make the experiment of leaving off coffee entirely for 10 days and using Postum in its place.

You will probably gather some good solid facts, worth more than a gold mine, for health can make gold and sickness lose it. Besides there's all the fun, for it's like a continuous internal frolic to be perfectly well.

There's a reason for

President's Income.

A correspondent says: "Is the president able to save anything out of the mere $50,000 a year salary he receives?" Many people believe that the $50,000 a year which the president gets as salary is the sum total of his official income. It is a mistake. This is how he is paid: Thirty-six thousand and sixty-four dollars is given him, in addition to his salary of $50,000 to pay the salaries of his subordinates and clerks. His private secretary is paid $3,250, his assistant private secretary $2,250, his stenographer $1,800, five messengers (each) $1,800, a steward $1,800, two doorkeepers (each) $1,200, four other clerks at good salaries ranging from $1,500 to $2,500, one telegraph operator, two ushers, $1,200 and $1,400; a night usher $1,200, a watchman $900, and a man who takes care of the fires, who receives $864 a year. In addition to this there is given him $8,000 for incidental expenses, such as stationery, carpets and the care of the presidential stables. And under another heading there is given him nearly $40,000 more. Of this $12,500 is for repairs and refurnishing the White House, $2,500 is for fuel, $4,000 is for the green-house, $15,000 is for gas, matches and the stable. The White House, all told, costs the country, in connection with the president, considerably over $125,000 a year. The president is also well-to-do in his own right, having inherited a competence from his father. Add to this the royalties he has received from his books, his income from magazine work, and it will be seen that the expenses incident to the marriage of Miss Alice will by no means pinch the purse of the house of Roosevelt.—San Francisco Argonaut.

A Woman Politician.

The considerable part which English women play in politics is well expressed by the London Mail in an article upon the recent death of Lady Grey, wife of Sir Edward Grey, secretary of state for foreign affairs. It said in part: "Even apart from her devotion to her husband, she was the keenest possible liberal politician, though the daughter of an old Tory squire, Maj. S. F. Widdrington (whose ancestor is mentioned in the ballad of Chevy Chase), and her personal popularity in the Border county was responsible for much of its liberalism. For Sid Edward she worked incessantly and brilliantly, from his first political campaign, two months after his marriage in 1885, down to the late battle, from whose triumph she has been so tragically called away." Lady Grey had a large desk at Falloden devoted to political papers, answered many of Sir Edward's letters, and throughout his five campaigns frequently took notes at his opponents' meetings of points in the speeches which she thought needed reply.

At a recent meeting of the French Women's Rights League in Paris a resolution was passed unanimously calling for the wiping out of all laws which relegate the wife to legal inferiority. A commission has been appointed recently to revise the civil code, and there was a strong expression on the unfairness of excluding women from this body.

A COLD BROUGHT IT ON.

Severe Congestion of the Kidneys Soon Cured by Doan's Kidney Pills.

Richard M. Pearce, a prominent business man of 231 So. Orange St., Newark, N. J., says: "Working nights during bad weather brought on a heavy cold, aching of the limbs and pain in the back and kidneys. Severe congestion of the kidneys followed. Besides the terrific aching there were whirling headaches, and I became exceedingly weak. My doctor could not help me, and I turned to Doan's Kidney Pills, with the result that the kidney congestion disappeared, and, with it, all the other symptoms. What is more, the cure has lasted for 8 years."

The Smallest Watch.

There are plenty of small watches in the world, and many ladies wear them, with faces no larger than a silver dime, in their bracelets. But Earl W. Eckel, who was found encamped at Eighteenth and Market streets when that region was first discovered, and has been identified with the neighborhood ever since, has the smallest affair yet. He wears it as a lapel button.

The face of this tiny watch is much smaller than a dime. The back of it, which is about as large as a 5-cent piece, contains the works. It is a splendid little timekeeper, and ticks away the hours without making any fuss about it.

It is, says the Earl, the greatest bore discourager in the world. The novelty of it directs attention to it, and no one can impose upon its wearer and forget the flight of time. It stares him in the face and conveys hints that are unmistakable and which he meegly heeds.

Echel picked it up in his travels, and has never seen another like it. The little watch was made in Switzerland, and is a remarkably fine piece of work.

Underground Telegraph.

There is now underground telegraphic communication between London and Scotland. Germany's underground system dates from 1870. France followed suit in 1879, as the result of a great storm that isolated Paris in 1875. Up to date her system has cost $36,000,000, but it is believed to have more than paid for itself. Lines constructed in 1880 are still in excellent condition.

The First Aniline Dye.

It is fifty years ago since William Henry Perkin extracted from coal tar the first of the aniline dyes—"mauve." The jubilee of that event is about to be celebrated and honor done to the discoverer.

The first Jewish services ever held in British East Africa were held on Yom Kippur at the Masonic hall of Nairobi, and resulted in the formation of a congregation. There are about thirty Jews in the proletariat, most of them engaged in dairy farming.

OLD TIME FAVORITES

GOING HOME.

We said that the days were evil,
  We felt that they might be few,
For low was our fortune's level,
  And heavy the winters grew;
But one who had no possession
  Lokked up to the azure dome,
And said, in his simple fashion,
  Dear friends, we are going home!

This world is the same dull market
  That wearied its earliest sage;
The times to the wise are dark yet,
  But so hath been many an age.
And rich grow the toiling nations,
  And red grow the battle spears,
And dreary with desolations
  Roll onward the laden years.

What need of the changeless story
  Which time hath so often told,
The spectre that follows glory,
  The canker that comes with gold—
That wisdom and strength, and honor
  Must fade like the far sea foam,
And death is the only winner?—
  But, friends, we are going home!

The homes we had hoped to rest in
  Were open to sin and strife,
The dreams that our youth was blest in
  Were not for the wear of life;
For care can darken the cottage,
  As well as the palace hearth,
And birthrights are sold for pottage,
  But never redeemed on earth.

The springs have gone by in sorrow,
  The summers were grieved away,
And ever we feared to-morrow,
  And ever we blamed to-day.
In depths which the searcher sounded,
  On hills which the high heart clomb,
Have troubles and toil abounded—
  But, friends, we are going home!

Our faith was the bravest builder
  But found not a stone of trust;
Our love was the fairest gilder,
  But lavished its wealth on dust.
And time hath the fabric shaken,
  And fortune the clay hath shown,
For much they have changed and taken,
  But nothing that was our own.

The light that to us made baser
  The paths which so many choose,
The gifts there was found no place for,
  The riches we could not use;
The heart that when life was wintry
  Found summer in strain and tome,
With those to our kin and country—
  Dear friends, we are going home!

LEGEND OF THE RED ROSE.

One day within a garden fair
  Love found a maiden sleeping;
June sunbeams tangled in her hair;
  The sentry lilies keeping
With rival purity and grace
  Their loving watch above her;
While o'er the happy dreamer's face
  The whispering zephyrs hover.

Love tipped an arrow with a kiss
  And sent it passion-laden,
With cunning hands that could not miss,
  To wake the sleeping maiden.
It pierced her heart, she woke and smiled,
  With glances sweet and tender;
It made a woman of the child;
  Love's morning dawned in splendor.

She felt the arrow in her breast,
  She saw love's empty quiver.
The slender shaft she deeper pressed
  And smiled upon the giver.
Love beckoned her, she rose with pride,
  To fly with her bold wooer;
He pledged her she should be his bride,
  No lover would be truer.

A voice broke the dreamy air,
  A feeble father sought her;
She turned from love in deep despair,
  To prove a faithful daughter.
"O come," cried love, "thy life shall be Encrowned with joy and beauty;"
"Take up thy cross and follow me,"
  Commanded stern-eyed duty.

She wrenched the arrow from her breast,
  Her heart clung to it broken;
She laid them at his feet and blessed
  Her first and last love token.
A glory shone within her eyes,
  She clasped the hand of duty;
Heaven saw the noble sacrifice
  And filled her soul with beauty.

Love took his silver bow and made
  A grave; then, softly weeping,
In it her heart and arrow laid
  And left them in time's keeping.
The lilies, bending o'er the mound,
  Mourned for the heart they cherished;
And when the brown leaves strewed the ground,
  Upon its grave they perished.

The wind grew hoarse and ceased to shriek
  Among the barren bowers;
The sunbeams kissed dame nature's cheek,
  Her blossoms bloomed in flowers.
One day upon the moss-grown mound,
  The garden air perfuming,
With tiny arrowheads set round,
  They found love's red rose blooming.

PRINCESS DARELLA.

By Myra Hamilton.

THERE was intense excitement within the palace when the young Princess Darella defied her parents and flatly refused to wed the husband who had been provided for her. They persuaded and scolded her in turn; they talked of his wealth, his position and his blue blood, but they dared not mention his face, for in their hearts they knew he was hideous to look upon—he was old and wrinkled, with hardly a tooth left in his head.

The Princess was quite determined, however, so she merely shook her head in reply to their appeals. At last the King completely lost his temper.

"In sooth," he cried, "you are no daughter of mine. Never has such wilfulness been known in my family before. I chose a worthy, kind hearted man who is fit for you to marry, and you scorn him. For shame!"

"He shall never be my husband," declared the obstinate Princess. "I shall know the man I am going to marry directly I meet him," she added.

"What do you mean?" demanded the King indignantly.

"Last night when I was asleep," said the Princess, "a handsome young Prince came to me in my dreams, and he was, oh, so fair to look upon! He was tall and straight and young, albeit that his hair was tinged with gray. And if I wait fifty, sixty or seventy years, I shall be content if he claims me at the end of that time. But methinks an evil spell lies heavily upon him, otherwise he would come forward now."

Then the King grew simply infuriated with his daughter. He stormed and raved at her, and at last, as a punishment for her disobedience, he condemned her to live all alone on a little island that could just be discerned from the roof of the palace.

But the Princess Darella made no objections. When the time came for her to leave her home she stepped into the boat quite willingly. She chatted gayly to the crew as they bore her out to sea, and she gazed undauntedly at the little island on which she would probably be starved to death. When they left her on the beach, with her bundle of things lying at her feet, she still seemed quite content with her fate, and she waved her handkerchief to the boat as long as she could see it.

The first thing Darella did was to wander round the island in search of a nice dry cave to live in; and when she had found it she spread her few belongings about, and tried to make it look as comfortable and homelike as possible, and then, of course, she felt hungry. When she set out to gather herself some fruit and some berries to eat she was surprised to find that somebody had already placed a pile of delicious fruit in readiness for her.

"This is very nice," said the Princess, as she dug her little white teeth into a juicy pear. "I wonder who has been good enough to do this for me. I think I shall be very happy here."

And so she was. Although she never met any human being upon the island, all her wants were attended to in a most marvelous manner. A little heap of fruit was always placed outside the door of her cave every morning before she awoke, and when she went out for her daily walk round the island the cave was swept and tidied before she returned.

But one night, as she slept, she heard a voice crying out loudly to her to awake.

"Oh, what is it?" cried the frightened Princess, leaping off her couch and running from the cave. But she could see nothing, except one large bat that was circling over her head, and she knew well enough that bats could not talk.

"Listen," said the mysterious voice. "Your father has given his sanction to a plot that has been made to carry you off. He promises to give a bag of gold to the Prince who first reaches this island to-night. A few hours ago a fleet of boats left his palace and set sail for here. Each boat contains a Prince and several trusty men, and they are now racing, one against the other, to see who shall arrive first. What do you wish to do? Shall the Princes land and claim you for their bride, or shall we defend our island against them all?

But the Princess Darella was so bewildered that she could do nothing but cry.

"I don't like talking to a voice without an owner," she sobbed plaintively. "It gives me the creeps."

"I am very sorry," was the reply, "for I am afraid it cannot be altered. I have not the power to appear before you in my own shape yet. At present I am disguised as a bat, and if you will look up steadily you will be able to see me flying about."

So the Princess glanced up and saw the bat darting in and out of the trees, and it comforted her. She felt quite willing to stay with him, for he had such a nice voice.

"I think," she said, after a few minutes' consideration, "that I would prefer to remain on this island. I am very happy here, and I shall be more so now that I have found somebody who can talk to me. You see, I don't wish to marry unless I meet my Dream Prince, and there really seems to be no chance of that. But can you defend the island?"

"Certainly I can," replied the voice eagerly. "But you must help me, too."

"Yes, I will," said Darella promptly. "If you will tell me what to do."

"I want you to sit upon that high piece of rock," explained the voice, "and comb your hair until the fight is over. I will go down to the water's edge with my men and try to prevent the Princess landing."

"With your men?" echoed the Princess. "Have you an army here?"

"Well, not exactly that," replied the voice, in a rather hesitating manner. "But many of my companions are held by the same spell that I myself am, and I know they will do their best to aid me if I ask them. But I must be going. Look out to sea, and you will be able to watch the boats as they approach our shore. Now, begin to comb your tresses, and do not cease until I return to you."

So Darella clambered up on the rock and after she unbraided her lovely golden hair she commenced to comb it. But every time she drew the silver comb through, it came out in such handfuls that soon she thought she would become bald. The wind caught her beautiful curls as they fluttered from her head, and blew them toward the sea, but the Pr

The Coffee Debate.

The published statements of a number of coffee importers and roasters indicate a "waspy" feeling towards us. for daring to say that coffee is harmful to a percentage of the people.

A frank public discussion of the subject is quite agreeable to us and can certainly do no harm; on the contrary when all the facts on both sides of any question are spread before the people they can thereupon decide and act intelligently.

Give the people plain facts and they will take care of themselves.

We demand facts in this coffee discussion and propose to see that the facts are brought clearly before the people.

A number of coffee importers and roasters have joined a movement to boom coffee and stop the use of Postum Food Coffee and in their newspaper statements undertake to deceive by false assertions.

Their first is that coffee is not harmful.

We assert that one in every three coffee users has some form of incipient or chronic disease; realize for one moment what a terrible menace to a nation of civilized people, when one kind of beverage cripples the energies and health of one-third the people who use it.

We make the assertion advisedly and suggest that the reader secure his own proof by personal inquiry among coffee users.

Ask your coffee drinking friends if they keep free from any sort of aches and ails. You will be startled at the percentage and will very naturally seek to place the cause of disorder on something aside from coffee, whether food, inherited tendencies or something else. Go deeper in your search for facts.

If your friend admits occasional neuralgia, rheumatism, heart weakness, stomach or bowel trouble, kidney complaint, weak eyes, or approaching nervous prostration induce him or her to make the experiment of leaving off coffee for 10 days and using Postum Food Coffee, and observe the result. It will startle you and give your friend something to think of. Of course, if the person is one of the weak ones and says "I can't quit" you will have discovered one of the slaves of the coffee importer. Treat such kindly, for they seem absolutely powerless to stop the gradual but sure destruction of body and health.

Nature has a way of destroying a part of the people to make room for the stronger. It is the old law of "the survival of the fittest" at work, and the victims are many.

We repeat the assertion that coffee does harm many people, not all, but an army large enough to appall the investigator and searcher for facts.

The next prevarication of the coffee importers and roasters is their statement that Postum Food Coffee is made of roasted peas, beans or corn, and mixed with a low grade of coffee and that it contains no nourishment.

We have previously offered to wager $100,000.00 with them that their statements are absolutely false.

They have not accepted our wager and they will not.

We will gladly make a present of $25,000.00 to any roaster or importer of old fashioned coffee who will accept that wager.

Free inspection of our factories and methods is made by thousands of people each month and the coffee importers themselves are cordially invited. Both Postum and Grape-Nuts are absolutely pure and made exactly as stated.

The formula of Postum and the analysis made by one of the foremost chemists of Boston has been printed on every package for many years and is absolutely accurate.

Now as to the food value of Postum. It contains the parts of the wheat berry which carry the elemental salts such as lime, iron, potash, silica, etc., etc., used by the life forces to rebuild the cellular tissue, and this is particularly true of the phosphate of potash, also found in Grape-Nuts, which combines in the human body with albumen and this combination, together with water, rebuilds the worn out gray matter in the delicate nerve centres all over the body, and throughout the brain and solar plexus.

Ordinary coffee stimulates in an unnatural way, but with many people it slowly and surely destroys and does not rebuild this gray substance so vitally important to the well-being of every human being.

These are eternal facts, proven, well authenticated and known to every properly educated physician, chemist and food expert.

Please remember we never say ordinary coffee hurts everyone.

Some people use it regularly and seem strong enough to withstand its attacks, but there is misery and disease in store for the man or woman who persists in its use when nature protests, by heart weakness, stomach and bowel troubles, kidney disease, weak eyes, or general nervous prostration. The remedy is obvious. The drug caffeine, contained in all ordinary coffee, must be discontinued absolutely or the disease will continue in spite of any medicine and will grow worse.

It is easy to leave off the old fashioned coffee by adopting Postum Food Coffee, for in it one finds a pleasing hot breakfast or dinner beverage that has the deep seal brown color, changing to a rich golden brown when good cream is added. When boiled long enough (15 minutes) the flavor is not that of rank Rio coffee but very like the milder, smooth and high grade Java, but entirely lacking the drug effect of ordinary coffee.

Anyone suffering from disorders set up by coffee drinking (and there is an extensive variety) can absolutely depend upon some measure of relief by quitting coffee and using Postum Food Coffee.

If the disease has not become too strongly rooted, one can with good reason expect it to disappear entirely in a reasonable time after the active cause of the trouble is removed and the cellular tissue has time to naturally rebuild with the elements furnished by Postum and good food.

It's only just plain old common sense.

Now, with the exact facts before the reader, he or she can decide the wise course, looking to health and the power to do things.

If you have any doubt as to the cause of any ache or ail you may have, remember the far reaching telegrams of a hurt nervous system travel from heel to head, and it may be well worth your while to make the experiment of leaving off coffee entirely for 10 days and using Postum in its place.

You will probably gather some good solid facts, worth more than a gold mine, for health can make gold and sickness lose it. Besides there's all the fun, for it's like a continuous internal frolic to be perfectly well.

There's a reason for

THE PULPIT.

A BRILLIANT SUNDAY SERMON BY THE REV. DR. LYMAN ABBOTT.

Subject: "The Spirit of Christianity."

Brooklyn, N. Y.—At Plymouth Church, the Rev. Lyman Abbott, D. D., occupied his old pulpit in the absence of the present pastor, the Rev. N. D. Hillis. Dr. Abbott's subject was "The Essential Spirit of Christianity." He chose for his text the passage Matthew xx:27-28: "Whosoever will be chief among you let him be your servant, even as the Son of Man came, not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give His life a ransom for many," and said:

What do we mean by Christianity? What is its essential, specific spirit? It is the spirit of the Christ who "came not to be ministered unto, but to minister." The spirit of the Christian is to be like the Christ. It is to get back of all that is injurious and all that is valuable; all the accretions that are injuring and all the additions which have been made in the growth of Christianity, doctrine, ritual and institutional; to get back to the time of Christ Himself, and, if we can, see what Christianity meant then and there, in order that we may get at the essential spirit of it.

There appeared at the beginning of the so-called Christian era a religious teacher in a province of Palestine. He was certainly for that age and for all ages a singular man. The things we care for most He seemed to be indifferent to. He did not care for pleasure, but He was not ascetic. He did not hide Himself from the world. There is no instance in which He refused an invitation to a feast. He began His ministry be creating wine to prolong the festivities at a marriage feast, and yet He did not care for what men call pleasure. He said Himself that He "had not where to lay His head." He often laid down to sleep with only the stars overhead. He lived on the simplest food. He did not care for wealth. He never called a man a fool but once, and that was the man who spent all his life in accumulating and then did not know what to do with the accumulations. He did not care for power, for when He was offered a crown He refused it. One day they gathered about Him, waved palm branches and shouted "Hosannah!" and amid all the joy and acclaim He stopped and wept as He remembered the sorrows which were to come upon Jerusalem.

Ambition did not appeal to Him. He was willing to preach to 5000 or to 200 or to twenty-five or thirty, or to sit down with one poor wretched woman and talk to her by the well; and it did not make any difference. What did He care for? For service—to go about among men and make them happy. That was what He cared for. He cared for all sorts of men. He was equally willing to serve the Greek or the Jew. If He lived now, He would be as willing to serve the Jew as the Christian. He was willing to save the poor and the rich. He was not a poor man's prophet, nor a rich man's prophet. He was willing to minister to the ignorant, and just as willing to minister to the wise. He would talk with the peasant, or spend an evening with one of the great rabbis at Jerusalem. Character or past conduct did not separate men from His sympathy. It did not make any difference how badly a man had lived or how rotten was his character, He was ready to help him. He came into Jericho one day and the people crowded round Him. It was a city of priests and corrupt politicians. The politicians were more corrupt than in this day, and that is saying a great deal. It was a city of priests and politicians, and one of these latter, who had made money by squeezing the public, was a little man, who climbed into a tree, because he wanted to see this strange man pass. This strange man passed the priests and the orthodox religious people and looked up at the little man and said: "Come down; I am going to dine with you to-day." He sought out the bad man because He thought He could do something for him. He was equally ready to minister food to the hungry, healing to the sick, comfort to the afflicted, wisdom to the ignorant, inspiration to the depressed or succor to the simple and the burdened.

The only question with Him was: "Is this man in trouble?" What kind of trouble? "It does not matter what kind of trouble, I want to help him." That was absolutely His only question. And yet this man saw that the deepest troubles of men are the troubles that come upon them because of their wrong doing. In His first great sermon He gave the secret of happiness when He said: "Blessed are the pure in heart" and "Blessed are the poor in spirit," etc. The secret of happiness is what you are, not what you have. So the thing He wanted to do was to change men's characters, to get them out of sin and lead them in the paths of virtue and truth and good will. He wanted to lift off the burden of their sins and make them healthy, normal, holy men and women. To this He gave His life. He did not do this incidentally, as it chanced Him; there was something more. He said: "That is what I am here for. That is what God put Me into the world for; it is the mission He has given Me." He belonged to a nation that had been taught to look forward for the golden age, not backward. They thought the good time was yet to come. Their prophets had told them so. They thought it was to be brought about, some said, by the nation, by a series of prophets, or by a single man, a conqueror. And this man Jesus said: "This kingdom of God is at hand. This good time is already here, and I am the one to bring it about." The first time He preached was at Nazareth and then He told them this. Then He gathered a few disciples about Him and after a year with them He asked: "Whom do men say that I am?" They said: "There are many different things said. Some say a prophet; some a great teacher; some one thing and some another." And He said: "But whom say ye that I am?" One can imagine the moment of silence and hesitation and uncertainty that followed. And then one, an impulsive one, said: "You are the Messiah." He replied: "Yes, I am; that is right."

The mission of His life was to bring about the kingdom of God on the earth and He said, "The way to do it is to help every one in need. No matter what the character—to help one another, that is the way." The Jews wanted it another way. Queer people, these Jews! They thought they were the great people, which was very like the Anglo-Saxons of to-day. They thought there were no other people who were religious or civilized or who had the secret of great progress. They said the kingdom would come to Jerusalem, not to Rome, and that not the Romans, but the Jews, would be dominant. But Christ said, "No, that is a mistake. The kingdom of God is not in Jerusalem or Rome or Athens. It is in a spirit of universal helpfulness." That is the kingdom of God, and the kingdom will come when every man helps his fellow man out of every kind of need, whatever it may be. He was finally arrested and put upon oath and asked: "Are You the Messiah?" "I am," He said. He claimed to be the Messiah and He claimed to bring about the kingdom of God by diffusing the spirit of hope and faith and good will. The apostles went forth and preached—what? Not the Ten Commandments or the Sermon on the Mount, but "This is the Messiah. The Deliverer is come." In the nature of the case He could not do it alone. If it were to be some sudden upheaval, some cataclysm, some march of armies, it could be done in a single period, but if good will, peace and universal helpfulness were to be brought about, that would take generations. That must go from kingdom to kingdom, from city to city and nation to nation. And so He called a few men to carry the message—first twelve, then seventy. Then He died. Then, after His resurrection, He sent others. He sent them in the spirit of good will and helpfulness, to heal the sick, cleanse the leper and restore comfort to the sorrowing. To minister to everybody, rich, poor, wise, ignorant, to the Jew and the Gentile.

There was something more. In all ages men have believed in some great occult power lying back of the phenomena of nature. The Jews thought there was one great God who inexorably demanded righteousness of His people, and Jesus said, "God is such a one as I am, actuated by the same spirit. In My life and teachings I am interpreting this great Infinite Power, this just, wise God, this eternal Infinite Presence." And He illustrated His meaning by the parable of the king whose subjects rebelled against him; by the parable of the lost sheep and the parable of the prodigal son. "That is the kind of Father that God is," said Jesus.

There is still more in Christ's message. In all ages men have been trying to get to this unknown God. They have said: "We have done wrong, we have aroused the wrath of this God. He is right to be angry with us. How shall we appease His anger? We will offer sacrifices." It is difficult in this twentieth century to realize what worship was twenty centuries ago. Picture the temple, the altar, the white-robed priests. All around in the outer court the cooing of doves, the bleating of sheep, and within, by this altar, a butcher's shop, a shambles. Priests cutting the throats of lambs and cattle and the blood flowing in great rivers out from under the altar. Why? Because these people thought God had a right to be angry—and they were right. He had a right to be angry—and they thought He was angry—and they were half right in that—and they thought the way to peace was by sacrifice, and they were wrong in that. Jesus never offered a sacrifice, so far as we know, or told anybody else to offer sacrifice.

This world is God's reformatory and what He has done is this: His Marshal has come for you and me. Has He come in power, with greatness of riches or wonderful display or intellectual wisdom? No. Come how? In sympathy, in tenderness, in love, in purity and truth and righteousness. We can see no way to happiness save by endowing with truth and purity and righteousness. He has come to us—to you and me.

He says, "You can do the same thing." You say: "I have no power." "Neither had I." "I have not wealth." "Neither had I." "I was not an ecclesiastic." "Neither was I." "Come to Me; get My spirit; live as I lived; be willing to lay down your life for others, as I was for you."

I have tried this morning to get behind all definitions, all creedal statements, not because I think they are bad, but because I am sure the spirit of Christ transcends all definitions and creedal statements. Christianity! What is it? It is the new doctrine of God. It is the new faith in God. It is the faith of God, who is in His world as He was in Jesus Christ, comforting the sorrowing, helping the tempted, instructing the ignorant. It is the new hope, the hope of the kingdom of God that is coming. There is coming the time when men will give to their fellow men fair, honest, generous measures and will "do unto others as they would be done unto." That is righteousness. There is coming a time when there will be peace in every heart because it is at harmony with itself, and peace in the whole world between man and man, nation and nation. And it is a new hope that Christianity brings when it says: "Now, you can work for that because you are working in the spirit of the Eternal, and it is the spirit of good will, of service, of sacrifice, of laying down our lives for others as He laid down His life for us."

Christianity! What is it? It is that "God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him might not perish, but have everlasting life." That is the theology of Christianity. "The kingdom of God is at hand." That is the hope of Christianity. "A new commandment give I unto you: that ye love one another as I have loved you." That is the law of Christianity.

Where Love Is, There God Is.

Thoughts that disturb and trouble us seldom come from God. It is generally best to put them away, and throw ourself, with increased trust in Him and mistrust of self, at His feet. And never forget, amid whatever may befall you—dryness, coldness, desolation and disappointment, consciousness of many faults, and of great weakness, and want of faith—that where love is, there God is sure to be. He never yet has suffered any soul to fall wholly from Him which, amid all its frailities and falls, clings to Him in love.—H. L. Sidney Lear.

NO REST NIGHT OR DAY.

With Irritating Skin Humor—Hair Began to Fall Out—Wonderful Result From Cuticura Remedies.

"About the latter part of July my whole body began to itch. I did not take much notice of it at first, but it began to get worse all the time, and then I began to get uneasy and tried all kinds of baths and other remedies that were recommended for skin humors, but I became worse all the time. My hair began to fall out and my scalp itched all the time. Especially at night, just as soon as I would get in bed and get warm, my whole body would begin to itch, and my finger nails would keep it irritated, and it was not long before I could not rest night or day. A friend asked me to try the Cuticura Remedies, and I did, and the first application helped me wonderfully. For about four weeks I would take a hot bath every night and then apply the Cuticura Ointment to my whole body, and I kept getting better, and by the time I used four boxes of Cuticura I was entirely cured and my hair stopped falling out. Doctor Brigham Says

MANY PHYSICIANS PRESCRIBE

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

The wonderful power of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound over the diseases of womankind is not because it is a stimulant, not because it is a palliative, but simply because it is the most wonderful tonic and reconstructor ever discovered to act directly upon the generative organs, positively curing disease and restoring health and vigor.

Marvelous cures are reported from all parts of the country by women who have been cured, trained nurses who have witnessed cures and physicians who have recognized the virtue of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and are fair enough to give credit where it is due.

If physicians dared to be frank and open, hundreds of them would acknowledge that they constantly prescribe Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in severe cases of female ills, as they know by experience it can be relied upon to effect a cure. The following letter proves it.

Dr. S. C. Brigham, of 4 Brigham Park, Fitchburg, Mass., writes:

"It gives me great pleasure to say that I have found Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound very efficacious, and often prescribe it in my practice for female difficulties.

"My oldest daughter found it very beneficial for a female trouble some time ago, and my youngest daughter is now taking it for a female weakness, and is surely gaining in health and strength.

"I freely advocate it as a most reliable specific in all diseases to which women are subject, and give it honest endorsement."

Women who are troubled with painful or irregular periods, bloating (or flatulency), weakness of organs, displacements, inflammation or ulceration, can be restored to perfect health and strength by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. If advice is needed write to Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. She is daughter-in-law of Lydia E. Pinkham and for twenty-five years has been advising sick women free of charge. No other living person has had the benefit of a wider experience in treating female ills. She has guided thousands to health. Every suffering woman should ask for and follow her advice if she wants to be strong and well.

Editor Banner: Please give me space in the dear Banner to say a few words in regard to our community. Health is good at present.

Rev. Thomas filled his regular appointment on Saturday and Sunday last.

We have had lots of rain and the farmers are getting along slow with their work.

Most all are through planting corn, and it looks like planting in winter. I think that the young people are going to have a nice time Easter Sunday. I hope that we young people can get together and gather flowers from the green woods as it has been a long time since we had that pleasure. I will be glad for sweet summer times to come again, as we have had so much cold weather, so we can hear farmers plowing and see them planting, and I hope the good Lord will bless us all with good crops and health and plenty of something to eat.

TWO FRIENDS.

Nothing will relieve indigestion that is not a thorough digestant. Kodol Dyspepsia Cure digests what you eat, and allows the stomach to rest—recuperate—grow strong again. A few doses of Kodol after meals will soon restore the stomach and digestive organs to a full performance of their functions naturally. Sold by Upchurch Drug co.

Mulberry.

Dear old Banner—If you will allow me a short space in your paper I will come again.

Farmers are busy planting corn.

Mrs J. M. Lee and daughter, Miss Minnie, spent last Sunday with Mrs. Abron.

Mr. Jesse Lee and wife spent the day with Mr. Jack Smith Sunday.

Well, I will close and come again.

Human Blood Marks.

A tale of horror was told by marks of human blood in the home of J. W. Williams, a well known merchant of Bac, Ky. He writes: "Twenty years ago I had severe hemorrhages of the lungs, and was near death when I began taking Dr. King's New Discovery. It completely cured me and I have remained well ever since." It cures Hemarrhages, Chronic Coughs, Settled Colds and Bronchitis, and is the only known cure for Weak Lungs. Every bottle guaranteed by Upchurch Drug co. 50c and $1.00.

A Lesson From Experience.

A few years ago at the close of an evening service, a lady approached me and asked to speak with me. She was weeping, and said that she was in great trouble and wished that I would call at her residence the next morning. I did so, not knowing the cause of her trouble. She then told me the following story: Before coming to this city my husband and I lived in—town in the State of—. He was the superintendent of the Presbyterian Sunday school, and a member of that church. I was a Baptist and a teacher in that Sunday school. After we were married he said to me that he would go with me to my church every other Sunday and did so. I did not go with him at all to his church for the ladies of my church had said to me to stand firm and I would bring him into our church. For business reasons we moved to this city. My pastor wrote to Dr.—, informing him that I was here, and that my husband was a Presbyterian. The pastor, and a number of the ladies of his church called to see me before Sunday. I was cordially greeted at the church, and some of the ladies told me to stand firm and my husband would "come round." My husband went with me once to my church, and for awhile he attended your church every other Sunday, and then ceased to attend church at all. Then he began going to his office Sunday morning and yesterday when he came home after dinner he was under the influence of whiskey. I was crushed, and said to him, "My dear, I will go with you to your church every Sunday if you will go with me." Then he jeered me for the way I had treated him, and said my conduct had turned him against religion. She proposed to ask for a church letter at once and unite with the church of which I am pastor. I told her I could have nothing to say about that, but that I would do all I could to get her husband to come back to the church and take up his religious duties. I need not follow the story of these two. I give this account of a pastorial experience simply for the good it may do. Our Baptist friends almost invariably in mixed marriages similar to the one above described, not only cling tenaciously to their member, but move heaven and earth to get the other party of whatever faith, into their church. They come right into the home and seem oblivious to the sanctity of the marriage relation. Would it not be better for all parties to keep hands off and let the husband and wife settle the question for themselves? Do not the Baptists believe that Presbyterians can be saved? Do they believe that their baptism is necessary to salvation? They say they do not; then why this unseemliness? May God hasten the day when all branches of Christ's church shall cease to tithe mint and anise and cumin, and leave undone the weightier matters of law, justice and mercy, and faith.

Now, does not this woman's story show the subtle cunning of the evil one? Satan wanted that man's soul, but he knows that he is too strong in his faith and integrity to be won by direct temptation. So he set about to find some way to discourage him. His love for his wife and the desire for her love and sympathy in what interested and was dear to him in life gave the enemy of his soul the advantage he wanted. Now, when that man showed true Christian respect for his wife's church by attending the services with her part of the time did she respond in the same Christian spirit? No, she thought she had half of him and by "standing firm" he would "come around" and she would have all her way, but she failed to take in consideration that the other half was the best part of him, his faith, the faith of the old Scotch covenanters who fought, suffered and died for their religious faith. She had vowed to love and honor him. Was it honoring him when she allowed others to come in with their advice which she followed until her husband lost faith in her religion? Does the result not prove that she was making a sad mistake by what she called "standing firm?" Did God's blessing rest on that firmness? God's blessing will rest on no woman whose influence or conduct turns a man away from his God. Some wives insist that if they do not go to church their husbands must stay at home with them. Can such women be Christians? And how will those men answer for their neglect of their church and the worship of God? It will be a poor excuse to say my wife could not go and I stayed at home because she said she would be lonesome. If you said because she was selfish and did not love you enough to have your soul's best interest at heart you would come nearer the truth. Of course if you are providentially hindered it is your duty to stay at home, but be sure it is providence and not your own selfishness that keeps you away. Whatever comes between you and your God is sin. And God spake these words, saying: "Thou shalt have no other Gods before me."—Ex. 20:3.

S. C. A. Why Not Change Meeting Day?

Editor Banner—Please allow me space for a few words in regard to the time or day on which the Southern Cotton Growers' Association meets in this county. I notice that the meetings are always held on Saturday, which I think is the cause of complaint from the president at this time of such small attendance at meetings. There is a large number of people that would go to the meetings if they were not held on Saturday, for this reason: In the country a large number of people go to church on Saturday, and again the Farmers' Union is pretty well organized in this county and a large number of men attend their Union meetings on Saturday which is just what they should do; and a large number of we farmers even put off going to mill until Saturday evening. So you see that Saturday is about the busiest day in the week for the farmer. I think if the meetings were changed to some other day in the week the attendance would be larger. Success to the Banner.

P. S. Oh, I forgot one thing. 'Squire Milford has started the Gulledge boom, why not keep it booming? How many men is there in this county better qualified to represent us in the Legislature than Mr. Gulledge? Yes, and there is Hon. Tip. Mullins, I would like very much to see him go to the State Senate, he is well qualified for the position.

Delegates to S. S. Convention.

Maplesville, April 8th, 1906

Editor Banner: Please be so good as to publish the following appointments for me. I designate the following delegates at large from Chilton county to the State Sunday School Convention to be held at Montgomery April 24 26:

Dr H. W. Caffey, Verbena; R. A. Rasco, Thorsby; Judge Reynolds, Clanton; W. D. Snow, Maplesville; H. J. Grooms, Maplesville. I will not appoint any alternates, as I feel sure these will go. As to entertainment there, and railroad fare, the Secretary's letter in last issue of the Banner gave all necessary particulars. Chilton is now a Banner county in the Sunday School work, and no one can feel abashed at representing it in the State Convention.

Editor Banner: Please allow me space in your valuable paper to say a few words about the closing of our school at this place, which was taught by Miss Julia Parrish

We had a nice concert at the closing of the school. The speeches and the songs rendered by the pupils were appropriate and nice, and were conclusive evidence of the competent and faithful work of our teacher. We think she was a good girl and we know she did all she could to learn the children, we hope we will get a teacher to teach our next school that will try to do as much for the children as she did. While she was with us she won the love of all. Yes, Miss Julia, we miss you in our sabbath school as well as in the school room. It was sad to say good bye to you, but may God bless you in all of your undertakings through life.

Bro. Parrish will preach an Easter sermon here the third Sunday in April; everybody invited to come. Best wishes to the Banner and its many readers.

Editor Banner—As I have never written a letter to the Banner I thought I would try once. Thursday was a beautiful day, and George Freeman and D. L. The ceremony took place at the county line, two miles east of Randolph. There were only a few present, though everyone seemed to be happy. About Rheumatism.

There are few diseases that inflict more torture than rheumatism and there is probably no disease for which such a varied and useless lot of remedies have been suggested. To say that it can be cured is, therefore, a bold statement to make, but Chamberlain's Pain Balm, which enjoys an extensive sale, has met with great success in the treatment of this disease. One application of Pain Balm will relieve the pain, and hundreds of sufferers have testified to permanent cures by its use. Why suffer when Pain Balm affords such quick relief and costs but a trifle? Old man Giddles wants to know what's the use of wondering whether there are people on Mars, when we can't sell them anything.

How we love to talk of the wonderful things we have not done. The reason for this is that nothing is wonderful after it has been done.

A biologist prescribes a pound of candy or a dose of cooking soda for "that tired feeling." The young American will know which prescription to take.

It is to be hoped that the news that an American cornet player is receiving $1500 a week in Paris won't start the man next door to practicing hereafter double time.

Mr. Carnegie says that millionaires who laugh are rare. It is quite possible that Mr. Rockefeller knew this and, wanting to laugh, not only became rare but disappeared altogether.

Lots of people are poor to-day because they didn't know what was going to happen in 1905. Lots more will become poor because they think they know what will happen in 1906.

The announcement that the Pennsylvania Railway Company is preparing to do away with steam engines and to use electric motors exclusively, throughout its extensive system, presages the end of the age of steam and the coming triumph of electricity. The statement may seem startling at first, but as a matter of fact the railroads have been experimenting with electric engines for some time and their eventual use was a foregone conclusion. Not only in the matter of speed but in every other respect electricity has the advantage over steam as a motive power.

It is surprising how many people there are in this world who want to increase the discomforts of life. There is always bobbing up some professor or propagandist who informs us that everything we have ever done is wrong and that the only road to physical salvation is to follow his own schedule. And now comes a man from Chicago and tells us that we must not eat soup, pie, pancakes, puddings and cold meats, except ham, and apparently make our principal diet spinach, asparagus, lettuce and onions. Probably most persons eat more than is good for them and it is certain that, generally speaking, food is not well cooked. But to lay down a law for the human race is absurd.

The idea that has prevailed up to a very recent date that organic life does not exist at great depths in the ocean, has been exploded by late scientific investigation. As a matter of fact, the pressure of water is so great that ordinary articles of wood are compressed to half their original size if lowered to a depth of three thousand feet. If a human being were suddenly exposed to the pressure of water at that depth he would be compressed to the thinness of paper. A diver at the depth of ten thousand feet would have weight upon him equal to several hundred of the greater and heaviest locomotives. There are depressions very much deeper, however, and soundings have been made establishing depths of more than twenty-two thousand feet near the Island of St. Thomas in the Atlantic, and of almost twenty-seven thousand feet near the Japanese coast.

Dr. Stenson Hooker, who has applied the Blondlot ray discoveries to problems of food, explains in the London Express how the colored rays that surround every human being are affected by a "refined diet," meaning a diet without meat. There are some visible changes, such as "shrinkage of the features." The face becomes "smaller but more beautiful," a fact which might incline persons with large and unbeautiful faces to vegetarianism. The eye becomes brighter, the step more elastic, the brain quicker. But perhaps the most remarkable discovery of Dr. Hooker is that the man who is "living a gross life"—i. e., eating meat—emits and is surrounded by dark rays from deep red to chocolate, while the "refined diet" man will generate cheerful rays of lighter red, or, if he is very refined, of yellow. If Dr. Hooker's view becomes general, suggests the New York World, the man who now complains of that dark-brown taste in his mouth next day will gloomily announce instead that he is surrounded by dark brown rays.

EASTER'S INFLUENCE IN THE PLANT WORLD

CHRISTMAS has its established regalia of holly and mistletoe and the Fourth of July its paraphernalia of national colors and fireworks, so Easter, too, always greets us in traditional costume. She has chosen to appear in the springtime burst of blossom, and without her radiant drapery we would hardly recognize her. Not only do the garden terraces bloom at her approach, but all untilled nature smiles and adorns itself in manifold hues treasured from Iris' last kiss. The landscape is changed under the flood of new aspiration and man is enticed to go forth and become acquainted anew with "our sisters, the flowers," as dear old Francis of Assisi called them.

Out with the flowers, as we know and enjoy them, we think of them by individual names, for our minds seem to demand a specializing title for each thing we encounter, whether it be picture of song, story or natural object. When we consider the names of flowers in their historical development, we are brought face to face with the fact that Easter really changed the nomenclature of our floral world.

Before Christianity swept over Europe, the plants were named for the pagan deities. We have to-day a reminiscence of this entitling in Venus' Fly-trap and Jupiter's Beard. With the ascendancy of our faith, the vegetable kingdom had to be rechristened, just as the human converts were.

The Saviour Himself had few plants named for Him, perhaps from a feeling of reverence. We have, however, Christ's Thorn, which is supposed to have supplied the material for the Crown. His mother was much honored. All blossoms with "Virgin" prefixed, as Virgin's Bower, were named for her, and those, too, that have "Maiden," as Maiden's Hair, and any form of "Mary," as Marigold. Each flower that reaches us to-day with "Lady" in its title was originally "Our Lady," as "Our Lady's Slipper" and "Our Lady's Tresses." In those early days of Christianity many of the saints were paid respect in floral terms. As we have swerved to secularism, we have supplanted their claims and have retained only a few, as Saint John's Wort, Saint Peter's Wreath, Saint Andrew's Cross, Saint Joseph's Lily, and Veronica.

Our ancestors were as eager for explanations as we to-day, and not having our advance in science, they interpreted peculiarities of the flowers to suit their own ideas. From the interpretation of plants on the economic side grew the great Doctrine of Signatures that ruled the medical world down to the seventeenth century. This doctrine of signatures explained that "The mercy of God—maketh the grasse to growe upon the mountains and the herbes for the use of man, and hath not only stamped upon them a distinct form, but also given them particular signatures, whereby a man may read even in legible characters the use of them." According to this theory, plants bearing red fruit were good for the blood; the barberry, because of its yellow bark, was a cure for jaundice; the trembling grass deterred attacks of ague; the oxalis, having cordate leaves, was a preventive of heart disease; Our Lady's Thistle, with its numerous prickles, mended a stitch in the side; the Solomon's Seal, by certain marks in its root, indicated that it would seal up all wounds, and this root, writes Gerarde, the English surgeon of the sixteenth century, "taketh away in one night, or two at the most, any bruise, black or blue spots, gotten by falls or women's willfulness in stumbling upon their husbands' fists." Our English literature abounds in allusions to this doctrine of signatures, as when Milton in

> "Then purged with euphrasy and rue
> His visual orbs, for he had much to see."

makes Gabriel clear Adam's vision with the little euphrasia or eyebright, which because of a dark, pupil-like spot on its corolla, was considered a cure for weak eyes.

While evolving the doctrine of signatures on the one hand, our forefathers developed on the other a spiritual lore of plants that connected the flowers with the foundation of their religion. Our Lady's Thistle merited its name from a legend of the flight of the holy family from Bethlehem. As Mary nursed the Infant by the roadside, a few drops of milk fell on a plant at her feet, and the leaves retain to this generation the vouchers for the story.

Most of the Christian legends explain the plant's behavior during Passion Week. The veronica bears the imprint that Saint Veronica received on her handkerchief when she pressed from out the throng and wiped the perspiration from the Saviour's brow.

The Fritillaria, or Checkered Lily, before the Sacrifice, was pure white with upturned cup. It stood proudly erect during the Suffering, until darkness enshrouded the earth and it saw that all nature but itself was sorrowing. Then it repented. It drooped low its head, donned garments of mourning, and began to weep. Still it grieves, in sombre attire, with bowed head, and still each petal ever sheds a pearly tear.

The oxalis, or wood sorrel, was standing at the foot of the Cross and received some drops of the Precious Blood. These she bears even to this day. The Italians have this same legend about the oxalis, which they call "allelula," to indicate that the little blossom is glorifying God for its great privilege. The scarlet anenome, too, is said to bear the stains of Christ's blood.

The poppy yet carries the memory of the Cross deeply graven in her heart. The banana, too, preserves the Cross in the centre of the fruit. For this reason, the people of the Canary Islands will never cut through a banana as we do; if they ever use a knife to it they slice off lengthwise pieces.

The aspen still shivers with remorse because, when Christ passed it on the way to Calvary, it boldly faced the heavens instead of paying homage as the other trees did. The willow was used for the scourges, and ever since it has bowed its branches in sorrow. The elder in commonly supposed to be the tree upon which Judas hanged himself. It is not to be used even for firewood. However, it is a safe refuge in time of storm, for not even lightning will deign to strike it. A fungus that grows on the elder and is now known as Jew's ear was originally called Judas' ear. The cedar, the pine, and the box are all connected with the Crucifixion. Different authorities vary in just what woods did form the Cross. Bebe says the cypress, the cedar, the pine, and the box; but Saint Chrysostom quotes from Isaiah lx:13: "The glory of Lebanon (cedar) shall come unto thee, the fir tree, the pine tree, and the box together to beautify the place of my sanctuary.") The Church fathers considered four woods necessary to the Cross to symbolize the four quarters of the globe over which its influence would spread. The traditions of the Cross go even back to the days of Adam, and one declares that it was made from apple tree wood—the inference being obvious.

The old legends may seem to us now the relics of a superstitious age, and yet they indicate a stage in our own civilization. They represent the time when man considered all things of earth made for him and his use. Their peculiar traits or formations must show some connection with his history or imagery. If we have risen to-day to the higher epoch, where we see that each created thing lives for its own development, and not to minister to our needs, it is because of the many more Easters we have experienced since our ancestors' days. Each new Easter, with its floodtide of energy, brings a fresh desire to advance and to consider less selfishly not only the lives of our fellowmen, but also the individuality of "the lilies of the field."—Agnes Comerford, in The Household.

Christ the Lord is Risen to-day

Easter Dawn

WILLIA[illegible]NE

From night withdrawn, the Easter dawn
Illumines land and sea,—
All Earth is bright with quenchless light,
And heavenly harmony.
True to His word, the risen Lord
Walks in the new-born day,
And from His tomb of sunless gloom
The stone has rolled away.

Tall lilies rise like votaries,—
With love and joy impearled,—
And perfumes meet in concord sweet
Around the rescued world.
Christ conquers Death, and radiant Faith
Comes like an irised dove
From heights where bloom, beyond the tomb,
The lilies of His love.

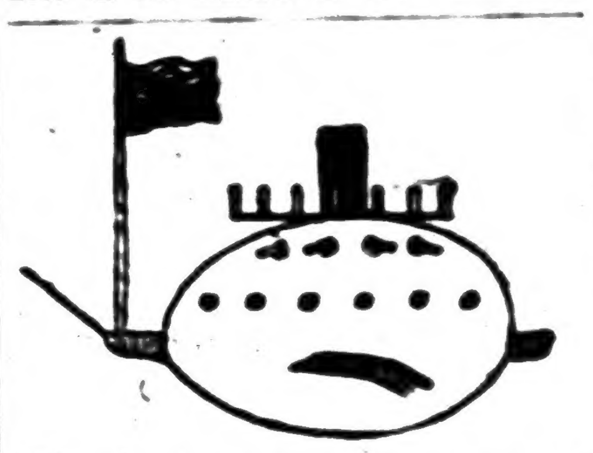
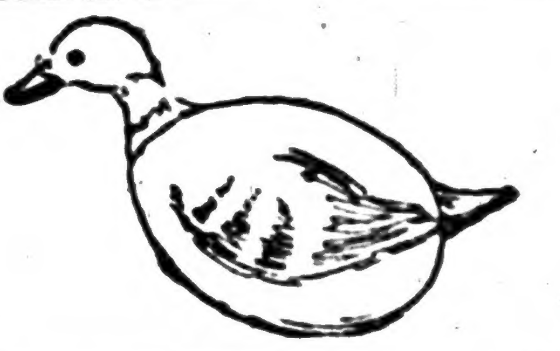
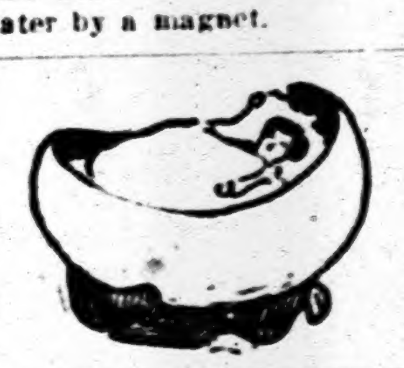
Fun For Easter With Decorated Eggs

The torpedo boat that floats is sure to please. Blow out the contents of an egg by making a pinhole in both ends, and blowing steadily in one. Make a hole in the middle of the side of an egg and pour in melted sealing wax and lead. Paint a row of portholes around the egg and glue on a bow and a stern cut from a cigar box or a shingle. The smokestack is of black cardboard and the railing of wooden toothpicks glued in a circle of cardboard which slips over the smokestack and is kept in place with a touch of glue. The American flag flies from a toothpick. If a needle is put into the bow the boat can be drawn through the water by a magnet.







A more peaceable toy is the duck. Weight the shell and paint it to represent a duck. Cut head and tail of pasteboard and after gluing firmly to the shell paint in colors. For the little girl's doll house an eggshell cradle can be made. If the maker is skilled it can be cut in one piece from the egg. Pasteboard rockers are glued on and the cradle can be fitter with tiny mattress, pillow and spread. A penny doll, clad in its nighty, should repose beneath the covers.

A Chinese Belief.

The Chinese believe that a man, a frog and a hare dwell in the moon, and the last named animal constantly appears in their art and in that of Japan, painted upon the disk of a lunar orb. Nearly all over the world the hare is associated with the moon mythologically, and it is on this account that the rabbit has so much to do with Easter.

LIQUID FIRE

ing down Mountain and Torrents of Lava Blighting Country.

OUNT VESUVIUS STILL RAGES.

ants of Surrounding Villages Flee From Their Homes, While Detonations Tell of Earthquakes.

Naples.—Mount Vesuvius is a colossal brazier, and the town of Boscatrecase, on its southern declivity, is a gray island of ruined country covered by tons of ashes.

Torrents of liquid fire are coursing in all directions, while a pall of sulphurous smoke that hovers over all makes breathing difficult.

The streams of lava are resistless. They snap like pipestems the trunks of chestnuts hundreds of years old, blight the blooms on the peach trees before the trees themselves have been scorched, raze the homes of the peasants, dash into the wells as though seeking to slake their thirst and then continue their course down the mountain.

Everywhere pitiful scenes are witnessed, women tearing their hair and old men crying aloud at the loss of their homesteads, while in the distance, in striking contrast, the sapphire-colored Mediterranean and the placid island of Apri.

Artillery carts have been sent to the assistance of the fleeing peasants, and the Duke of Aosta, Cardinal Joseph Prisco and all the authorities, despite the rain, went to the portions of the mountain most threatened in order to succor or comfort the people.

Cardinal Prisco distributed food and clothing to the peasants and even went so far as to give away the rings on his fingers. Repeatedly he exclaimed to the frightened peasants: "Pray, my children, you may be sure God will not desert you."

Bosco Reale, one of the villages in danger of destruction, is the birthplace of the cardinal and the home of most of his relatives.

The statue of St. Anne, which was taken to the mountain side to confront the lava, is frequently moved backward as the tide advances.

Considerable apprehension is felt because of the earthquake shocks, which are growing stronger, and are felt even at Castellammare, fifteen miles southeast of here. Each shock is accompanied by deep and prolonged detonations.

Ottajano, at the northeast foot of the mountains, is threatened, and the people are beginning to desert the town. The populace of Torre Annunziata, at the south foot, requested that trains be ready to proceed there.

Signor Mattaucca, director of the observatory on Vesuvius, still continues to occupy a most dangerous position. With him is an engineer named Perret.

New craters have opened at different points on the mountain, but it is impossible to ascertain their number or where they are situated.

No German Aid for Russia.

Berlin.—No part of the new Russian loan will be issued here, although some German banks will subscribe in Paris. This determination on the part of Germany is due to the fact that the government is floating imperial and Prussian loans totalling $150,000,000, which will not be listed on the market before two or three weeks, and also because the German government financiers at present are not disposed to assist Russia.

Italy Accepts Russia's Proposal.

Rome.—Italy has accepted Russia's program for the second peace conference at The Hague during the early part of July and has also accepted the invitation to take part in the Red Cross convention at Geneva in the middle of June.

Tobacco Monopoly Pays Well.

New York.—A cablegram received by the consul general of Japan from the department of finance, Tokio, says that the net profit of the tobacco monopoly for the fiscal year 1905-6 amounted to $16,642,000, exceeding the estimated figures by $636,500.

Warships Not Needed in China.

Washington, D. C.—That warships are not needed in Chinese waters at this time to preserve the peace is indicated by a cable message received at the navy department saying that the battleships Ohio and Wisconsin and the gunboat Concord, which have been at Shanghai for several weeks, left that port Friday for Kobe, Japan.

Yellow Fever Patients.

Jackson, Miss.—Governor Vardaman received a letter from Surgeon White, in New Orleans, stating that, notwithstanding the reports to the contrary, a fever patient at Kenner, La., was suffering from yellow fever. Dr. White states that he has seen the patient and that there is no doubt that the case is yellow fever. He notified the governor of Mississipi, he adds, because he feels it his duty to do so.

RAISE [illegible]

If Russia Gets This Sum Radicals Believe Parliament Endangered.

St. Petersburg.—The Rech says Russia hopes to get $750,000,000 from the loan the government is now negotiating and that the government has offered exceptional terms to the bankers in order to conclude the negotiations before the Russian parliament assembles. The radicals generally believe that if the government succeeds in filling the war chest with such an enormous sum it will be in a position to snap its fingers at parliament. Only by keeping the government in dire straits do they believe it will be forced to yield to the popular demands for reform.

Upon the request of the minister of the interior the council of the empire has increased the appropriation for the rural police by over $1,500,000.

Foraker Boomed for Presidency.

Washington, D. C.—According to reports from Ohio Senator Foraker's friends will formally open his campaign for the republican presidential nomination by seeking to get through the convention this year a resolution so endorsing him. It was the Foraker republicans in Ohio who in 1903 urged the republican state convention to adopt a resolution endorsing the administration of President Roosevelt and endorsing him as a candidate of the party for the presidency the following year. They are entirely consistent therefore in their proposition now to present a resolution to the republican state convention this year declaring for Senator Foraker for the republican nomination for the presidency in 1908. It is true that the presidential nomination is still two years in the future, but it is also true that Senator Foraker is an Ohio man, as President Roosevelt was not.

Ninety Per cent in Operation.

Pittsburg, Pa.—President Frank Feehan, of the United Mine Workers' district organization, announced that from the number of signatures to the agreement received up to noon Saturday mines producing fully 90 per cent of the tonnage in the Pittsburg district would be in operation on Monday. In addition to those already reported, the most important signature Saturday was that of the Youghiogheny and Ohio Coal Company and its allied interests, which produce over 1,000,000 tons annually. The signing of the agreement to pay the 1903 scale was interpreted by the independents to mean the granting of all concessions obtained by the miners during the last two years.

Fifty Bodies Buried.

Nagold, South Germany.—The burial of fifty bodies of those who perished April 5 by the collapse of the Hotel Zum Hirschen took place by twos and threes, so that the three pastors who came from the neighboring villages might read the services by the graveside at each interment. The pastor of Nagold is among the dead. The sorrowful scenes at the cemetery began at 9 o'clock in the morning, when the first coffins were borne on the shoulders of the townsmen through the streets to the cemetery. This continued until late in the afternoon. There is scarcely a family in the village which has not lost a member.

Rough Times in Lens.

Lens, France.—The striking coal miners are comparatively calm, though numerous small depredations continue to be reported. Strikers blew up with dynamite fifteen feet of the rails of the bridge at Toquerreil, and cavalry charged and dispersed a crowd of manifestants at Noeux-Les-Mines. The number of strikers is diminishing in some sections, and disorderly bands who crossed the Belgian frontier were forced back by Belgian gendarmes.

Algeciras Delegates Honored.

Berlin.—Emperor William has conferred upon Herr von Radowitz the order of the Black Eagle, the highest Prussian decoration, and upon Count von Tattenbach the order of Red Eagle of the first class, as rewards for their work at the Algeciras conference.

One Dollar Consideration.

Indianapolis, Ind.—The transfer of the property of the Standard Oil Company of Kentucky to the Indiana company has been announced, and is taken to indicate that the Kentucky company is withdrawing from the state. The manager of the local offices refused to discuss the transfer. A consideration of $1 is named.

South Recognized as Good Field.

St. Paul, Minn.—Recognizing the growing importance of the south from a railroad standpoint, General Passenger Agent Cleland, of the Northern Pacific railroad, has appointed George T. Foyes traveling passenger agent at Atlanta, Ga.

Will Admitted to Probate.

Salem, Mass.—The will of E. C. Swift, the millionaire packer, was admitted to probate in this city. Beyond a bequest of $3,000 to a church at Sagamore, Mass., there were no public gifts except for this donation and small annuities for two long time employes of Mr. Swift, the estate, estimated at about $10,000,000, is left in trust for the benefit of the family of the testator.

RUSSIA IN A PANIC.

Democratic Successes and Victories may have Dramatic Consequences.

PRECIPITATED BY COUNT WITTE.

Premier Visits the Emperor and Tells Him That He Must at Once Proclaim a Constitution.

St. Petersburg.—A panic has been created in government circles by the surprising strength developed by the constitutional democrats in the elections, which may have immediate and dramatic consequences.

The issue between reaction and reform, which has been hanging in the balance, was unexpectedly precipitated by Premier Witte. The elections have greatly strengthened the premier's hand in his fight against the reactionists, and he now feels strong enough to challenge General Trepoff and Minister of the Interior Durnovo and the entire reactionary cabal.

Less than a fortnight ago the premier was decidedly pessimistic, and believed that the majority in the lower house of parliament would be conservative and that the entire program for reform might be overthrown. The results of the elections, however, convinced him that the radicals will control the house and that attempt to thwart the popular will as expressed by the ballot box would be a fatal blunder on the part of the government. It was learned from an unimpeachable source that the premier journeyed to Tsarkoe-Selo on Thursday to lay this view before the emperor, and made another trip to Tsarskoe-Selo Saturday night and was closeted with his majesty until after midnight.

The impression is abroad that the success of the constitutional democrats will insure the success of the big foreign loan, of which the government is in such urgent need.

Sunday twenty-eight provincial conventions met and elected 187 members of the lower house of parliament. The peasant representatives have a clear majority over all the other classes combined. Should the radicals make anything like the sweep which they anticipate the emperor probably will be compelled to yield to the premier's advice. At any rate he seems to have aligned himself on the side of the people.

In effect he told the emperor that he regarded the situation as desperate and that the time had come to choose between himself and Interior Minister Durnovo and counseled his majesty not only to accept the result of the elections, but to anticipate any demand on the part of the lower house of the parliament for a constitution by the issuance of a constitution before parliament convenes, and at the same time mark his change of policy by the proclamation of a general amnesty at Easter. The premier is also understood to have pointed out that such a course would make a splendid impression.

Increase in Trade.

London.—The March statement of the board of trade shows increases of $21,436,500 in imports and $17,901,500 in exports.

Street Car Accident.

Kokomo, Ind.—James F. Bruff, an architect, was killed and four other passengers were injured in a wreck on the Kokomo street railway. A car jumped the track on an embankment twelve feet high and rolled to the bottom.

Typhus at Pittsburg.

Pittsburg, Pa.—Seventy-six more cases of typhoid fever were reported to the board of health Saturday. This is the greatest number recorded in one day in nine years and is causing much alarm. In four days there have been 245 new cases, and since January 1 the total has reached 1,312.

Died of Injury.

Shelbyville, Tenn.—Joseph Jones, an excellent and greatly esteemed young man, aged 19 years, who was the main support of a widowed mother, was caught by the belting of a saw mill five miles from town Thursday and his arm was crushed before the machinery could be stopped. The arm was amputated, bu the young man died in a few minutes after the operation. An uncle of the young man was killed at the same saw mill some time ago.

Chaffee, retired, has been tendered the position of president of the New York Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals at a salary of $6,000 per annum. He has taken the offer under consideration and will probably return his answer to the persons who made it when he reaches New York from the south, which will probably be next Tuesday or Wednesday.

ATTACKED AT NIGHT.

Passenger Boats Robbed by Chinese Pirates Not Far From Canton.

Hong Kong.—Chinese pirates on April 3 held up three passenger boats fourteen miles from San Shui, not far from Canton, and robbed the Rev. Charles B. Hager, an American missionary. In an interview Dr. Hager said:

"Our boats and two others were anchored off a village on the Tung river, when they were simultaneously attacked at night by forty pirates armed with Mauser rifles. They fired at us and narrowly missed me. The boats were riddled with bullets. I was divested of my clothes, cash and surgical instruments. I have reported the matter to the American consul at Canton."

India's Cotton Crop.

Washington, D. C.—American consular officers in Asia report broadening commercial activity in the Orient. Consul-General Miller reports from Yokohama that merchandise arrivals at that Japanese port in 1905 amounted to $26,000,000 for the principal articles alone, cotton and cotton manufactures leading, with $10,236,000. The United States bought nearly all of the 22,876,000 pounds of tea which Yokohama exported last year and 74 per cent of her $36,000,000 raw silk exports.

India's cotton crop for the season of 1905-6 is announced by Consul Fee, of Bombay, to be 3,240,000 bales of 400 nips and oil meal, and such rations pounds each. This is half a million bales less than in the previous year, although there were 505,000 additional acres planted. The increased yield in the province of Bombay was more than offset by the decrease in the central provinces, in Punjab and Hyderabad.

Cuba's one-sided trade is shown in a report to the bureau of manufactures from Consul Baehr at Cienfugos. The exports of $12,500,000 in value from that port during the last fiscal year all went to the United States except $98,000 worth, while of the $6,890,0000 imports only about one-third came from the states. Americans are developing large sugar plantations around Cienfugos.

Conspiracy to Defraud.

Chicago, Ill.—John A. Linn, clerk of the circuit court of Cook county, and formerly clerk of the superior court of Cook county, entered a plea of guilty to a charge of conspiracy to defraud, and was given an indeterminate sentence in the penitentiary. But one witness was heard in the defense, and this was a physician, who declared that Linn was afflicted with bronchial trouble and hard labor and exposure will endanger his life. Linn was indicted on more than a score of charges, one of which was conspiracy to defraud the county of money through the manipulation of jurors' pay checks. Linn has been acting as clerk of the circuit court until Saturday, when his resignation was presented, immediately after he had decided to enter the plea of guilty.

$17,000 Bar of Gold Missing.

New York.—A bar of gold bullion valued at about $17,000 was stolen in shipment between Georgetown, British Guiana, and New York. The discovery of the theft was made when the box in which the bar was shipped was opened and found to contain a piece of steel. The numerous seals on the box were undisturbed.

Girl's Sentence is Commuted.

Nashville, Tenn.—A freight train on the Southern railway broke in two near Rockwood, fifteen miles east of Nashville, at 12 o'clock Friday, causing a serious wreck and fatally injuring W. B. Duke, a Nashville brakeman, who died about twenty-six hours afterward. The train was coming west when the coupling broke about midway the train. Duke was near the break, and when the jar came he fell between the cars and was badly mangled. One leg was broken in five places, his head badly cut and both arms injured. He was taken to Rockwood, where the company physician, Dr. Clarke, attended him until he died at 2:50 Saturday afternoon.

The membership numbers sixty-five men already, and the number of speeches made by the prisoners indicates that much good will result. A secretary was elected and has been instructed to correspond with other prisons throughout the United States, and if they have such organizations to get closer in touch with the idea of increasing the means for advancement in prison life.

Endeavorers Meet in Capital City.

Montgomery, Ala.—The sixteenth annual convention of the Alabama Christian Endeavor Union convened at the Central Presbyterian church and was attended by the full corps of state officers, officers of the three local societies, Mr. Von Ogden Vogt, general secretary United Society Christian Endeavor, Boston, Mass., and Dr. James O. Masons to Erect Temple.

Demopolis, Ala.—The Masons of this city are making preparations to erect a handsome temple. A trade has just been consummated with Mrs. Ann G. Lyon for one of the most desirable vacant lots in the business district, on which it is proposed to erect a two-story structure. The lot is located on the southwest corner of Main and Washington streets, opposite the Demopolis Inn. The purchase price was $3,500. The building committee is engaged in securing plans. At present the plan is to have a two-story building—the first floor to be made into two stores and the second fitted up for a lodge room.

Washington, D. C.—Representative J. Thomas Heflin, of the Fifth Alabama district, received a telegram from his brother, John T. Heflin, chairman of the congressional committee, stating that the time for candidates to enter the congressional campaign had expired without a new entry. The primary for nomination of congressman will be held April 21, and Mr. Heflin will be nominated without opposition.

Bonds Sold at Premium.

Gadsden, Ala.—Mayor Charles F. Smith, who returned from Cincinnati, where he has been for some days closing with the purchasers of the city's improvement bonds, in an interview with a reporter made the following statement:

"Yes, the bonds have been sold and delivered and the money is immediately available for pushing the work of improvements. Mr. Julian Kendrick, who has been in charge of the engineering work, has been instructed to proceed with the final surveys and estimates on the extension of our sewerage system and to advertise for bids on same, to be received up to April 15. Work on the streets will begin without any unnecessary delay, and unless some unforeseen complications arise the exact program in reference to the water works will probably be decided within the next sixty days. The whole improvement proposition will be pushed, and we hope to have work under way soon after the 1st of May.

"The bonds were sold to the A. L. Rich Company, bankers, of Cincinnati, and brought a premium of $1,000."

Heavy Bridge Tolls.

Sheffield, Ala.—For the month of March the Sheffield Company paid the Southern Railway Company $1,000 for its percentage of fares for crossing the bridge, a sum almost equal to the tolls for the best two months in the history of the bridge. The Sheffield Company, besides the freight percentage, pays to the Southern 2 cents of every 5-cent fare that crosses the bridge, and the sum paid for the past month gives some idea of the business intercourse between this city and Florence, both of which are growing and flourishing.

Roads Law Declared Illegal.

Montgomery, Ala.—The local roads law of Henry county has been declared unconstitutional by Judge Thomas G. Jones, of the federal court. It is declared that the illegality of the measure was committed in failing to state definitely what the bill contained in notice of its passage. MONTGOMERY has started in a vigorous manner a movement to get the capitol city a population of 100,000 by 1910. Here's wishing them success, especially, if they accomplish their purpose, some of their reflected glory is bound to reach as far as Clanton.

A gentleman who went down to canvass Chilton county says he found less political interest felt there than anywhere in the State. The people felt absolutely no interest in the governorship or state officials.—Birmingham Ledger.

YES, the gentleman, whoever he may be, is quite correct, Chilton people are busy and not giving much time at present to politics. Also they are waiting for the Democratic Executive Committee to take some action, and many are wondering why the Committee is not called together. It is quite time for someone to make a move.

Moore's Mill.

We have been having lots of rain through the month of March. The first day of April, which is the day for April fools, was a pretty day and hope it will continue fair for a few days as the farmers of this community are so far behind with their work.

We had some fine music Saturday night by Mr. John Culp and daughter, Miss Emmie, and Mr. Henry Strickland, at Mr. J. H. Moore's. Would be glad to have them play for us again.

The Sunday school at Bethsalem is progressing nicely; may God help them to learn the little children something about the Bible and learn to serve the Lord.

The Ladies' Mutual Help Society will hold Easter services at Bethsalem church, April 15; Bro. M. L. Parrish will preach for us that day. Hope everybody around will come and hear him.

We regret very much that the school at the Indian grave school house closed last Friday; hope Prof. Pattillo will teach for us again; the children all seemed to learn fast and thought a great deal of him. B B.

A Notable Convention

Macedonia.

The wondering mind is our question this week. Some one may ask, "Why did you take that for your question, there is no meaning in that?" Why I should think there is a great deal of meaning in the wondering mind. Our minds wonders to and fro over the things of this world. We should think a great deal of the good that we should do while here in this glorious Christian land of our Lord's. I have been made to feel glad so many a time when my mind wondered of all the good and pleasant things we have to enjoy. Life is a grand and noble life to live and we should make all the good out of it we can; try to enjoy ourselves here the best we can and live as near right as we can and then there will be no wondering in that world beyond, where no sin nor sorrow comes. Oh, how sad we feel when we have wondered off after things that pretend to human notice, and we are made to feel glad when the blessed Saviour steps in and says "Blessed is he by whom holds out faithful until the end. Amen" God bless those sweet words of rememberence we have to come to our wondering minds. Day by day we are to be made to wonder over a great many things that we fear we will have trouble with, and some way or other the Lord steps in and says everything is alright, I have made peace to your soul, you have been a good fellow and I will be with you all the way. Why do our minds wonder and go to and fro over the many things of this world? If I should have to answer the question, I would simply say notions abound, is the simplest way I could answer it. Now, kind Editor, if you will be patient with me, I will close.

The health in this community is not very good at present, there is a great deal of sickness. Mr. Sam Glass has been very sick for a long time; we hope he may soon get well.

Mrs. Julia Lovelady is very sick; we hope she may soon recover.

Now a few words about the farmers. Farmers are behind with their work on account of so much rain. Brother farmer, don't plant so much cotton and plant more corn and goobers, make your living at home and board at the same place.

FIFTY CENTS

IN some conditions the gain from the use of Scott's Emulsion is very rapid. For this reason we put up a fifty-cent size, which is enough for an ordinary cough or cold or useful as a trial for babies and children. In other conditions the gain is slower—health cannot be built up in a day. In such cases Scott's Emulsion must be taken as nourishment; a food rather than a medicine. It's a food for tired and weak digestions.

We Trust Doctors

If you are suffering from impure blood, thin blood, debility, nervousness, exhaustion, you should begin at once with Ayer's Sarsaparilla, the Sarsaparilla you have known all your life. Your doctor knows it, too. Ask him about it.

You must look well after the condition of your liver and bowels. Unless there is daily action of the bowels, poisonous products are absorbed, causing headache, biliousness, nausea, dyspepsia, and thus preventing the Sarsaparilla from doing its best work. Ayer's Pills are liver pills. Act gently, all vegetable. The dose is only one pill at bedtime.

MANY THINGS.

THINGS ABOUT THE FARM.

The average farmer does too much work, I mean work that does not count. In order to make a big crop, he clears too much land and wears it out by improper cultivation Perhaps less than one half as much land, properly cared for, would be much more profitable; and his land grows better and better from year to year.

Another mistake is, many of our farmers do not diversify their crops. I know this old song has been sung so much it has become commonplace, but is as true today, and truer, than it was at first. What profit is there in our exporting cotton and importing fruit and vegetables? This is as senseless as setting a hen on door knobs. Maybe the reader will be surprised to hear that three fourths of the lowly irish potatoes, eaten in the great Birmingham District, come from Norway and Sweden; also that a large percentage of the despised onions, eaten there, are brought from Spain, Egypt and the West Indies. I want to urge that there is no profit in importing common vegetables from countries thousands of miles away. Many of the older readers will doubtless recall the timely story, read in the old school reader, of the aged father, who, dying, told his worthless sons that a fortune was hidden in the garden. In hunting for the treasure, they spaded up the garden so thoroughly that a rich harvest was reaped in the summer, thus fulfilling the old man's statement. Our farmers must soon discover that a fortune awaits them in supplying their own table and their own markets with products which are not imported from across the waters.

Again, let me say there is no profit in cutting down and burning your valuable timber, while you run off to town and buy hoe handles, ax handles, plow handles, plow stocks, etc. Neither is there profit in killing five and ten cent birds with a fifteen dollar gun; nor is there profit in catching five cent fish with five dollar tackles.

If you will carefully read the above lines, written by one who is interested in you, you will get a glimpse of an inspiring vision—a farmer and his sons, who carry bank accounts. ROBERT JONES.

Don't tie a cough or cold up in your system by taking a remedy that binds the bowels. Take Kennedy's Laxative Honey and Tar. It is different from all other cough syrups. It is better. It opens the bowels—expels all cold from the system, relieves coughs, colds, croup, whooping cough, etc. An ideal remedy for young and old. Children like it. Sold by Upchurch Drug Co.

Dear Editor—After an absence of some time, I come again to welcome the many correspondents of last issue. I love to read the letters in the Banner because they don't have so much to say about politics. The most of the writers have something of more importance to write about. We farmers and school children should study more about other things. Let us attend to our books and our farms and let the politicians attend to their affairs. Politicians like to have us to pull their wagon up the hill for them but when we need their assistance they have to have a little money or they won't pull. Do not understand me to say not vote for the man of your choice. I would say do this regardless of partyism. But don't mortify your friend's feelings by saying hard things. Always remember that when you are cursing the Republicans that you are cursing your friends and when you are cursing the Democrats you are also cursing your friends. And above all things remember the golden rule. Children, let us go to Sunday school and learn our lessons well. Ask your parents to go with you if they don't go anyway. Let us learn to sing more of those beautiful songs that sound so sweet. Spring is the season of music; nature is decking herself as a bride; the birds make melody all the day; music and gladness fill our souls and from overflowing hearts we sing praises to the Creator of such of a beautiful world. Sad indeed the heart that cannot with the Psalmist sing praise ye the Lord. A religious life is not a thing that spends itself like a bright bubble on the river's surface. It is rather like the river itself which widens continually and is never so broad or deep as where it rolls into the ocean of eternity.

James Franklin.

ROYAL TONIC

Beats Anything We Ever Sold as a Strength-Creator and Body Builder.

The Upchurch Drug co., are very enthusiastic over the delicious cod liver oil preparation, which contains no oil. In referring to the matter, said a member of the above firm. "We sell many tonics, and we handle all kinds of remedies that claim to be invigorators and strength-creators. We do this because we are druggists, and it is our business to supply the public with what they want.

When our advice is asked, however, in regard to a tonic, body-builder or strength-creator, we invariably recommend Vinol, as we know of nothing that can compare with it.

In Vinol modern science has given us all of the tonic, body-building and curative properties of that famous old remedy, cod liver oil, actually taken from fresh cods' livers, without a drop of the obnoxious and system-clogging grease which characterizes old fashioned cod liver oil and emulsions, and which has proved such a drawback.

Vinol is not a patent medicine, as the label on each bottle tells everything it contains, therefore you know exactly what you are taking.

In the most natural manner it tones up the digestive organs, creates a hearty appetite, makes rich, red blood, and strengthens every organ in the body to do its work as nature intended.

Our faith in Vinol is so strong that we gladly offer to refund the money in every case where it fails to give satisfaction. Upchurch Drug co.

BEAUTIFUL WOMEN.
The Secret of Their Increasing Charm.

It is really surprising that in such a short time there should be so marked an improvement in the appearance of so many Clanton ladies, but it is not surprising when the cause of this improvement is known. And there is no great mystery about it after all. Drop in most any day now at the Forence drug store and you are likely to see one of the clerks wrapping up a bottle of the little tablets that do so much to improve the appearance of one's complexion. Bright eyes, a rudy glow, and a complexion free from pimples, sallowness, and moth spots may be had by every woman who will take one or two Laxakola Tonic Tablets at bedtime. These tablets contain dandelion and other purely vegetable extracts that are known to have a selective action for skin affections, and being both a laxative and a tonic they quicken the circulation, open the pores, encourage the action of the bowels, stimulate the liver, enrich the blood, and at the same time cure biliousness, sick headache and chronic constipation.

Try them. They cost but 25 cents, and once used their merits cannot be concealed.

THE PULPIT.

AN ELOQUENT SUNDAY SERMON BY THE REV. HOWARD MELISH.

Subject: "Repentance."

Brooklyn, N. Y.—In Holy Trinity Church, Sunday morning, the rector, the Rev. Howard Melish, preached from the text, "From that time Jesus began to preach and to say, 'Repent.'"—St. Matthew iv:17. He said:

I heard one of the ablest men in America, a man who had studied the popular mind carefully and observed it most keenly, say not long ago, that if he were young again the one message he would endeavor to bring home to his countrymen is—spirit, soul, manhood make conditions, not conditions men.

Three forces are producing the opposite view. The first is materialism. Materialism as a philosophy is discredited. Twenty-five years ago it received tremendous importance through the formulation of a doctrine of evolution by natural selection. To-day it is not taught in a single university chair. But materialism, as a popular conception of the world, is more generally heeded than ever before. In it God is identified with His universe. His name is Force. His law is to be found not in the Bible, but in the latest text books on physics. Man is an animal which thinks. He is a creature of his environment. When he dies he is dead as every other beast of the field.

The second is the teaching of some socialists. There is socialism and there is Christian socialism. Christian socialism endeavors to make a place in socialism for Christianity's emphasis on the individual. Socialism is concerned with the economic and industrial reorganization of society. As interpreted by some of its expounders it is telling men that they can't be just or right or pure or honest or humane under the competitive system. To talk about ethical standards so long as men must compete to live is child's play. The Sermon on the Mount is impracticable; let a man obey its precepts and he is sure to be thrown by the current of life on to the bank as wreckage. What is needed to make men is a different order of society. Such teachings, such feeling, for it has become more a feeling than a clearly articulated system, has weakened the sense of individual responsibility. I can't be pure living under tenement house conditions. I can't speak the truth in a modern pulpit or a modern newspaper, therefore I am not responsible for impurity, dishonesty, lying.

The third force, laying stress on conditions instead of will, and so weakening individual conscience, is Christian Science. At first thought this may seem an utterly inconsistent statement. Does not Christian Science lay all the emphasis on the individual—his attitude of mind, his thought? Not at all. What it emphasizes is conditions of thought. By methods which rival the methods of Hypatia and the Neo-Platonists, they endeavor to work your mind into a state where nothing external to your mind has any reality. Sin does not exist. The suffering of little children in the Home of St. Giles the Cripple is a mere thought. The dishonesty of business has no reality. The tragedy of much of our tenement house life, with its starvation, unemployment, dwarfed lives, or the sinful luxuriousness of much of the "Fifth avenue" life are mere thoughts. Jesus on His cross was only acting a part. Such teaching has no social message. Christian Science has produced some beautiful characters, "Israelites in whom there is no guile," who recognize in Jesus, as did Nathaniel, "the Son of God," but it has not and cannot produce a social reformer to go into a black slum and stay there, working and dying for the kingdom of God, because it has no message to the conscience, individual or social.

Over against these three forces which weaken individual responsibility I would put the one truth of repentance.

It is an old word with a long record. The vocabulary of some nations does not know it. And those nations have died. Wealth corrupted them, power made them arrogant, and arrogancy led to national madness and ruin. They had voices which criticized and complained, which ridiculed and despaired; but no voice with thunder and lightning in its tone to cry "Repent!" But one nation developed a race of men whom we call prophets. They were men who spoke for God. The word of the Lord came to them. And they spoke that word to the conscience of their nation. They made men feel guilt, they pointed out the right way, and they inspired men to walk in it. And this is repentance. In circumstances when other nations have disappeared, as in transplantation and captivity, this nation was kept alive because of its sense of responsibility for its own deeds, past and future.

That nation in the fulness of time gave birth to Christianity. Its immediate forerunner was John the Baptist. What he taught is summed up in the one word—repent. The rich man with self-sufficiency, the powerful man with his arrogancy are to be leveled down like the mountains; the poor man with his patience is to be filled up like the valleys. Start now; for the ax is laid to the root of your tree and down you will come if you don't have fruit. Share your abundance with those who have nothing; cease to squander your money on clothes and food when men are naked and children are hungry. Stop levying unjust taxes on the poor. Abide by the law and speak the truth. Take what you earn and nothing more.

Jesus caught up that message and cried "Repent!" John had been preaching to classes as the prophets had preached to the nation. Christ brought the truth home to the conscience of the individual. Each one of you knows of his own self what is right. Then do it. Otherwise your religion is a sham. Your prayers are words. Your theology is speculation. Only he knows God who wills to do His will. You have no peace in your soul, no joy in your life, but you are weary and heavy laden under all this luxury and formalism. Your money is your undoing. Turn from it. Resolve to seek the right and do it, come what may. Your foes will be those of your own household. You will be as a sheep among wolves. But you will find peace and joy and will be really free. In this way He awoke the conscience of the Mediterranean world and quickened individual responsibility.

How are we to arouse among us responsibility and quicken our individual and social pentance. But is not that preached by every pentance. But is not that preached by every evangelist? It is, and some men are touched by it. But when they go to the evangelist as men went to John the Baptist and others went to Christ asking "What wouldst Thou have us to do?" the answer is "Stop smoking, leave off the use of alcohol, keep away from the theatre, join church, pray daily and read your Bible." This is the whole duty of man. And other men, virile men, seeing the insipid character of Christianity thus professed, don't fight it—this is the age of religious tolerance—but pass it by as good for women and children.

I appeal to the conscience of every man and woman here to-day. We are followers of Jesus Christ. Now, only His first word to the world is repent. He gave many more, but they all depend upon that for their real meaning. Until we truly repent Christianity for us is a sealed book. Have we repented? We have looked over our personal lives. Here was a fault. Here was a sin. There was a mistake. We feel ashamed of this. Henceforth in our personal lives we shall be different. God forgive! And we feel forgiven. There it ends.

Ends in an age where there is more wealth than in any age of the world before; when that wealth is attained by some men, not by hard labor of hands or brains, but overnight; in an age when because of this wealth there is more luxury in a city like New York than in all the world fifty years ago; where men and women live for money and sell their souls for money! What should repentance mean to-day?

It is a message to those who have money. Search your consciences to see how you came by your wealth. Can you say with Zaccheus, "Lord, if I have taken anything from any man by false accusation, I restore him fourfold?" You know and I know that many of our fortunes have been dishonestly, illegally and unjustly accumulated. By false returns to State officials, by false use of trust moneys, by false use of the powers of Government, by false business methods has this money been obtained. Repentance demands that restitution be made to the individuals or the community from whom this money was taken. Search your conscience to see what wealth is doing to you. Since you entered into the possession of money by work or by inheritance are you a nobler man or a truer woman? Or has money made you little-souled, mean, narrow, proud, extravagant, arrogant, supercilious? Give it away at once, every cent of it. It is better to go through life with no money than with money to go down into hell fire.

Money is sending thousands of men and women to what Jesus called hell, in this city. They got their wealth in defiance of God's and our country's law; they can only keep it by controlling legislatures and creating monopolies. And what do they say? They fall back on conditions and dodge responsibility. Repent, Fail? You probably will fail. Conditions are bad in politics and business. But God bids you fail. Go forth as sheep among wolves and fail. You will save your soul alive here and hereafter. It is a message to those who have no money. Money itself is not evil, but the love of it, the lust after it. Many a man who has not a dollar has the love of it, and is giving his soul to get it. It is his envy of the rich that is sin. If such a man had money he would become like the rich he now envies, for his soul is like his brother's soul. Circumstances may vary, one may live in Mulberry Bend and the other on Fifth avenue, but their souls are alike. The idle rich man in his club and the Bowery loafer are one and the same breed. One has allowed himself to become the victim of wealth, the other the victim of poverty. Both are victims, not free men.

Therefore, to both alike, neither as rich or poor, but as men, conquered men, comes this message: Turn ye from your poverty and your wealth and with God's help stand forth free. Strip you, make you bare of this money and know the joy of bread earned in the sweat of your brow. Find work, any honest work, and do it like a man in the strength of the Lord.

When a man stops blaming conditions and takes to himself the responsibility for what he is and what he has done he has obeyed the first word of Christ—"Repent."

God's School.

In our Father's school are many benches. This life is school time. Whatever the word God writes on the top of your page—patience, courage, forgiveness, resignation—copy it over and over until He gives you another word. Never murmur. Do your best to solve your problems. If they are hard, try hard. If you are in the dark, say: "Speak, Lord, for Thy servant heareth." When you feel like complaining, listen. Be still before God. David said: "I was dumb, I opened not my mouth, because Thou didst it." That is better than moaning and lamenting, but let us leap from David to Jesus, and say: "The cup which My Father hath given Me, shall I not drink it." "Father, glorify Thy name." So shall we be made perfect through suffering.—Maltbie D. Babcock, D. D.

We Touch the Gold.

Some time ago, in one of our magazines, there was an article entitled, "I Have Touched the Gold," the exclamation of a deep-sea diver who had just come up from exploring a wreck lying in the depths. The writer of the paragraph alluded to the circumstances that often thus in religious life persons "touch the gold" without seizing, possessing and using it. How true this is! We frequent the sanctuary, hear and handle the Word of Life, get a vision of the Cross, put the sacramental bread to our lips—we "touch the gold," and still leave it unrealized from year to year. For want of a little more resolute faith, we miss "the unsearchable riches" of personal fellowship with Christ.

Character is a Growth.

Great occasions do not make heroes or cowards; they simply unveil them to the eyes of men. Silently and imperceptibly as we wake or sleep, we grow and wax strong, we grow and wax weak, and at last some crisis shows us what we have become.—Canon Westcott.

FARM AND GARDEN

SHEEP NOTES.

Sheep require food to sustain life and make growth the same as any other animal.

Poor mothers, poor eaters and weak constitutional ewes should never be used for breeders.

If there is not a continual endeavor to at least improve the flocks, they will go backwards instead of forwards.

The price of mutton sheep is decided largely by their condition, more perhaps than by their size.

The only requisite to bring a sheep up to a desirable standard is that of the particular breed and strain.

Feeding sheep will not fatten on a rough feed alone; they must have plenty of grain and a variety of both grain and fodder.

The sheep stables should be cleaned out at least once a month. If the manure is allowed to remain too long it begins to give off ammonia and other foul gases which injure the sheep.

See that sheep, especially the breeding ewes, have plenty of exercise.

Constant culling should be the watchword of every sheep breeder.

At this time, so far as can be done, the ewes should have succulent food.

Sheep are profitable stock only when a profitable kind is kept and in a profitable manner.

The most rapid bodily development of the lamb is made during the first two minutes of its life.

Breeding ewes should have a little grain, but not enough to make them fat.

A fattening animal of any sort should never have more food placed before it than it will eat up with avidity.

Keep the wool as clean as possible in order to have it bring the best price.

It is water that aids in the digestion and assimilates all the feed, and all sheep pastures should have a good supply.

There is no farm interest that tends more surely to profit that sheep on lands suited to grazing, especially where weeds and bushes interfere with successful cultivation, and on lands too rough to till easily.

BARN FOR SHEEP AND HORSES.

The basement barn is a modification of a very satisfactory basement constructed near my home a few years ago. The wall is 8½ to 9 ft. high, laid in cement and quick lime, and faced on both sides. It is 2½ feet thick at the base and 1½ feet thick at the top tapering equally on both sides. Windows 2½ feet square are placed in the wall.

The horse stable is located farthest from the wall to avoid dampness. It is 14 feet wide and has eight stalls each five feet wide. It is lighted by three windows, and the mangers are convenient to the feed alley. Grain enters the feed alley from above, and hay from the second floor through a long chute. To water a horse, one has only to roll back the door and let the horse pass in the room where the water is, the horse taking its own time to drink. This is much better than to have a trough out doors, frozen up much of the time, in winter. I have seen farm water troughs in western New York that required a heater in them to prevent almost solid freezing in winter. The sheep also can go to this water at will.

The sheep room is of good size, and hay and grain may be taken from the alley to feed them, or hay may enter the sheep apartment direct from above. The box stalls may be used as desired, being handy to either sheep pen or horse stable. The room where the water is may be used temporarily for horses as desired. The feed alley, six feet wide, may be narrowed if additional room for the sheep is desired.

I think a barn basement built on this plan would prove very satisfactory. The siding is matched lumber and painted, and the basement, after which this is modeled is very comfortable for stock even with mercury at the zero point.—Clark M. Drake, in Indiana Farmer.

WHY SOME FARMERS FAIL.

I have just finished reading an article concerning the working and management of a 15 acre farm. It appeared from the article that a gentleman had given an estimate of the profits derived from a fifteen acre farm and the keeping of fifteen cows on this farm, and that this was doubted by a gentleman who had written him asking an explanation as to his experience and management of the business of this farm and cows, which the farmer gives in detail.

Some farm hands do a great deal more work in the same length of time than others do, just how much more, of course I cannot tell. Perhaps it would surprise us if we knew. From my experience and observation, I think it often the case one farm hand will do as much work in one day as another will in six days and this often happens on adjoining farms, if not on the same farm; and as their work is seldom, if ever, compared it is almost always overlooked. This same condition prevails in almost every shop in the country.

This is the trouble with the farmers today; the farmer who employs the hands that do the most work is the successful one, and the farmer who employs the hands who do the smallest amount of work is the one who fails. The farmer himself, often gives himself the credit for much more work than he does.

If the fifteen acre farmer referred to, had employed hands to the extent he said he did, from certain vicinities he would have been bankrupt the first year, notwithstanding his land may have been worth $125 an acre and his cows $75 per head.—Jno. Karr, in Farmer's Home Journal.

SCIENTIFIC POULTRY FEEDING.

An advance proof of Dr. Salmon's annual report to the Bureau of Animal Industry contains the following interesting information on chicken feeding, as a result of digestion experiments of the more common grain foods for chickens: (1) The crude protein and nitrogen-free extract are assimilated in much greater proportion in corn than in oats. (2) The availability of the crude fat of corn is slightly greater than that of oats. (3) The indigestibility of the crude fat of wheat is conspicuously less than that of corn and oats. (4) Chickens consume a much greater quantity of corn than oats. (5) The nutritive superiority of corn over oats is indicated by an increase in body weight when corn is fed, while there is a tendency to the opposite direction when oats is the sole article of diet. (6) The nutrients of corn are fed at a lower cost than those of oats and wheat. This conclusion is based upon the actual availability of the various nutriments of the grains. Dr. Salmon says that these experiments are being continued involving the feeding of mixed diets, and results may be expected which will be of considerable practical use to poultry raisers.

THE YOUNG PULLETS.

This season will see about every farm with its annual quota of early hatched chicks upon it. By many these chicks are not thought to be of very much importance, but at the same time they are, and a great deal of pains and trouble should be given to their management in order that they may best fulfill the purpose for which they were intended. If they are to be kept for layers feed them with that intention always in view; if they are to be put on the market, first feed them plenty of bone-forming material and when you have this large frame on them fatten as quickly as possible and then market in the same way.

DON'T ROB YOURSELF.

The dairy farmer should by all means be a liberal feeder. There is a certain amount of food required by the animal to maintain it in fair condition and the food given above this amount goes, by way of the cow, into the milk pail where the profit of the cow really is, for the larger the amount of milk is, providing it is of good quality, the larger the profits. Too many farmers are feeding merely a maintenance ration and the reason the supply of milk is not as large as it should be is because their cows receive only enough food to keep themselves in good shape. These scant rations do not rob the cow, the feeder merely robs himself.

LOCATION IS IMPORTANT.

In buying or renting a farm the one who is about to take possession of it should bear in mind the very important question of location. An extraordinary good farm that is poorly located is hardly any better than a rather poor farm that is nicely located. It is a big item to be situated near some good shipping point so that shipping may be easily accomplished, and probably no better advice could be given to one who is about to take up a new place than to locate as near a good shipping station as possible.

HOGS SHOULD BE KEPT CLEAN.

Worms are oftentimes the cause of great loss to those who raise hogs, and yet the fault lies generally with the feeder. They are usually the result of filth and dirt, and the man who keeps the hog pens clean and disinfected hardly ever knows what it is to be troubled with the hogs having worms.

FOR THE YOUNG PIGS.

When the little grunters in the hog pen are a couple of weeks old, it is a nice thing to have a shallow trough made for them. Nail it to the floor so it will not be upset, and, if possible, place it so that the old sow cannot get at it.

EX-MAYOR CRUMBO RECOMMENDS PE-RU-NA

"My Endorsement of Pe-ru-na is Based on Its Merits."
—Ed. Crumbo.

ED. CRUMBO, ex-Mayor of New Albany, Ind., writes from 511 E. Oak street:

"My endorsement of Peruna is based on its merits.

"If a man is sick he looks anxiously for something which will cure him and Peruna will do the work.

"I know that it will cure catarrh of the head or the stomach, indigestion, headache and any weary or sick feeling.

"It is bound to help anyone, if used, according to directions.

"I also know dozens of men who speak in the highest terms of Peruna and have yet to hear of any one being disappointed in it."

Mr. Crumbo, in a later letter, dated Aug. 25, 1904, says:

"My health is good, at present, but if I should have to take any more medicine I will fall back on Peruna."

Blind People as Gas Consumers.

"When it comes to consuming gas in large quantities blind people take the lead," said an inspector of the gas company. "I know two families where both husband and wife are blind. Every jet is turned on full tilt in their homes at night and is kept going at that rate clear up to 12 o'clock. And that partiality for light is not a whim peculiar to those two couples. All blind people feel that way. They demand the light, and in all private homes and institutions where the blind are cared for the gas bills vouch for their strange fancy."

Women in Our Hosp

Appalling Increases in the Number of Op Performed Each Year—How Wome Avoid Them.

Miss Ruby Mushrush
Mrs Alice Berr

Going through the hospitals in our large cities one is surprised to find such a large proportion of the patients lying on those snow-white beds women and girls, who are either awaiting or recovering from serious operations.

Why should this be the case? Simply because they have neglected themselves. Female troubles are certainly on the increase among the women of this country—they creep upon them unawares, but every one of those patients in the hospital beds had plenty of warning in that bearing-down feeling, pain at left or right of the abdomen, nervous exhaustion, pain in the small of the back, dizziness, flatulency, displacements of the organs or irregularities. All of these symptoms are indications of an unhealthy condition of the female organs, and if not heeded the penalty has to be paid by a dangerous operation. When these symptoms manifest themselves, do not drag along until you are obliged to go to the hospital and submit to an operation—but remember that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has saved thousands of women from surgical operations.

When women are troubled with irregular, suppressed or painful periods, weakness, displacement or ulceration of the organs, that bearing-down feeling, inflammation, backache, bloating (or flatulency), general debility, indigestion, and nervous prostration, or are beset with such symptoms as dizziness, lassitude, excitability, irritability, nervousness, sleeplessness, melancholy, "all-gone" and "want-to-be-left-alone" feelings, they should remember there is one tried and true remedy.

A LIVING DEATH.

Vividly Described by a Citizen of Sioux Falls, South Dakota.

Andrew Johnson, 411 West Twelfth St., Sioux Falls, S. D., says: "Doan's Kidney Pills saved my life. My doctor, from a careful analysis of the urine and a diagnosis of my case, had told me I could not live six weeks. I was struck down in the street with kidney trouble, and for a whole year could not leave the house. I lost flesh, my eyes failed me, I bloated at times, my back hurt and I suffered a living death. There seemed no hope until I began using Doan's Kidney Pills. Then I began to improve. The pain left gradually, the swellings subsided, I gained appetite and weight, and to make a long story short, I got well!"

The novel recuperative boiler lately awarded a prize by the Paris Academy of Sciences is able to supply steam for several hours after the fire has been extinguished. It is the idea of M. Maurice, engineer-in-chief of the French marine, and it depends upon the heat storage of a mixture of salts having a great specific heat, this mixture being placed around the tubular system of the boiler and having its temperature raised to about 450 degrees C. during the firing. This method of storage offers great economy in both weight and space over the old plan of using reservoirs of superheated water. After the accumulation is used a new reserve quickly follows the starting of the fire, and the advantages are believed to be specially important for the marine and for electric stations.

BOX OF WAFERS FREE—NO DRUGS—CURES BY ABSORPTION.

Cures Belching of Gas—Bad Breath and Bad Stomach—Short Breath—Bloating—Sour Eructations—Irregular Heart, Etc.

Take a Mull's Wafer any time of the day or night, and note the immediate good effect on your stomach. It absorbs the gas, disinfects the stomach, kills the poison germs and cures the disease. Catarrh of the head and throat, unwholesome food and overeating make bad stomachs. Scarcely any stomach is entirely free from taint of some kind. Mull's Anti-Belch Wafers will make your stomach healthy by absorbing foul gases which arise from the undigested food and by re-enforcing the lining of the stomach, enabling it to thoroughly mix the food with the gastric juices. This cures stomach trouble, promotes digestion, sweetens the breath, stops belching and fermentation. Heart action becomes strong and regular through this process.

Discard drugs, as you know from experience they do not cure stomach trouble. Try a common-sense (Nature's) method that does cure. A soothing, healing sensation results instantly.

We know Mull's Anti-Belch Wafers will do this, and we want you to know it. This offer may not appear again.

HANDS RAW WITH ECZEMA.

Suffered For Ten Years—Spread to Body and Limbs—Cured by the Cuticura Remedies.

"I had eczema on my hands for ten years. At first it would break out only in winter. Then it finally came to stay. I had three good doctors to do all they could, but none of them did any good. I then used one box of Cuticura Ointment and three bottles of Cuticura Resolvent, and was completely cured. My hands were raw all over, inside and out, and the eczema was spreading all over my body and limbs. Before I had used one bottle of Cuticura Resolvent, together with the Ointment, my sores were nearly healed over, and by the time I had used the third bottle I was entirely well. I had a good appetite and was fleshier than I ever was. To any one who has any skin or blood disease I would honestly advise them to get the Cuticura Remedies, and get well quicker than all the doctors in the State could cure you. Mrs. L. E. Falin, Speers Ferry, Va., May 19, 1905."

Ensley, Ala., April 16, 1906

Editor Banner: As I am a Chilton county boy will you please allow me space in the dear old Banner to say a few words. It is a source of pleasure to read the interesting letters in the Banner from my old friends and associates. Yes, it brings fresh memories to my mind and makes me have a longing to be with them again.

Ensley was visited last Friday by numerous members of the State Educational Association, which has been in session at the Birmingham High school. A great many of them were attracted to the city by account of the interesting sights to be seen in the industries. Several of the visitors who had never seen the city before were very much surprised at the many signs of activity and prosperity. The roar of massive machinery, the great banks of smoke and steam that hover over the city, and that are lit up at intervals by the lurid glare from the furnaces is one of the most impressive sights the visitor meets and which never fails to fill him with awe and wonder.

Mr. J. Y. Propst, one of Chilton's most energetic lumbermen, was in the steel city last week.

Rev. L. B. Hainnes, of St. Louis, prison evangelist, conducted services at the prison Sunday. He is doing good work among the prisoners in various parts of the country.

Mr. U. T. Kemp left Saturday morning for Chilton county where he intends to spend a few days visiting relatives.

Mr. Walter Mills and his mother of Short Creek visited Mr. R. A. Kemp last Friday.

Well, Easter has come and gone, which commerated the greatest event in history—the reserrection of Christ. Throughout the world where the glad message has been sent, the day was celebrated and with it came joy and peace. It was a beautiful day and the writer attended services at the Catholic church, and all the people seemed to look heavenward and lifted up their voices in praise to Him from whom all blessings flow.

Well, my letter is getting lengthy and I imagine I hear the Editor sigh. Success to the dear old Banner and may it unfurl its interesting pages in every home in old Chilton; may God bless you dear reader.

Macedonia.

Editor Banner: Please allow me space in the dear old Banner for a few words in regard to an article from this place in last issue, entitled "Uncle." I have been accused of writing this article, but I most emphatically deny the charge, and do not know who did write it. I do not feel worthy to censure any one, as I am fallible myself.

Poor, weak, insignificant creatures. We are always ready to pull the mote out of our brother's eye, but fail to see the beam, or I will say "cross tie," in our own eyes. Oh! if we could look at ourselves like God looks into our hearts we would be a very, very different people. We would not be so quick to judge our fellow man. Life is too short for us to spend in this way. We should try to build up our lives with the nobler things, and get upon a higher plane. Life is but a span, and if we allow strife and envy to fill it up what will be our reward, either here or in the world to come. When we make the best of life we can, then it is far short of what it should be; many times we fail to remember the old maxim "Think three times before you speak once." Two ears to hear and one mouth to speak. God did not intend for us to speak everything we hear.

The world seems to be growing selfish. We think too much of our own selves in a literal sense and too little in a spiritual sense.

Dear readers, let's make up and lay aside so many things that are detrimental to the cause of Christ and try to get right ourselves and then everything will be right.

Where there is unity there is strength, and if we will all pull together we will accomplish great good in this life, if our motives are for good God is our leader and if we will follow Him we will succeed in almost anything we undertake. He says "I am with you always even unto the end of the world."

Very respectfully,
M. C. CRUMPTON.

Chancellor Has Strenuous Time.

Anniston, Ala.—Chancellor W. W. Whiteside is confined to his home on Snow street with sundry and divers bruises and scratches resulting from an exciting and dangerous runaway scrape in which he figured. He was returning to Oxford from Cleburne county, and while descending Horse Block mountain, on this side, the horse he was driving became frightened for some unknown reason and dashed down the steep thoroughfare at a breakneck rate. The chancellor managed to keep the animal in the road until a sharp turn was reached. The horse ran into a bank, turned the buggy over, spilled the chancellor out in the road, and, continuing its mad career, finally tore loose from the buggy and dashed down through the woods like a deer.

Oakley Sheriff in Bibb County.

Centreville, Ala.—The primary election of the democratic party in Bibb county for the selection of a sheriff was held Saturday. Everything passed off very quietly. About 1,000 votes were cast. There were nine candidates for the office. Practically all the beats have been heard from, and indications now are that James G. Oakley has received as many votes as the other eight candidates combined. He is nominated by an overwhelming majority. At this box Oakley received more votes than all the other candidates combined, although there were two candidates from this beat in the race. The nomination is equivalent to an election. There was not a drunken man in town election day.

Primary Plan Adopted.

Birmingham, Ala.—The democratic county executive committee met in the county court house and formally adopted the plan for the county primary to be held August 27, as outlined by the special committee named for that purpose. There was a good attendance of members of the committee. The only other matter of importance taken up was a resolution, which was passed, asking the captains of all military commands in the county to report to the committee the names of the members of their commands who were entitled to exemption from poll tax. Copies of these will be furnished to the election officers in the various precincts. There was no vote against the adoption of the primary plan.

New Banking House.

Springville, Ala.—At a meeting of a number of prominent citizens $15,000 was subscribed to the capital stock of the now bank, which will soon be organized here. A board of directors was elected and the proper steps taken to begin the work of organization at once. It is expected by those interested that the bank will be ready to open its doors for business by August. The board of directors consits of the following: J. L. Forman, T. B. Moody, W. S. Forman, A. W. Woodall, C. W. Allison, B. Ewing, B. M. Hill, W. C. Smith and G. L. Byers.

Dissatisfied With the Date.

Athens, Ala.—There is a great deal of dissatisfaction in this county among the candidates and people over the action of the democratic executive committee in calling a primary for the selection of county officers in many. Many of the announced candidates are farmers and had expected to make their canvass during odd times and then after they had finished their crop to have six or eight weeks to campaign in, but the committee in calling a May primary has nipped all this in the bud. There is talk of petitioning the committee to rescind their action and allow the county and state primary to be held in August. If the county has two primaries, the state primary will be a mere farce, as it will be impossible to get men out to vote for men whom they do not know and care little about.

SEVEN KILLED

By Explosion on Battleship Kearsarge. Attributed to Friday, 13th.

POWDER WAS IGNITED.

Cause of Trouble Is Obscure, but Is Attributed to Spark From Smouldering Canvas Bag.

Guantanamo.—The United States battleship Kearsarge has arrived here. The casualities resulting from the explosion are reported as follows:

Two officers and five men killed, and fourteen men injured, eight of them seriously. The bodies of the men killed will be buried in the naval cemetery here.

Washington, D. C.—Two years to a day later than the disaster on the Missouri, and as every sailor immediately recalled, on a Friday, and the 13th of the month, six men met death in the forward turret of the battleship Kearsarge by one of those accidents which acquire additional terror for sailors because of their obscure origin, and almost impossibility of prevention.

The Atlantic fleet, the strongest squadron America has ever owned, had been for weeks engaged in drill in the Caribbean sea, culminating in the quarterly target practice. This practice was just about concluding with most satisfactory results up to Friday, and it was confidently expected at the department that all records would be broken in the matter of rapidity of fire and efficiency of the gunners.

But Saturday a cablegram came from Rear Admiral Evans telling of a dreadful accident on the Kearsarge. The news came from Calmanera, a little cable station at the mouth of the Guantanamo bay, indicating that the Kearsarge had arrived there. A slight telegraphic error, requiring the consummation of extra time to decipher the message added to the anxiety of the officials. When the message was finally reduced to form it read as follows:

"Calmanera.—Secretary Navy, Washington: On April 13 about 3:15 p. m. shortly after completion target practice of Kearsarge, forward turret while the powder was going below, three sections of a 13-inch charge of powder were ignited. Charge of powder in other lift just below and one section inside 13-inch remained intact. Cause not yet determined, nor accountability. Lieut. Joseph W. Graem, gun umpire, has been sent to the Maryland in a critical state about 9 p. m.

"The following since have died: Lieutenant Hugins, turret offiflcer; Peter Norsberg, gunner's mate; Theodore Naogely, seaman; Anton O. Thorson, ordinary seaman; Julius A. Koester turret captain, first class; Ellis Athey, seaman.

The following were dangerously injured by the accident, recovery doubtful: W. King, ordinary seaman. Will bury dead at Guantanamo. Vessel uninjured."

Inventor Fell 200 Feet.

Atlantic Beach, Fla.—Israel Ludlow, of New York, inventor of the aeroplane, was so badly injured by a fall here that he will probably die. Mr. Ludlow has been making ascensions in his aeroplane here, which is one of the features of the automobile races. In tow of two automobiles he ascended to a height of 150 to 200 feet, when his aeroplane encountered a strong south wind, which was blowing with such a force that it broke the bamboo supports and the wings of the aeroplane shut in, pinning him to his seat. With its occupant pinned in it, the aeroplane fell to the beach. Two of Mr. Ludlow's vertebrae were knocked out of line, paralyzing his lower limbs. He was taken to New York to secure the attention of a specialist.

VIOLENT EARTHQUAKE

Again Visits the Suffering Island of Formosa.

Tokio.—A violent earthquake occurred in the southern part of the Island of Formosa. The casualties and damage done are reported to have been heavier than those of the last earthquake.

As a result of the earthquake in Formosa last month 1,014 persons were killed, 695 injured and 1,200 houses were demolished. The prosperous towns of Datiyo Raishiko and Shinko were completely destroyed. The damage done was roughly estimated at $45,000,000.

Nominations Sent to the Senate.

Washington, D. C.—The senate in executive session Friday confirmed the following nominations: Col. Charles R. Suter, to be brigadier-general, retired; L. H. Allen, brigadier-general. Postmasters: Alabama—D. V. Sayler, Jr., Russellville; J. A. Bingham, Talladega. Texas—H. L. Somerville, Richmond; W. Pilley, Willis Point; D. C. Bellows, Seymour; G. C. Ross, Wortham.

New Russian Loan.

Paris.—The official confirmation of the report that the Russian financiers and French bankers have settled on the terms for the new Russian loan was received almost too late Saturday to affect the Bourse. The terms agreed upon are as already cabled, namely, $400,000,000 in 5 per cent bonds at about 88, the issue to be April 26. France will subscribe for $200,000,000. In official and financial circles the terms are considered sufficiently attractive to insure oversubscription. Austria's participation in the loan is regarded as remarkable, this being the first occasion she had to subscribe to a Russian loan. The French government has given strong support to the efforts of the Russian financiers, thus assuring the success of the loan.

Big Cotton Fire Narrowly Averted.

Gadsden, Ala.—A serious conflagration was narrowly averted by the prompt and diligent work of the fire department. Twenty bales of cotton belonging to J. H. Arnold & Co., which were placed on Third street, near the Nashville, Chattanooga and St. Louis railroad tracks, and adjoining the big building of the Etowah Cotton Warehouse Company, to await shipment, were ignited, it is supposed, by boys with matches. In a few minutes the entire lot of cotton was a blazing mass. The department quickly responded to the alarm and soon had fire under control after a hard, but, short, fight. The loss to Arnold & Co. is estimated at about $500, fully covered by insurance. The cotton warehouse of the Etowah company has fully 1,000 bales of cotton stored therein, and should the fire by any means have gotten inside the building the loss would have been exceedingly heavy.

Italy Rejoices as Sun Reappears.

Naples.—Vesuvius continues to grow quieter, and the activity of the volcano is greatly reduced. The discharge from the crater is light. Search of the devastated region is now general. The reappearance of the sun has filled the people with new hope, and many of the refugees are returning to their former homes to take part in the work of clearing the country, as they are anxious to save the remnants of their property. While the sunlight has proved a great blessing, it has had one bad effect, as it has quickened the decomposition of the bodies of the victims of the eruption.

Limestone Court About to Adjourn.

Athens, Ala.—Circuit court is about winding up its duties for the spring term, with but little done. The grand jury returned twenty-five true bills. A few old cases were gotten off the docket. Judge Speake says he will hold a non-jury term of the court here in September to get rid of the pleadings and get cases ready for trial at the October term, and that he intends to put things through at that term. There is a great deal of kicking among the taxpayers at the costs of the courts and the little busines that is transcated.

Kentucky Killing.

Cloyd's Landing, Ky.—News has reached here of the killing of Campbell Hansford by L. B. Goffer, his brother-in-law, at Avis, in the southern part of Russell county. The tragedy occurred at the home of Goffer, where, it is said, the two men, having first filled up on "white lightning," became engaged in a fight over some trivial matter. While the fight was in progress Goffer pulled a pistol and shot Hansford twice in the breast, causing almost instant death. Goffer has been arrested, and is now in the county jail at Jamestown. He claims to have killed Hansford in self-defense.

To Kill Roosevelt.

Zurich, Switzerland.—The police have arrested an Italian anarchist named Cuettra, who during a drinking bout boasted that he was on his way to America to kill President Roosevelt. Physicians who examined the man declared him insane and he has been incarcerated in an asylum.

Pittsburg, Pa.—Pittsuburg's epidemic of typhoid, while apparently decreasing in the daily number of cases reported, appears to be spreading to the surrounding municipalities.

Peasants Will Block Legislation.

Moscow.—Dmitri Shipoff, the well known zemstovist, in a pessimistic interview attributes the victory of the constitutional democrats at the polls to resentment caused by the government repressions and by the failure of the people to obtain promised liberties. He predicts that parliament will not be capable of doing constructive work owing to predominance of the peasants, who will bring forward ultra radical agrarian questions, and that at the same time the ultra conservatives will oppose everything touching the prerogatives of the emperor.

Camden, N. J.—The armored cruiser Washington returned to the yards of the New York Shipbuilding Company after a successful trial trip off the Maine coast. The cruiser attained a speed of 22.27 knots an hour, a little more than a quarter of a knot in excess of the government requirement. The Washington, when accepted by the government, will be one of the fastest armored cruisers in the American navy.

Is the Fine and Imprisonment Imposed on Greene and Gaynor.

JUDGE SPEER DOES HIS DUTY.

In Sentencing the Men Convicted of Embezzlement and Conspiracy to Defraud.

Savannah, Ga.—Benjamin D. Greene and John F. Gaynor were sentenced by Judge Emory Speer in the federal court to serve four years in the federal prison at Atlanta and to pay each a fine of $575,794.90, the amount they are charged with having embezzled.

Upon one indictment the sentence was two years and on each of the other indictments four years but the court directed that the sentence might all be served concurrently, which reduced the term to four years. Thus, with the allowance of three months off of each year during which the behavior of the prisoners may be granted, the sentence reduced to three years.

The fine need not be paid if on completing the sentence the prisoners make affidatvit that they are not possessed of more than $20. In lieu of paying the fine they then may serve thirty days longer.

Counsel for the prisoners announce that an appeal will be taken. An order of court grants ten days for the filing of a bill of exceptions, upon which a motion for a new trial will be predicated.

Jurge Speer in sentencing the prisoners said in part:

"The most painful judicial duty is the imposition of a sentence to penal servitude. This is peculiarly true when those convicted are men of fine intelligence, men of affairs, men who have had the opportunities of education, or who have been trained by the teachings of experience. Peculiarly painful is that duty when the convicted have filled positions of responsibility, of honor and of trust. All of these conditions are present in the duty before me. One of the prisoners has been distinguished by his state, has been an important official of one of the great political parties, a man of large acquaintance, perhaps with multitudes of earnest friends. The other is a graduate of distinction of our great military academy at West Point, and he at one time was a captain in that famous corps of engineers whose roster bears such names as Robert E. Lee and George Gordon Meade, a corps whose record was stainless before the occurrences which have been developed in evidence here.

"I am told that it has been cynically said by a famous New Yorker that no man who has a million dollars can be convicted of crime in America. The verdict of this jury of plain, clear-sighted, honest Americans, has fasified such pessimism. Of that jury it may be said that there is perhaps not a man who cannot trace his ancestry to a patriot of the revolution which established American independence. It is true, as I have often declared, that to the homogenous Americanism of these southern states, when they are plainly shown their duty, our country may ever look with confidence for the enforcement of its laws and for the maintenance of its institutions. Nor can it be questioned that these institutions are in jeopardy that these institutions are in jeodardy as proven in this case, could go unwhipped of justice."

Anarchists to Meet in America.

Geneva, Switzerland.—There is good authority for the statement that a secret international congress of anarchists will be held in America in the early part of June. Seven well-known anarchists have left Switzerland separately and by different routes for America.

Gigantic Swindles.

London.—Jabez Spencer Balfour, formerly a financial magnate and a member of parliament, who was sentenced to fourteen years' imprisonment in 1895 for extensive frauds in connection with the Lands Allotment Company, has been released from the Parkhurst prison, on the Ise of Wight. For the past two years Balfour has acted as librarian of the prison. It is said that he probably will return to the Argentine Republic, from where he was extradited before his trial, and where it is said he holds considerable interests in different trade concerns It is estimated that the poor middle class of England lost about $30,000,000 by Balfour's swindling operations.

Hamilton Boy Won the Medal.

Bremen, Ga.—In the oratorical contest of the Northwest Georgia Oratorical Association, held at Buchanan, Joe Williamson, of Hamilton College, of this place, carried off the handsome gold medal over the contestants of Cedartown, Buchanan, Dallas, Douglasville, Tallapoosa, Bremen and Williams MDodel School at Villa Rica. His subject was "The Righting of a Wrong."

Boy's Prank Causes Fatal Stampede in Chicago.

Chicago, Ill.—During a panic which followed a false cry of fire while 400 persons were participating in the Easter eve services in St. Ludmila's roman Catholic church three children and one woman were killed and a score of others injured, several seriously.

The majority of the worshippers were women and children, and in a few minutes all were in a tangled mass, fighting to escape from the supposed danger. Many jumped through the windows, but the greater portion crowded to the central aisle. The extra weight proved too much for the floor, and some of the beams supporting it broke.

The cracking of the timbers increased the fright, and every one became panic-stricken, men, women and children fighting desperately to reach the outside. When the church was cleared three children were lying dead in the aisles, and one woman was so badly hurt that she died while being removed to the hospital.

GREAT SATISFACTION

Over Russia's Attitutde on the Peace Conference.

Washington, D. C.—An important step toward agreement upon the date for the reassembling of the second conference at The Hague was made when Secretary Root informed the Russian government that the convenience of the United States would be served by the selection of any date after September 20 next. This date was mentioned because it was calculated it would mark the conclusion of the Pan-American conference at Rio and would give the delegates there opportunity to attend at The Hague in cases where they were engaged to represent their governments in both conferences.

The greatest satisfaction is expressed at the readiness with which the Russian government accepted the suggestion from the state department for the designation of a later date than July for the conference. An important objection to an immediate convention was connected with the proposed representation of the South and Central American states in the conference. These states found upon an inspection of the invitation to the conference that they would not enter at once upon an equality with those that had signed the original Hague treaty, no steps having been taken to give flect to article 60 of The Hague convention, which says:

"The conditions upon which the powers who were not represented at the first international peace conference can adhere to the present convention shall form the subject of a subsequent agreement among the contracting powers."

The South and Central American states invited to the second conference make it condition of attendance that the signatory powers of the first convention shall give effect to the article quoted and provide means for their adherence to the first convention before the second meeting, all of which will consume some time and probably the coming summer will be consumed before this can be completed.

Not This Summer.

The Hague.—It is stated here on good authority that it is now certain that the peace conference will not meet here this summer.

Washington, D. C.—The promised detailed copy of the program of the subjects proposed by the Russian government for discussion at the second Hague conference has been received at the state department. It has been carefully studied by Secretary Root, and he will then turn it over to the American delegates to the conference for their consideration with a view to the suggestion of additions or modifications to meet the ideas of this country.

Mutinous Portuguese.

Lisbon.—The mutinous spirit has spread to the crew of the Portuguese ironclad Vasco De Gama. The authorities have taken precautions to prevent a further outbreak. A number of the crew of the cruiser Don Carlos, who mutinied April 11, have been imprisoned.

Almost Civil War.

Warsaw.—The religious troubles between the Catholics and Mariavits, the new Catholic sect, in many places in Poland are assuming a very serious phase. Indeed the situation has almost reached the dignity of civil war. At Luptsi 3,000 Mariavits attacked 2,000 Catholics, and a regular pitched battle followed, during which three men were killed and forty wounded. At Lehno constant skirmishes are in progress, and several persons have been killed or wounded. Last week at Chwartek the Mariavits, who are in the majority there, took possession of a church and insisted on the reappointment of a priest who was dismissed by the Catholics.

Brunswick, Ga.—The Brunswick Development Company has been organized in this city, the purpose being to build homes in the city on the installment plan. A large number of well-known business men are interested in the new enterprise, and its success is already assured. Judge Max Isaac was named at the meeting to prepare the petition for a charter, which will be filed next week.

THE TWO BIDDERS.

Mr. and Mrs. Laurence Franklyn had got tired of life in the country. The gothic roof leaked under its braided greenery of wistaria vines and honeysuckle; the kitchen stood an inch in water whenever there was a trifle heavier rain than usual, and the half mile walk from the depot, however enchanting in flowery time, gave Mr. Franklyn a jumping neuralgia when traversed in a drizzly equinoctial. The butcher forgot to call just when his wares were needed most, the next-door-neighbor charged a little more than city prices for his milk, eggs and butter, and the cook and chambermaid left at the end of the first month.

So that life in the rural districts was not altogether without trials to Mrs. Laurence Franklyn, and about the time that New York houses break out into harmless erysipelas of bills, having the legends, "To let" and "For sale," she said to her husband:

"Don't you think, dear, it would be well enough for us to return to the city?"

"Yes, I do," said Mr. Franklyn.

Miss Julia Lesiadi, Mrs. Franklyn's pretty 18 year old sister, clapped her hands.

"Good! good!" craid she. "Now I shall have some sort of chance at morning concerts and the opera again.

And the house hunting commenced in good earnest.

But it flagged after the first edge of enthusiastic enterprise was worn off. None of the houses suited exactly.

Mrs. Franklyn said that, so far as she was concerned, she would just as soon stay where they were. Mr. Franklyn retorted that anything was better than an indolent woman. Mrs Franklyn burst into tears. Mr. Franklyn went out of the room banging the door behind him. Miss Lesiardi declared that all men were brutes, and that she for one never intended to be married.

"I don't care," sobbed Mrs. Franklyn. "It was all Laurence's fault, taking this horrid, damp hole."

"Oh, Bee, how could you say so?" said Miss Lesiardi; "you were as wild after it as he was."

"And," added Bee, ignoring this interruption, "if we have to live on the grass under an umbrella I shall make no further efforts."

Mr. Franklyn said the same thing, and Miss Lesiardi was just making up her mind to another season of fogs, damp kitchen and fresh eggs at eight cents apiece, when Bee came exultingly back from the city one evening.

"Oh, Julia," cried she, "I've seen the sweetest little gem of a house!"

"Been house hunting, eh?" said Miss Lesiardi, who had got tea ready—(the 13th "help" had gone off in a huff that morning).

"Well—no, not exactly house-hunting, you know. I wouldn't do that after Laurence's shameful behavior! But I saw the bill and went in. The neighbors are delightful, the park handy—"

"And the rent?" eagerly demanded Miss Lesiardi, with eyes like blue moons.

"Only eighteen hundred a year."

"O!" said Julia. "But isn't that a great deal?"

"Not when you consider the price of houses in general. I'll go back tomorrow and secure it; but mind it's a secret. I don't want Laurence to know that I have taken any trouble after his hateful words!"

Mrs. Franklyn had retired to bed when her husband came home. Miss Lesiardi, however, was up to pour his tea.

Julia looked up with almost scared expression in her face.

Mrs. Franklyn returned rather earlier than her sister had expected her, with a bright flushed face.

"Well!" said Julia breathlessly.

"I've agreed to pay two thousand a year for it," said Mrs. Franklyn.

"Two thousand!" echoed Miss Lesiardi. "I thought it was only eighteen hundred!"

"Well, so it was, but there's another party it seems, very anxious to secure the house, and—"

"O, nonsense!" exclaimed Julia, "that's only the professional landlady's ruse."

"O, but it's true," persisted Bee, "for I saw his hat on the sideboard, and I caught a glimpse of his legs walking about in the upper story to see if the paint was in good order on the second floor. So I said I'd give her two thousand."

"And suppose the other party—who, I dare say, was the plumber or gas-fitter, or perhaps the carpenter, come to see about repairs—should offer twenty-five hundred?"

"He won't," said Bee, confidently. "The house isn't worth that."

"But I really think, Bee, darling, you'd better speak to Laurence."

"So I will," said Bee, "this evening. He will see that his wife is something more than a dead letter in the family. But I want you to go and see the house this afternoon, Julia."

The level rays of the soft April sunset were shining into the pretty little double drawing room of the house on Millard square as Bee led her sister exultantly into it.

"Just look at those marble mantels," she said, "and pattern of the cornices. And the pier glasses and the gas fixtures go with the house, and—"

"O, I beg your pardon, ma'am, I'm sure," said a falcon-nosed, elderly lady, who advanced, bearing with her a smell of dyed bombazine. "I'm sorry to disappoint you, but—"

"You have not let the house?"

"Yes, ma'am, I have. A poor lone widow like me has her own interests to look to, and the gentleman offered $2,500 a year, if I'd sign the papers at once, which," with a reflective look at her pocket handkerchief, "I did."

Mrs. Franklyn rose in great indignation, her voice rising accordingly.

"I really think," said she, "I should be justified in placing this matter in the hands of the lawyers, and—"

"Why, Bee, my darling!"

"Laurence!"

The folding doors slid back, and Mrs. Franklyn found herself vis-a-vis with her husband.

"Here's the gent himself," said the ancient female. "Which he can explain!"

"You never have taken this house, Laurence!" almost shrieked Mrs. Franklyn.

"Yes, I have, my dear."

"But I offered two thousand for it!"

"And I have signed a three years' lease at twenty-five hundred," said the husband, somewhat sheepishly.

Miss Lesiardi burst out laughing.

"So," said she, "your profound secrecy has cost you just $500 per annum."

"Never mind, Bee," said Mr. Franklyn, soothingly. "It's a gem of a house, anyway, and we'll be as happy as the day is long in it. I only wish I had confided in you about it."

"And I wi—wi—wish I hadn't been so obstinate and hateful," whimpered Bee.

The Signature Was Good.

A story is told of how the late ex-Gov. Joseph A. Gilmore, of New Hampshire, when he was superintendent of the Concord & Claremont Railroad, once wrote a letter to one of his section bosses who had done something to displease him. All the man could make out was the date and Superintendent Gilmore's signature.

Some time afterward, being in Concord, the man went to call on the superintendent at his office.

"Hello, John, how do you do?" said Mr. Gilmore. "Well, what are you doing now?"

"Why, I'm up here at the same place on the section, Mr. Gilmore," replied John.

"What!" said Mr. Gilmore, "didn't you get a letter from me?" naming the date.

"Why, yes, certainly," answered John.

"Well, didn't you know that that was a letter of dismissal?"

"Letter of dismissal!" cried the astonished John. "No! I couldn't make it out, except that it was from headquarters and signed by you, sir. But after some study I concluded it was a pass. As none of the conductors on the road could read it, they all accepted my statement that it was a pass from Mr. Gilmore, and I have been riding on it ever since."

John kept his place on the section.—Boston Herald.

THE PULPIT.

AN ELOQUENT SUNDAY SERMON BY REV. DR. A. H. GOODENOUGH.

Subject: Material Prosperity.

Bristol, Conn.—The Rev. Dr. Arthur H. Goodenough, long a Brooklyn pastor, now of the Prospect M. E. Church here, preached Sunday a strong sermon on "Is Our Nation Drunk With National Prosperity?" The text was from Exodus xx, 2 and 3: "I am the Lord thy God, which have brought thee out of the land of Egypt, out of the house of bondage. Thou shalt have no other gods before Me." Dr. Goodenough said:

The text is taken from the Decalogue. The Ten Commandments were Israel's national constitution. The Decalogue was given as the rule of conduct of the people of Israel. The story of Israel's deliverance and salvation and the birth of the nation as recorded in the Pentateuch reads like fiction. It is a wonderful story. It is not fiction, however—it is history. God is always and forever against human slavery. God is a just God; God loved the poor and suffering and hopeless people down in Egypt. It was His purpose to deliver them. He did deliver them. And as many of them as infinite mercy could save finally reached the promised land. I suppose God has a right to have favorites, as well as anybody else. To make a law that nobody should have favorites would be the legislation of lunatics. That would be contrary to the law of life. The law of life is the law of God, and you cannot go back of that. God had a special regard for Israel. Why not? He certainly had a right to, because He was kind and merciful and good to everybody else. But the favored people frequently forgot God. They turned away from following after Him and sought out ways of their own. And sometimes they preferred garlic and onions in Egypt rather than the discipline of the journey, which would ultimately bring them to the land of milk and honey. Very often God had to say to them the words which we have read as our text: "I am the Lord thy God, which have brought thee out of the land of Egypt. Thou shalt have no other gods before Me."

It has often been said that America is God's second Israel. God has surely been good to this nation. He has shown us many mercies. He has abundantly poured into our laps the wealth of the prairie and mine. And the most valuable crop of all with which God has enriched us is in the galaxy of great and good men, by whose life and labor we are all blessed. Our republic, in a little over a hundred years, has worked its way to the fore. And now, by sheer skill and industry, by mental power and the kindly heart, she has made herself the foremost nation in the family of nations. Other nations tell us that we are a great people, and we are inclined to believe them. The late Archdeacon Farrar, that much beloved and widely known Englishman, has said, "America was God's destined heritage; not for tyranny, not for aristocracy, not for privilege—but for progress, and for liberty, and for the development of a great and noble type of righteous, fearless and independent manhood."

That is the world's estimate of us. God forbid that we should ever fall in one jot or tittle of what is expected of us! Our mission is to make the world better. The ways and means are here; the ability to use them is also here. God grant that what is in our heads and in our hands and in our banks and in our barns, may all be laid upon the altar—consecrated to the advance and uplift of all the people who look to us for guidance and blessing. In order to accomplish that we must, ourselves, keep right in thought and pure in heart, and walk in the upward path that leads to more light and to the summit of human perfection.

For some years past there has come to us an unbroken stream of prosperity. This is due to two things: First—the blessings of heaven, in rain and dew and sunshine upon a rich and fertile soil. Second—the industry and skill of man in making the best and most of what is within reach.

Our Secretary of Agriculture has given to the world a report that makes the heart of every American dance for joy. The whole world has stood before it in surprise and delight. Not only has it beaten all previous reports in our own land, but it has surpassed anything that any nation has ever been able to render. The value of the year's farm products, that actually came into the pockets of the farmers, was $6,415,000,000. That sum would more than pay the national debt of France or Russia. According to the editor of Current Literature, it would purchase all the gold produced in the world in the last twenty years. Three farm products have yielded enormous sums. Corn, $1,216,000,000; milk and butter, $665,000,000, and hay, $605,000,000. Secretary Wilson tells us that the aggregate value of all our farms has increased in five years $6,133,000,000.

What does this mean? It means many things. It means, first of all, that there is plenty of money. When the farmer does well, everybody else does well. All our wealth comes out of the soil. And in the rich harvest there is more of God than of man. When the harvests are plentiful, the mills, the shops, the factories, are all busy. There is work for everybody. And when this is the case, the poor man grows rich and the rich man grows richer. To all of which we have no objections.

Lots of money, however, is not an unmixed good. Most men love money. It is a noble ambition to desire money, to work for a competency, and for a surplus, to fall back on, in the rainy day, or when old age comes on, as surely it will, if death do not overtake us sooner. But some men have an insatiable thirst for gold. Get money is their shibboleth. It seems easy for some folk to persuade themselves that any method is justified if you only get what you want. Many people, therefore, in our time, have become enormously rich. Some of them have gotten suddenly rich. Be sure and tag the man who becomes suddenly rich. There hangs a story. We are not saying that getting rich is a sin. We would all get rich if we could. That is, if wealth legitimately came our way, we should not object.

We have been hearing, and reading, much of late about graft, and crooked methods of conducting business. Dr. Lyman Abbott has been addressing some college students. He has told the young men in college to avoid the prevailing methods of doing business. He assures them that honesty is the only safe way to permanent success. Here is a symptom, a diagnosis, and a remedy—the remedy will work a perfect cure if vigorously applied.

There have been some recent exposures of business methods, which have brought the blush to the cheek of every honest American. These exposures have also astounded and staggered the whole business world. United States Senators have been convicted of crime, and others are blistering under grave and general suspicion. This is a dark picture. We cannot forget it. But we must linger on it. A few of our own people have said: "We are a nation of grafters." It has been said "That we are drunk with prosperity. We have become intoxicated of money. Money is our god. We have forgotten the ways of the fathers. We have gone astray. It was never so before." And so on, all of which is only one side of the story.

What are the facts? These: The love of money is no stronger now than it has been in the centuries past. Gold has always had a fascination for some folk. Wasn't it so in Washington's day? Oh, those were good old days! Were they? Oh, yes! Do you forget the bold land speculators at the national capital? Money came in abundance into the treasury of the young nation. And there the grafters gathered for their prey. People were no better in the young days of the republic than they are now.

Again we ask, What are the facts? These: Let me here repeat the text, "I am the Lord thy God. Thou shalt have no other gods before Me." The God of Israel, the God of our fathers, is the God of the vast majority of the people of this continent. The people of the United States are not crazy for wealth, they are not drunk with prosperity. Honest men abound. Rogues are rare. Sooner or later they are found out. Then they reap the reward of their doings. Our people are slow to wake up. It takes them a long time to see villainy in their neighbors. But when they do wake up, and when they are sure that there is sin and fraud and theft, they go for the wrong doers and mete out to them the punishment due to their crime.

In proof of this, I wish to remind you of certain tendencies of our time. We can also point to some things which are happening and which have really happened. In the realm of politics, or in the sphere of government, the trickster, the deceiver of the people, the low politician, the traitor have had their day. They are relegated to the rear. They are out of the race. Health is catching as well as disease. A healthy moral contagion is sweeping over the land. The cry of the people is for honest men in the legislative halls of the country. And the people in the long run will get what they want. They are getting it now. They will not stop to-morrow, nor the next day. The new era in American politics has come. The boss is retired and machines are going out of date. The people are choosing their own leaders. Our prosperity is God's gift to the nation. It was not given for the enrichment of the greedy and grasping few. The nation's wealth belongs to the people. They have made up their minds that they will claim their share of it. They are right. And they will win.

Reform has set in. The people are in it. Next must follow regeneration. Whether the church may go into politics or not, her influence is strongly there. And the tendency is to select the legislators from the ranks of her membership. The most remarkable election ever held in England has just been held. A large number of the successful candidates are earnest workers in the Protestant churches. The revolution has been wrought mainly by the clergy of the free churches. The desire over there is that the people shall be considered. They have rights, and their rights are to be respected. The day of the select few in good old England is past. And shall we, in this splendid republic, fall back to second place? I trow not. Let political leaders take notice. The old regime is over. The kingdom of God includes the halls of legislation. The Christ demands fair play. The spirit of Jesus is taking hold of the people, and they are no longer to be fooled. No, no. The nation is not drunk with money. The nation is, and is becoming more and more serious, sane, sober. The people are growing intelligent, thoughtful, reverent. The kingdom of God is winning glorious victories. The golden day is coming.

Last of all I point you to what the church has done and is doing in proof that our nation is not drunk with prosperity. The church, like science, the handmaid of religion, is adapting herself to the needs and work of the hour. The church is more than an evangelical force. She is a mental stimulant and a moral regenerator. To preach Christ crucified is but a part of her great mission. She must stand squarely and firmly in the pathway of evil doers. She must permeate by her influence all phases and conditions of life. She must make it hard to do wrong, and easy to do right. And she is doing it.

Jesus Christ died on the cross for human sin. Thank God for that. The cross is our hope. But He did more than that. He preached to the poor. He healed the sick. He showed men and women the way of love, of honesty, of kindness, of brotherliness. The social, the political, the moral, the religious life of the people. He touched and quickened and saved. My friends, take heart. The country is not going to limbo. The devil hasn't all of the American people in his grasp. Great things are taking place in the name of our Lord and Saviour. Let us look to Him, follow Him and victory is sure.

What Shall We Do?

Gehazi and Elijah looked on the selfsame scene. The one thought he was surrounded by adversaries, and cried, "What shall we do?" The other saw the mountains filled with the chariots and horsemen of the Lord of Hosts. The panic of Gehazi! The peace of Elijah! Depend upon it, our days will be full of panics if we have not that clearer vision of faith, the eyesight of the soul.—Dr. [illegible].

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

INTERNATIONAL LESSON COMMENTS FOR APRIL 22.

Subject: Jesus the Sinner's Friend, Luke vii., 36-50—Golden Text, Luke vii., 50—Memory Verse, 47—Commentary on the Day's Lesson.

I. Jesus anointed in Simon's house (vs. 36-39). 36. "One of the Pharisees." Simon, by name. This was a common Jewish name. There were two by this name among the apostles, nine are mentioned in the New Testament and twenty in Josephus. "Sat down to meat." "Reclined at table." The custom was to recline on a couch, on the left side, the head toward the table, and the feet outward. But Simon omitted the usual ceremonies of respect which Jesus might well have expected.

37. "A woman—a sinner." There is a difference of opinion as to the character of this woman. Some think that she was a notorious woman of the street, while Clark, Whedon and others think the term "sinner" is used here, as in many other places, merely to designate a heathen. There is no evidence to prove that this woman was Mary Magdalene or that she was a grossly immoral character.

38. "Stood—behind." The knees were bent and the feet turned outward behind. The sandals were put off on entering the house. "Wash—wipe." She wept profusely; her hair was flowing loosely about her shoulders as a sign of mourning, and with this she wiped His feet. "Kissed." The kiss is an emblem of love, subjection and supplication. "Anointed them." She did not think herself worthy to anoint His head. 39. "Pharisee—saw it." The first feeling of Simon was that of displeasure that a heathen sinner had ventured to pollute his pure threshold. "Within himself." He had doubt with reference to his guest, but he dare not speak his thoughts. "A prophet." The idea prevailed among the Jews "that a prophet must know everything secret." "That toucheth him." Simon, if she had touched him, would have said, "Stand by thyself, come not near me, I am holier than thou;" and he thought Christ should say so, too.

II. Jesus speaks a parable (vs. 40-43). 40. "Jesus—said." Simon probably expressed his displeasure by his looks. Simon did not see through his guest, but Christ saw through him. "Somewhat to say." A courteous way of asking permission to speak. Those whom Christ hath somewhat against, He hath somewhat to say unto. "Master, say on." Although not believing Him to be a prophet, yet he recognizes Him as a teacher. 41. "A certain creditor." The creditor is God and the two debtors are Simon and the woman. "Five hundred pence." Or denarii. Silver denarii were worth from fifteen to seventeen cents. 42. "Nothing to pay." Simon, the Pharisee, was in debt and without the means of paying. He could no more pay his fifty pence than the poor woman could pay her five hundred, and if both be not freely forgiven by divine mercy both must perish. "Forgave them both." No righteousness of ours can merit His pardoning love. Salvation is the gift of God.

43. "I suppose." With greater modesty than that with which he had just murmured in secret does he give his opinion, and Jesus proceeds to turn his answer immediately as a weapon against him.

III. Jesus reproves Simon (vs. 44-47). 44. "Seest thou this woman." Afflicted and distressed and burdened with sin, but longing to be delivered. Do you see the tenderness and affectionate regard she is manifesting toward Me? "I entered." As a guest, by your invitation. "No water for My feet." Simon was greatly deficient in not performing the common civilities to Christ. The custom of providing water to wash the guests' feet was very ancient. It was one of the rites of hospitality. "With tears." Tears of sorrow for sin and of love for Me her Savior. 45. "No kiss." A kiss on the cheek from the master of the house, with the invocation, "The Lord be with you," conveyed a formal welcome. A kiss was an expression of a hearty and affectionate welcome to a friend. "My feet with ointment." This woman had not forgotten any of these marks of respect.

47. "Her sins, which are many." If we come to Christ in the right spirit, confessing our sins, He is as willing to forgive many as He is only a few. "Are forgiven." What precious words! They are all forgiven, never to return; the Lord will remember them no more, for ever. "For she loved much." Or, therefore she loved much. Her great love was the effect of her being forgiven. "To whom little is forgiven." A man's love to God will be in proportion to the obligations he feels himself under to the bounty of his Maker. "Loveth little." What Simon lacked was a deep sense of his sinful heart and life. The one who thinks his debt is small feels but little gratitude when it is forgiven. Those forms of theology which treat sin lightly always belittle Christ's divine nature and the necessity of the atonement.

IV. Jesus forgives the woman (vs. 48-50). 48. "Said unto her." Jesus now for the first time speaks directly to the woman. "Forgiven." A precious word to a sin-burdened soul, and doubly so when spoken by Christ. While the self-righteous Pharisee murmured the poor penitent rejoiced.

49. "Who is this," etc. He need not credit them with unbelief; they were amazed at a claim which doubtless many of them soon came to see was fully justified. 50. "Thy faith hath saved thee." Christ ascribes to faith those benefits which are due to Himself as the meritorious cause. Faith is the instrument on our part by which His benefits are supplied.

How They Treat Alaskan Dogs.

"A fair average day's journey with a dog team in our country is twenty-five miles," said T. V. Nikka, of Alaska. "If pushed, the dogs will go a good bit farther than this, but this is about the usual daily distance. They are cheerful workers, these Alaskan canines, but one must know how to treat them.

"It will not do to give them more than one meal a day, and that always when camp is struck after the day's travel. The usual feed is a lot of rice or meal that has been well boiled, with some fat meat thrown in for season-

The Hens and the Phonograph.

A Stockport poultry farmer has had great trouble of late because his hens were not producing the proper number of eggs. A nearby neighbor has a fine flock of hens which were working overtime to produce eggs. While hanging over the back fence listening to the triumphant cackle of his neighbor's hens an idea struck the luckless owner of hense. He went into the house and brought out his phonograph, inserted a blank record and succeeded in getting a fine imitation of the cackling of the laying hense. He then installed the phonograph in his own hen house and started it going. The first day the hens were greatly amazed, but the second day they got down to business and ground out an egg evehy time the phonograph cackled. The hens have stopped cackling themselves, however, and when the phonograph stops they stop laying, and the originator the idea has to sit in his coop all day long to keep the phonograph going.

A Love Letter 700 Years Old.

From The Pall Mall Gazette.

While carrying on some excavations near the foundations of the old church of St. Peter, on top of Montmartre, M. Sauvageot, a well known French antiquary, has discovered a love letter which is seven hundred years old. It was written by the knight Jean de Gisors to his lady, Alice de Lisle. In his letter the knight declares for all the world to know that he has worshipped the fair Lady Alice from afar, that never had she given him any right to declare his love, but that her image has been his guiding star for years, and that now, on the eve of battle he wished to send her a chaste farewell. Apparently the damsel never got the letter, for the knight was slain the next day upon the battlements and buried in the trench, whence his bones have been exhumed by the casual pick of a modern antiquary.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address

Trying To Abolish Flies.

A prize of 600 pounds has been awrded by the Paris Matin to the anonymous inventor of a new method of getting rid of houseflies. The method is strictly scientific, and it is claimed will completely destroy the eggs, which are usually deposited in drain pipes. Crude petrol, mixed with water, is used for household disinfecting purposes. The drain pipes become lined with the oil, which both kills the eggs already there and precludes the deposit of others. When desired, the petrol can be poured on the soil, and the latter sprinkled in corners. This, it is said, is thoroughly efficacious in destroying the eggs. The operations should be carried out in the spring to obtain the best results.

EARTHQUAKE AT SAN FRANCISCO.

LATE Wednesday evening news reached us of a fearful catastrophe at San Francisco, by which several hundred lives were lost and many injured. About five o'clock an earthquake shock made the city tremble, and in a few minutes the beautiful city of the West was partially ruined.

San Francisco was practically wrecked by an earthquake at 5:10 o'clock this morning The shock lasted three minutes and thousands of buildings were damaged and destroyed. The loss of life is reported great. There is no water and fires are breaking out all over the city. All wires with the exception of one are gone.

The water mains have burst and the fire department is practically helpless. Confusion exists and all business is suspended. The damage by the earthquake apparently extends all over the city. The residence districts are safe so far as heard from. Eleven hundred lives are reported lost, and many hundreds injured, while it is impossible to estimate the loss of property which will amount to millions of dollars.

H S. DOSTER.

THE announcement of Hon. H. S. Doster for State Senator from this district will be received with satisfaction by his numerous friends in the district. Mr. Doster has served his home county, Autauga, so well and faithfully, both in the legislature and the constitutional convention that it follows almost as a matter of course that he should now go to the senate, where his experience and sound common sense will be of greater value to his constituents. Autauga Democrats strongly endorse his candidacy, Shelby promises him a solid vote, and Chilton, we feel assured, will gladly rally to his support, so that in the November election, providing there should be any Republican candidate, Mr. Doster will be overwhelmingly elected.

SCHOOL MEETING.

A meeting of citizens of Clanton has been called by the Mayor and Council and the School Board to meet at the court house, Tuesday night, the 24th of April, at 7:30 p.m., to deal with the school situation and to make provisions for a school for the next scholastic year. Some important steps will be taken and all should attend.

Energy.

A loving tribute to the memory of W. D. Courtney, aged 68 years, son of Dr. Curtis Courtney, departed this life April 12, 1906. Then it was the pleasure of the good Lord to send him a welcome to his happy home in heaven where parting and sighing is no more. These were the saddest moments of life to his loving old mother, wife, children and many good and kind friends standing around this silent bedside. It was then the Father in His wisdom called thee whom His love had given, and though in earth the body lies, the soul is safe in heaven. Relatives and friends, weep not in grief and sorrow, you will meet him in that bright tomorrow The deceased leaves to mourn for him a mother, aged 87 years, wife and 13 children; he was the father of 23 children and grandfather of 27, and was married three times.

NERVOUS PEOPLE

Something You Ought to Know.

"No nerves and never irritable." This is what the Upchurch Drug co. say people report after taking Vinol. "It is remarkable," said a member of the above firm to the editor of the Banner, "how many people buy sedatives and all sorts of opiates to quiet and deaden the nerves, when they are we kening their entire nervous system by doing so.

"Nerve troubles are easily cured," continued he. "It is simply a case of treating the general weakness, not the nerves alone, and that is just what Vinol does in the most direct and simple manner possible It cures nerve troubles because it builds one up, and makes one strong all over. It invigorates the entire nervous system, makes new blood and vitality.

"Vinol contains no drugs, and you know what you are taking—simply the medicinal cures found in cod liver oil with a little organic iron added. It is fast superseding old forms of cod liver oil and emulsions because it is so delicious to the taste and has such marvelous vitalizing power."

It is for this reason that we say to every nervous, run-down and debilitated person in Clanton, try Vinol, and if it does not cure you come back and get your money." Upchurch Drug co.

Macedonia.

Dear Editor—Please give me space in the dear Banner to say a few words as I feel it my duty to do so, and I ask you to please print every word I say. In last week's news the letter that came out reading of tearful things which has befallen our God-loved church and has laid the sinful act on our dear uncle and says he holds malice in his heart and does so many bad things that he is clear of. God knows it is not true, and so do the people that know him. It makes my heart feel sorry to think that some one that claims him as a dear uncle to be so bold. I have spent many happy hours with my dear uncle in Sunday school and I know he has prayed for me and I can feel today that his prayers have done my poor soul good. I would to God that everybody was as pure in heart as my dear uncle. I am sure we would not be so sinful. Say, what was the first cause of this tearful thing that has befallen? Preachers can sin the same as office seekers As for my dear uncle touring the country, begging and pleading to the people to elect him to office he never has, and God knows and the people know he hasn't done it. I think it best to pluck the moat from our own eye. I hope the writer of that unwelcome letter will some day see the wrong in having such a letter printed, as my dear uncle is well known, but will not cause him to lay aside any of his good works. He will pray for his enemies and for himself from the depth of his heart. There is a crown for him. Well, I guess I have said enough, hope to see every word in print and pray to give us more of the good old time religion.

IN MEMORIAM

On Saturday evening, April 7, 1906, at one o'clock, the death angel visited the home of Bro. F. M. Connell and bore his sainted spirit to the home above. Bro. Connell was 83 years old and joined the Baptist church at Chestnut Creek in his early boyhood where he has lived a consistent member ever since. He has been very feeble for years, but he bore his sufferings with the fortitude of a soldier, was always cheerful and thanking God it was as well with him as it was. He leaves a wife and eight children and a host of relatives and friends to mourn his loss, but our loss is his gain. He was a loving and devoted husband, a kind and indulgent father. He loved his neighbors, visited the widow and orphan, the sick and distressed, speaking words of cheer and comfort and pointing young and old to the Lamb of God. He served his time in the war as musician for the good of his country; he was a noble soldier for his Maker and his country and we hope his children will follow in his footsteps. He will be greatly missed around his fireside for his chair will be ever vacant for no one can take the place of husband and father, and will also be greatly missed in his community where he was loved as the father and grandfather of all. He was laid to rest in Chestnut Creek cemetery by his brother Masons. Why should we mourn departed friends and relatives or shudder at death's alarms, 'tis but the voice of Jesus calling us to his arms.

mankind would have to invent milk. Milk is Nature's emulsion—butter put in shape for digestion. Cod liver oil is extremely nourishing, but it has to be emulsified before we can digest it.

Scott's Emulsion

combines the best oil with the valuable hypophosphites so that it is easy to digest and does far more good than the oil alone could. That makes Scott's Emulsion the most strengthening, nourishing food - medicine in the world.

To succeed these days you must have plenty of grit, courage, strength. How is it with the children? Are they thin, pale, delicate? Do not forget Ayer's Sarsaparilla. You know it makes the blood pure and rich, and builds up the general health in every way.

The children cannot possibly have good health unless the bowels are in proper condition. A sluggish liver gives a coated tongue, bad breath, constipated bowels. Correct all these by giving small laxative doses of Ayer's Pills. All vegetable, sugar coated.

MANY THINGS.

THINGS ABOUT THE FARM.

Brief reference has already been made to stock and their treatment. I gave you a hint how to have good stock and how to make stock raising profitable. There is no profit in stock, neither is there any pleasure unless they are kindly treated. This subject has a moral side which we do well to study. Many of the world's greatest men have believed and do believe that some noble, faithful animals shall exist in the hereafter. I am not going to tell you now just what my belief is on this point But one thing I do know that He who created us and all dumb animals will hold us responsible for how we treat them. God created man a little lower than the angels and gave him dominion over all creatures on earth lower than himself. That means He made them for our good and our enjoyment and shall hold us responsible for how we use them. Many a soul who has abused and misused God's creatures here will be surprised and disappointed when they stand in Judgment. I have very little confidence in a man's religion who enters a comfortable meeting house and worships the beneficent Father while his horse is shivering on the outside, unblanketed; or standing in the scorching sun without any protection. That man whose stock go unfed and must be exposed to the heat of summer and the cold of winter has not yet learned Jesus' Beautitude, when He said, "Blessed are the merciful, for they shall obtain mercy."

Let it be remembered that the tiniest birds are God's creatures. He has a purpose in their creation They are for man's good. If there were no birds men could not live on the earth; yet thoughtless men and boys murder them by thousands; yes, and thoughtless women have them murdered by the ten thousands. May the system of education that has for its object the prevention of this wholesale slaying, soon spread over the earth and thus become a great blessing to the entire race. If you do not believe that every kind word you say to a dumb animal or bird will make you happier, ask some of our Mercy Band members, of whom there are many in Chilton county.

The Capitol of Alabama is also painted with Sun Proof, just recently finished, and if this paint was not good it would not be used on the above buildings.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

BEAUTIFUL WOMEN.

The Secret of Their Increasing Charm.

It is really surprising that in such a short time there should be so marked an improvement in the appearance of so many Clanton ladies, but it is not surprising when the cause of this improvement is known. And there is no great mystery about it after all. Drop in most any day now at the Forence drug store and you are likely to see one of the clerks wrapping up a bottle of the little tablets that do so much to improve the appearance of one's complexion. Bright eyes, a rudy glow, and a complexion free from pimples, sallowness, and moth spots may be had by every woman who will take one or two Laxakola Tonic Tablets at bedtime. These tablets contain dandelion and other purely vegetable extracts that are known to have a selective action for skin affections, and being both a laxative and a tonic they quicken the circulation, open the pores, encourage the action of the bowels, stimulate the liver, enrich the blood, and at the same time cure biliousness, sick headache and chronic constipation.

Try them. They cost but 25 cents, and once used their merits cannot be concealed.

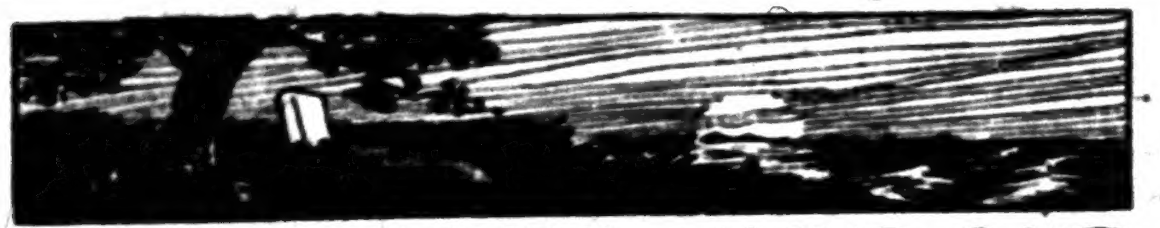
Poverty

A millionaire sat in his study
  And figured with pencil and pad;
The cold drops stood out on his forehead—
  A scene that was touching and sad.

He charged up as loss a few items,
  Result of a syndicate squeeze,
Subtracted some big restitutions
  And loss of directorship fees.

Then gently he broke to his family
  The awful and terrible news—
They had to stop smashing their auto,
  No longer a yacht could they use.

They sobbed as they realized ruin,
  The days of their riches were gone;
He only had left of his fortune
  The sum he had paid taxes upon.



AFTER THE SOUL WENT OUT

BY EARL MARBLE

(Copyright, 1906, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

Suddenly all was still.

A ghastly whiteness settled over the thin, yearning face on the pillow, and peace took the place of pain.

The end of a life of conjugal mismating had come at last.

"Can you not forgive me all the wrong you have suffered at my hands before you go?" he had asked.

She had remained silent, with averted eyes and a faint flush overspreading the wan features.

The minister had joined the father and son at the bedside a short time before, and was watching the passage of his parishioner to the world beyond.

"It is your duty, Mrs. Marshall," he had said. "It is a dreadful thing to go into the other world with unforgiveness in your heart. It is so easy to speak that now, and afterward so impossible. The consequences to both of you are terrible."

He had said no more, but waited.

They all waited.

At last she spoke.

"If you have ever wronged me, Henry," she said, "I forgive you, as I hope to be forgiven."

"If I have ever wronged you," he echoed. "I certainly have, and it is so noble of you to say those words."

"But I have need to be forgiven also," she haid said. "You will not refuse?"

"There is nothing to forgive, Mary," he had said. "But if there were anything for me to forgive in you, it is given freely. I am only sorry it is said now, at the close of our lives together, instead of at the beginning."

The woman had caught her breath feebly, and all was over.

The physician had entered from the adjoining room at that instant, and he gazed at her a moment.

"It is all over," he said. "The soul has left the body."

"Her soul left her body many years ago," said the husband, bending over her and placing his face in his hands, between the fingers of which the tears slowly trickled.

When the undertaker arrived he was led away gently, and the sad arrangements were porceeded with.

"What did they have to forgive each other for?" was the current form of gossip through the neighborhood.

No one knew. Neither had ever mentioned it to any one in the circle in which they moved.

In the funeral discourse the minister talked very profoundly and feelingly on the subject of forgiveness, but he floundered in his remarks because he did not know.

"Father," said the young man, the evening of the day after they had returned from the cemetery, "why did you and mother always treat each other so coldly?"

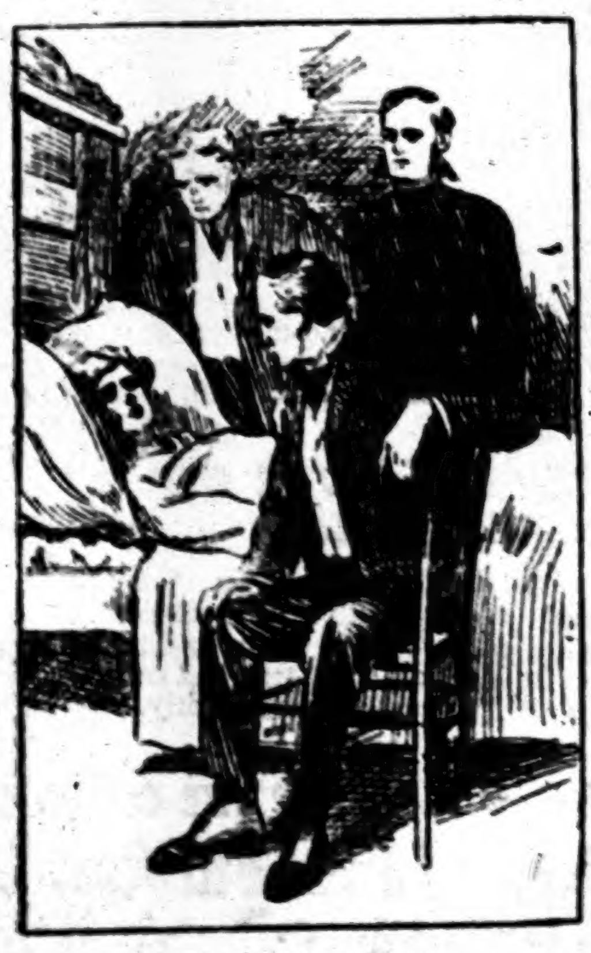
"Because there was no love between us."

"But why. Was it always so?"

"Always."

"Won't you tell me why?"

"Let's take a walk down the road and I will see if I can."



They all waited.

"Certainly, father, but do not speak if it is anything against her."

"It is nothing against her."

"I am so glad, because you know how dearly I loved her, and how I revere her memory."

"The trouble began from the very beginning of our married life—in fact, before our marriage."

They had walked till they reached the edge of a little wood by this time, the cool breeze from which came out with insistent refreshment to their heated brows and faces flushed from the tears which had coursed over them from their streaming eyes.

"I had presumed to think that I might make your mother my wife, but had little prospect of success. Several other sought her hand. The only difference was, maybe, that I was the most persistent of the lot. A young man came into the neighborhood from Chicago. He was a summer boarder at a neighboring farm house. His name was Hubbard—Sidney Hubbard. He met your mother, and she fell in love with him at once. None of us had any chance then. Practically, we all gave it up. But one evening, toward the close of the season, I was passing the house where he boarded and was astonished to see him in earnest talk with a girl whom I had never seen before. They were standing at the open window, and he had an arm around her. I watched them a moment, and then turned to go away. I had gone toward the house of your mother's family, with the intention of telling my story, when I met your mother and brought her at once to the place where I had stood. We heard him use endearing terms to her, saw him kiss her, and then heard him promise to go with her at once. I took your mother home and left her almost completely prostrated. She did not say a word of what she had seen to any one. She was very proud and high spirited. The young man and young woman disappeared that night; and, as soon as your mother had recovered sufficiently, I renewed my suit, and she accepted me, on condition that I should take her away from the neighborhood. We did not wait to get married, but left at once, and were married at the first place where we stopped.

"I had killed him."

"Your mother never returned to the old place, her family having removed also a short time afterward. They had lived there but a short time and had no intimates, so none of them ever heard from the neighborhood again. I went out there to settle up some of my affairs, and heard that Hubbard had been there, learned the story, and inquired my address. A few weeks afterward, I went out during the late afternoon, for a walk, as we are doing now, and met him right here. He accused me of treachery to him, and said that the lady whom we had seen him in company with was his sister, who had come after him to aid her in untangling some property matter, which required their immediate attention. He made some slighting remark to me, saying he was going to the house to see your mother, with whom he would have an explanation, winding up with the remark that I had defrauded him of her, and he would have her yet. One word led to another and finally he struck me. I returned the blow with interest, and he fell, striking that rock there," pointing to a large rock by the roadside, "after which he never stirred. I had killed him, but had not intended to do so. I dug a grave over there," pointing to a mound so slight as not to be noticeable, "and buried him."

"Did mother ever know?"

"No, my boy."

"Did any one else?"

"No."

"But that is why you and mother were always estranged from each other?"

"Yes."

"Oh, well, cheer up, father. It was not so bad—the killing, I mean. You did the only thing you could do. The estrangement was terrible. It might have been better if you had told mother."

"It would not—under the circumstances."

"Well, don't dwell on it now. We will go home now, and make the best of it, dear old father."

"But I am not your father."

"You—are—not—my—father? Then who is?"

"The man sleeping under that mound there."

And the elderly man walked deliberately into the dark wood, leaving the younger one sitting on the rock where his father had breathed his last.

GAVE SAILOR COIN; GETS $8,000.

Girl Will Cash Bond on Bank of Portugal for That Amount.

Eight thousand dollars' reward for an off-hand kindness conferred four years ago on a destitute and partially sick sailor in Uncle Sam's navy is the Christmas present that pretty Annie Josephine Saucier, a shop girl and former mill hand of the city of Lewiston, Mass., is to receive soon, says the Philadelphia Inquirer.

The day of fairyland wonders is not past, so the Lewiston girl thinks, for to-day she is the practical possessor of nearly $8,000 that is to come to her on account of the simple giving of a 20-cent piece at Newport, R. I., to a strange man wearing the uniform of the United States navy.

At the moment that she granted the strange request of the sailor he passed to her a small scriptlike piece of paper, saying: "Keep this for your kindness. Some day you will find that you have lost nothing by the favor you have done me."

Carried in her pocketbook and laid about her home among many of the most worthless trifles that might easily have been thrown away, this scriptlike keepsake has now brought a fortune to this poor shop girl of Lewiston.

The piece of script that the young girl carried with dress samples, cards and small odds and ends that fill the pocketbooks or reticules of young ladies has proved to be a bond of the Bank of Portugal, calling for payment to the holder of $5,000 in the year 1906 with interest at 5 per cent., compounded annually, and as the note matures this month the sum total she will receive from the bank shortly will be very nearly $8,000.

For Editor's Benefit.

"Mark Twain," at the dinner in honor of his seventieth birthday, advised a young novelist not to shun judicious self-advertisement.

"On one of my first visits to New York," he said, "I was taken on a sight-seeing tour by a successful joke-writer. I learned during this tour something about the way to succeed.

"As we rode down Broadway on a car my friend suddenly looked up from the comic paper he was reading, gave a hearty laugh and then read aloud to me a joke.

"'Isn't that great?' he cried. 'Oh, ha, ha, ha, ha! Isn't that the funniest joke—ho, ho, ho!—you ever heard?'

"Just then we rose to get off. When we reached the sidewalk I said to my friend:

"'You showed me that joke before, you know. It is one of your own, isn't it?'

"He smiled at my puzzled face and answered:

"'Yes. But you didn't notice the man who sat opposite us, did you? He is the editor who buys most of my stuff and he doesn't know me personally. See?'"

Maimed Birds Did Well.

"Maimed birds show remarkable intelligence in getting food for themselves," said a naturalist.

"I once found in my garden a bluebird that a stone had wounded badly. The poor little creature could neither walk nor fly. I put it in a cucumber frame and fed it regularly, but I suppose I didn't give it enough, for it foraged industriously all the time. Lying on the earth, it would cover itself with leaves—only its small eyes would be visible. Then, when a fly alighted somewhere near—swoop, the bluebird's head and neck would dart from the covering of leaves and the fly would be devoured.

"A finch with a broken wing lived high all one summer in my garden at the expense of the spiders. It pillaged their webs. It made a round of some twenty webs a day and fattened on the contents of those filmy larders."

Not Darkest Before Dawn.

The idea that the darkest hour is just before dawn is poetical but incorrect. The darkest hour is midway between sunset and dawn, and the legend is of a piece with the statement often made that the hour preceding dawn is the coldest.

In many countries there is a fixed belief that just before the break of day there comes an ebb when nature grows cold and pulseless, and life fluttering in the breast of the dying man finally expires.

According to science such dissolution should occur between three and four o'clock, investigation extending over a period of several years having proved that the temperature is lowest then.—Montreal Herald.

The Next Ice Age.

Sir Robert Ball, professor of astronomy at Cambridge, England, says that 80,000 years ago the track of the earth was oval. In the terrible journey away from the sun to the far end of the ellipse the hemisphere turned away from the source of light, and kept accumulating more ice and snow. The brief summers failed to melt it, and so the great ice cap was formed and its duration we now call the Ice Age. "We are a long way from the last Ice Age," Sir Robert added, "and it is equally certain that another Ice Age will come on the earth, but it may be some satisfaction to us to know that we need not expect it for more than 200,000 years."

FELT A NATURAL RESENTMENT.

Inebriated Individual Felt He Had Been Unjustly Dealt With.

In a certain town there live the families of Jim Smith and John Smith. They live side by side, and the houses are nearly alike. They are not related in any way. Jim Smith is a saloonist and a promoter of prize fights; John Smith is a bank director, and his wife and daughters are leaders of society. Naturally it irks the John Smiths when, as might be expected, some one calls at their home and insists upon seeing Jim Smith.

One evening, after several calls of this sort had been made during the day, a man obviously under the influence of ardent liquor made his way with some difficulty up the steps of the John Smith home, rang the bell, and when the eldest daughter of John Smith appeared at the door, inquired blandly:

"Doesh—doesh Jim Smish live 'ere?"

Patience and temper had been worn out. The girl slammed the door in his face, exclaiming at the same time.

"No, he doesn't"

Dignifiedly the intoxicated man ambled down the steps, down the walk and to the gate. There he paused and thought, while from behind the curtains of the window the elder daughter of John Smith watched him curiously. She could see that he was muttering to himself. Finally he shook his head sagely and retraced his steps to the John Smith door. Again he rang the bell, and again the daughter opened it. Gazing at her with eyes that told of wounded sensibilities, he inquired resentfully:

"'Who'n dickens shaid he did?"—Seattle Post Intelligencer.

The Bankrupt's Hymn.

There is a lawyer by the name of Hoxie out in Hampton, Iowa, who is noted within a reasonably limited territory as a consummate wag.

A few years ago a good old deacon in the Congregational church in that city, who had held many public as well as private offices of trust in the community, found himself on the verge of financial ruin. In endeavoring to recoup and save himself from insolvency, he dragged a large number of his unsuspecting friends into the maelstrom, and was finally compelled to resort to bankruptcy. Now we will use Hoxie's own words in telling the sequel: "The day was set for the deacon's discharge in bankruptcy, and after he had got his decree, I was going home for supper, when I heard the sound of music. I listened, and noted that it emanated from the Congregational church. I was in a quandary. This was not Sunday, nor yet prayer meeting night. I approached and peered through the door. There sat Deacon P——, oblivious to every surrounding, his face wreathed as with a beatific vision, a copy of the hymnal before his face, and he was singing that old familiar hymn, 'Jesus paid it all!'"—Green Bag.

A Legal Switch.

The disgust of a layman with legal phraseology was shown in the will of Elphonzo Youngs, filed here. Mr. Youngs was a dignified, well-to-do gentleman, best known for thirty years as a deacon in one of the largest Congregational churches in Washington. He wrote his will himself, evidently starting out to copy from some book form, which set the example in this form:

"Being by the Grace of God in sound mind and body, and mindful of the uncertainty of human life," etc.

Then suddenly on the written page there appears a wild dash of ink and the following:

"Rats! This is too formal. All that is about it is this: At my death I want my ever faithful and devoted wife, Amelia Loretta L. Youngs, to have and control everything I possess."—New York Times.

The Poet's Thought.

A poet breathed a thought in rhyme
  And gave it to the world in print.
Hope came and whispered in his ear
  Of coming fame a pleasing hint.
He watched and listened, from the world
  To hear a faintly answering sound,
But sped the years on speedy wing;
  No echo from his cry he found.

Like leaf let drift from parent tree
  Which lodges in some quiet spot
Aloof from haunts of men and rests
  Amid its fellows, heeded not,
The poem lingered many years.
  Then, like the dried leaf, zephyr stirred,
It leaped from out its hiding place
  And by the multitude was heard.

From page to page it flitted on;
  In many languages found tongue.
'Twas stored in many hungry hearts;
  By happy voices it was sung.
Ten thousand lives were made more bright;
  Some souls were by it led to God.
The author murmured "Failed!" ere he Was laid to rest beneath the sod.
—Sunset Magazine.

A New Theory.

In an uptown school the teacher in one of the lower grades endeavored to instill a little information into her pupils on the subject of horses and their gaits, and then asked each of them to prepare a brief essay embodying some of the facts they had just learned. One of the boys thereupon prepared and turned in the following lucid offering:

"Some horses is called pacers. They can run faster 'cause they are bowlegged."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Careful Woman Used All of Celery Bunch to

HAT salad is delic[illegible]. Not many of us can afford celery. It is too expensive; there is so much waste.

"I'll have to explain," said Phoebe. "We are too poor to buy things to throw away. I never throw anything away unless it is spoiling. Spoiled food is worse than none. I use up the bits as we go along; then they are always fresh and good.

"This bunch of celery cost me 8 cents. I picked out the freshest bunch at the market. It was fresh clear to the tips of the leaves.

"First, I cleaned the whole thing, separating the stalks and cutting off any brown bruised places, being careful not to waste it in cutting.

"The leaves I shredded and used to season the stuffing for a roast. Sage disagrees with John, but celery suits to a T.

MANUSCRIPTS OF GREAT

Prof. Albert H. Smyth of the Central high school, Philadelphia, who is declared to know more about Franklin than any other man living, in an address before the Pennsylvania History club sketched the history of public and private collections of Franklin manuscripts he had perused, says the Philadelphia Ledger. He told the following anecdote of J. Pierpont Morgan's collection:

"I was much surprised to learn that Mr. Morgan owned valuable Franklin manuscripts, and as he was abroad at the time I wrote to his nephew, Junius Morgan, this gentleman suggested that we should 'break into' his uncle's residence, and we did so, spending an afternoon in the financier's library. I found three complete sets of Franklin manuscripts, but not the Collinson letters, which I was anxious to see. Finally, as night was setting in, we discovered a wonderful pile of manuscripts, including Pope's 'Rape of the Lock,' stories by Poe, novels of Fenimore Cooper and others, and from the center of it I extracted the 'Correspondence of Franklin and Peter Collinson.'"

Prof. Smyth also read the collection of Franklin letters owned by the Adams family, which vault of the Massach society, to remain there ent generation of th passed away.

WARLIKE MOOD OF MEX

The younger men of the country, says F. R. Guernsey, in the February Atlantic, have shown a decided bent toward military life, and thousands of them have voluntarily subjected themselves to drill and discipline. Steadily, and without making any parade of its purpose, the government has devoted much attention and money to the perfecting of its army. Military men have been stationed in Europe to watch the evolution of their art among Continental armies and to gather technical information as to new weapons. To-day, the Mexican army is largely officered by young and devoted men who have received a scientific training, and the military strength of the nation has increased appreciably. Mexico has learned much from the Boer war and from the Russo-Japanese conflict. She desires above all things peace and progress, but she is armed and prepared for any warlike conting simply a policy dicta spect. IN RUSSIA CENTURIES

One who traveled through Russia in 1698 wrote in Latin an interesting account of what he saw. These were afterward translated into English, in part as follows: "The Muscovites are generally of a very strong Constitution, both very tall and bulky. Above one-half of the Year is taken up with their Fasts, when the common people feed upon nothing else but Cabbage and Cucumbers, and these, raw, only pickled." The writer, Henry William Ludolph, has leanings toward vegetarianism, for he added: "This is an evident sign of their natural vigour, though it must also be allowed that they promote the digestion by the Brandy and Leeks which they use in large quantities, and questionless correct the viscous Humours arising in the Stomach by such indigestible Nourishments."

ALL HIS AMBITION VA

There was once a young man who came from a wee bit of a town, and whenever he would tell folks where he was raised they would ask him where that was.

It irked the young man to find that his native town was such an inconspicuous place, and he said to himself:

"I will bustle around and make myself famous, and then Blink Center will get some notice, for after I have become a celebrity everybody will learn that I was born and raised there."

So for years and years he climbed the path of fame, until at last his name was known in every house in the land.

Head Covered With Humor Sores, With Loss of Hair—Another Speedy Cure by Cuticura Remedies.

"All my life I had been troubled more or less with humor in my scalp, but about a year ago it became worse, and my scalp was covered with little sores, which itched so it nearly made me crazy; my hair also began to get dry and fall out. I tried all kinds of hair restorers with no effect, and I was nearly discouraged, but one day I was reading in a paper what the Cuticura Remedies had done for scalp diseases, and decided to make a trial. I got a cake of Cuticura Soap, a box of Cuticura Ointment and Cuticura Resolvent Pills. I used them according to directions, and soon noticed a difference; the tiny sores on my scalp began to heal, the itching stopped, and my hair began to grow thick. I have used only the one cake of Cuticura Soap, one box of Ointment and one vial of Pills, and now I have no humor on my scalp and my hair is soft and silky. Miss Mayzie C. LOAFING.

"He'll never make a fortune as a novelist," said the first author.

"He seems to think pretty well of himself," replied the other.

"That's just his trouble. When he writes a novel he's so proud of it he wastes time reading it over instead of starting another immediately."—Philadelphia Press.

DIDN'T FEEL SURE OF HIMSELF.

The Flirt—Congratulate me.

The Bachelor—Really?

"Yes, I'm going to be married."

"I'm so glad."

"Are you, really?"

"Yes, really! You know I was always a little afraid of you!"—Yonkers Statesman.

HE KNEW HIS BOOK.

"From a grammatical viewpoint," said the fair maid with the lofty forehead, "which do you consider correct—'I had rather go home,' or 'I would rather go home'?"

"Neither," promptly answered the young man who was engaged in holding down the other end of the sofa. "I'd rather stay right here."—Chicago News.

SHREWD GUESS.

Senior Partner—We must be careful not to give Billings any more credit. He's evidently losing money.

Junior Partner—How do you know?

Senior Partner—I heard him remark today that "Life is full of ups and downs." No man ever admits that until he begins to strike the down.—Philadelphia Press.

WELL TRAINED.

"Perkins—you know Perkins—entered into an agreement with his wife soon after their marriage twenty years ago, that whenever either lost temper or stormed the other was to keep silence."

"And the scheme worked?"

"Admirably. Perkins has generally kept silence for twenty years."—London Tit-Bits.

HOPE FOR HIM.

"What do you expect to get for that?" asked Crittick, watching D'Auber at work on a large canvass.

"I am not going to sell this picture," said D'Auber, gazing at his work proudly.

"Oh, don't be discouraged so soon. You'll find some fool willing to give you $5 or $10 for it."—Philadelphia Press.

WHY THE GUESTS WAITED.

The Lady—What makes dinner so late, Katie?

The Girl—I couldn't get the macaroni, ma'am.

"Why, I thought the grocer brought it early this morning?"

"So he did, ma'am; but Johnnie had a lot of boys in the yard, and they were using it for putty blowers."—Yonkers Statesman.

FROM BAD TO WORSE.

"Yes, my wife used to get nervous at night every time she heard a noise downstairs, but I told her if burglars ever got into the house they wouldn't make any noise."

"I suppose that calmed her."

"Not much. Now she gets nervous every time she doesn't hear a noise."—Catholic Standard and Times.

MORE THAN A HINT.

"If I should attempt to kiss you," asked the young man, "would you scream for your mother?"

"I guess I would," the fair thing admitted, "but it wouldn't do me much good. Mother is visiting fifteen miles out in the country."

A moment later something happened.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Pope's Treasures.

The pope's residence at Rome, with its treasures in money, is said to exceed $150,000,000 in value.

Productive Elephants.

The elephants in the London zoological gardens earn $4,000 a year by carrying visitors about on their backs.

Same Old Thing.

What in American restaurants is called a ham sandwich, in London is dubbed "a buster."

Approximately 1,000,000 young trees will be distributed to the people living on the prairies of western Kansas free of charge this year. H. S. [illegible], state forestry commissioner, who was in Topeka from Dodge City recently, says he is afraid that even this number will not be sufficient to supply the demand. The forestry stations at Dodge City and Ogallah have the young trees almost ready for shipment and will begin sending them out to those who have made application within a few days.

The life of a Chinese woman is one of servitude. At the early age of seven she is separated from her brothers, with whom she is neither allowed to eat or play. When she is married, she may look forward to a life of submission to her parents-in-law, and in dying she has the comforting thought that in the next world she will resume her bondage under her husband. Widows do not remarry and it is considered a delicate mark of affection to their departed spouses to follow them into the next world by committing suicide.

Rise Liars,

Ho, All Ye Faithful Followers of Ananias

GIVE EAR!

A Young Girl said to a Cooking School Teacher in New York: "If You make One Statement as False as That, All You have said about Foods is Absolutely Unreliable."

This burst of true American girl indignation was caused by the teacher saying that Grape-Nuts, the popular pre-digested food, was made of stale bread shipped in and sweetened.

The teacher colored up and changed the subject.

There is quite an assortment of traveling and stay-at-home members of the tribe of Ananias who tell their falsehoods for a variety of reasons.

In the spring it is the custom on a cattle ranch to have a "round-up," and brand the cattle, so we are going to have a "round-up," and brand these cattle and place them in their proper pastures.

FIRST PASTURE.

Cooking school teachers—this includes "teachers" who have applied to us for a weekly pay if they would say "something nice" about Grape-Nuts and Postum, and when we have declined to hire them to do this they get waspy and show their true colors.

This also includes "demonstrators" and "lecturers" sent out by a certain Sanitarium to sell foods made there, and these people instructed by the small-be-whiskered-doctor—the head of the institution—to tell these prevarications (you can speak the stronger word if you like). This same little doctor conducts a small magazine in which there is a department of "answers to correspondents," many of the questions as well as the answers being written by the aforesaid doctor.

In this column some time ago appeared the statement: "No, we cannot recommend the use of Grape-Nuts, for it is nothing but bread with glucose poured over it." Right then he showed his badge as a member of the tribe of Ananias. He may have been a member for some time before, and so he has caused these "lecturers" to descend into the ways of the tribe wherever they go.

When the young lady in New York put the "iron on" to this "teacher" and branded her right we sent $10.00 to the girl for her pluck and bravery.

SECOND PASTURE.

Editors of "Trade" papers known as grocers' papers.

Remember, we don't put the brand on all, by any means. Only those that require it. These members of the tribe have demanded that we carry advertising in their papers and when we do not consider it advisable they institute a campaign of vituperation and slander, printing from time to time manufactured slurs on Postum or Grape-Nuts. When they go far enough we set our legal force at work and hale them to the judge to answer. If the pace has been hot enough to throw some of these "cattle" over on their backs, feet tied and "bellowing," do you think we should be blamed? They gambol around with tails held high and jump stiff legged with a very "cocky" air while they have full range, but when the rope is thrown over them "it's different."

Should we untie them because they bleat soft and low? Or should we put the iron on, so that people will know the brand?

Let's keep them in this pasture, anyhow.

THIRD PASTURE.

Now we come to a frisky lot, the "Labor Union" editors. You know down in Texas a weed called "Loco" is sometimes eaten by a steer and produces a derangement of the brain that makes the steer "batty" or crazy. Many of these editors are "Locoed" from hate of anyone who will not instantly obey the "demands" of a labor union, and it is the universal habit of such writers to go straight into a system of personal vilification, manufacturing any sort of falsehood through which to vent their spleen. We assert that the common citizen has a right to live and breathe air without asking permission of the labor trust, and this has brought down on us the hate of these editors. When they go far enough with their libels, is it harsh for us to get judgment against them and have our lawyers watch for a chance to attach money due them from others? (For they are usually irresponsible).

Keep your eye out for the "Locoed" editor.

Now let all these choice specimens take notice:

We will deposit one thousand or fifty thousand dollars to be covered by a like amount from them, or any one of them, and if there was ever one ounce of old bread or any other ingredient different than our selected wheat and barley with a little salt and yeast used in the making of Grape-Nuts, we will lose the money.

Our pure food factories are open at all times to visitors, and thousands pass through each month, inspecting every department and every process. Our factories are so clean that one could, with good relish, eat a meal from the floors.

The work people, both men and women, are of the highest grade in the State of Michigan, and according to the State labor reports, are the highest paid in the State for similar work.

Let us tell you exactly what you will see when you inspect the manufacture of Grape-Nuts. You will find tremendous elevators containing the choicest wheat and barley possible to buy. These grains are carried through long conveyers to grinding mills, and there converted into flour. Then the machines make selection of the proper quantities of this flour in the proper proportion and these parts are blended into a general flour which passes over to the big dough mixing machines, there water, salt and a little yeast are added and the dough kneaded the proper length of time.

Remember that previous to the barley having been ground it was passed through about one hundred hours of soaking in water, then placed on warm floors and slightly sprouted, developing the diastase in the barley, which changes the starch in the grain into a form of sugar.

Now after we have passed it into dough and it has been kneaded long enough, it is moulded by machinery into loaves about 18 inches long and 5 or 6 inches in diameter. It is put into this shape for convenience in second cooking.

These great loaves are sliced by machinery and the slices placed on wire trays, these trays, in turn, placed on great steel trucks, and rolled into the secondary ovens, each perhaps 75 or 80 feet long. There the food is subjected to a long, low heat and the starch which has not been heretofore transformed, is turned into a form of sugar generally known as Post Sugar. It can be seen glistening on the granules of Grape-Nuts if held toward the light, and this sugar is not poured over or put on the food as these prevaricators ignorantly assert. On the contrary the sugar exudes from the interior of each little granule during the process of manufacture, and reminds one of the little white particles of sugar that come out on the end of a hickory log after it has been sawed off and allowed to stand for a length of time.

This Post Sugar is the most digestible food known for human use. It is so perfect in its adaptability that mothers with very young infants will pour a little warm milk over two or three spoonfuls of Grape-Nuts, thus washing the sugar off from the granules and carrying it with the milk to the bottom of the dish. Then this milk charged with Post Sugar is fed to the infants, producing the most satisfactory results, for the baby has food that it can digest quickly and will go off to sleep well fed and contented.

When baby gets two or three months old it is the custom of some mothers to allow the Grape-Nuts to soak in the milk a little longer and become mushy, whereupon a little of the food can be fed in addition to the milk containing the washed off sugar.

It is by no means manufactured for a baby food, but these facts are stated as an illustration of a perfectly digestible food.

It furnishes the energy and strength for the great athletes. It is in common use by physicians in their own families and among their patients, and can be seen on the table of every first-class college in the land.

We quote from the London Lancet analysis as follows:

"The basis of nomenclature of this preparation is evidently an American pleasantry, since 'Grape-Nuts' is derived solely from cereals. The preparatory process undoubtedly converts the food constituents into a much more digestible condition than in the raw cereal. This is evident from the remarkable solubility of the preparation, no less than one-half of it being soluble in cold water. The soluble part contains chiefly dextrin and no starch. In appearance 'Grape-Nuts' resembles fried bread-crumbs. The grains are brown and crisp, with a pleasant taste not unlike slightly burnt malt. According to our analysis the following is the composition of 'Grape-Nuts:' Moisture, 6.02 per cent.; mineral matter, 2.01 per cent.; fat, 1.60 per cent.; proteids, 15.00 per cent.; soluble carbohydrates, etc., 49.40 per cent.; and unaltered carbohydrates (insoluble), 25.97 per cent. The features worthy of note in this analysis are the excellent proportion of proteid, mineral matters, and soluble carbohydrates per cent. The mineral matter was rich in phosphoric acid. 'Grape-Nuts' is described as a brain and nerve food, whatever that may be. Our analysis, at any rate, shows that it is a nutritive of a high order, since it contains the constituents of a complete food in very satisfactory and rich proportion and in an easily assimilable state."

An analysis made by the Canadian Government some time ago shows that Grape-Nuts contains nearly ten times the digestible elements contained in ordinary cereals, and foods, and nearly twice the amount contained in any other food analyzed.

The analysis is familiar to practically every successful physician in America and London.

We print this statement in order that the public may know the exact facts upon which we stake our honor and will back it with any amount of money that any person or corporation will put up.

We propose to follow some of these choice specimens of the tribe of Ananias.

When you hear a cooking school teacher or any other person assert that either Postum or Grape-Nuts are made of any other ingredients than those printed on the packages and as we say they are made, send us the name and address, also name of two or three witnesses, and if the evidence is clear enough to get a judgment we will right that wrong quickly.

Our business has always been conducted on as high a grade of human intelligence as we are capable of, and we propose to clear the deck of these prevaricators and liars whenever and wherever they can be found.

Attention is again called to the general and broad invitation to visitors to go through our works, where they will be shown the most minute process and device in order that they may understand how pure and clean and wholesome Grape-Nuts and Postum are.

There is an old saying among business men that there is some chance to train a fool, but there is no room for a liar, for you never can tell where you are, and we hereby serve notice on all the members of this ancient tribe of Ananias that they may follow their calling in other lines, but when they put forth their lies about Grape-Nuts and Postum, we propose to give them an opportunity to answer to the proper authorities.

The New York girl wisely said that if a person would lie about one item, it brands the whole discourse as absolutely unreliable.

Keep your iron handy and brand these "mavericks" wherever you find them running loose.

Clanton, May 5, 1906

Editor Banner—Will you please allow me a short space in your paper this week. I did think I would not write again, but the inspiration gathered from one of Prof. Robert Jones' letters prompts me to write again. Let me thank him for the words of congratulation his letter contained. I know Prof. Jones and cannot help but love him. He is well known in our community as the boy's friend, and I truly believe he is. I well remember and have studied some simple words he used last summer when he visited our school. He said that it is the small things that make life a success, and now I truly believe it. May the blessings of God ever guide Bro. Jones in the great work he is doing to uplift the cause of God and in educating the rising generation.

Well, I am not in school now, but a little while on the farm and then in school again. In my community the people seem to be very happy, and true enough they should be happy; happy because they live in the good land of Dixie, happy because of good health, happy because of the bright pretty days, and happy because of the rain to water the thirsty earth. With best wishes to Prof. Jones and all the Banner readers, I am,

A Correction

Birmingham, Ala., May 5, 1906

Editor Banner: I am in receipt of a copy of your paper containing an article signed "Citizen" of date April 29th, 1906, referring to the contract entered into between Judge Reynolds and the Tennesee Coal, Iron & R. R. Co, in which the Tenn. Coal, Iron & R. R. Co. agreed to pay $35.00 for county convicts. In the course of this article "Citizen" states that Mobile had hired its convicts to the coal mining company and upon learning that they were not being properly cared for the Board of Revenue ordered the County Physician to make a personal inspection of the condition of their convicts, which was done, and Citizen in his article quotes a part of the report of the county physician as to the treatment which the Mobile county convicts were receiving at the hands of the coal mining company, from which it would appear that these convicts were badly fed and cruelly and inhumanly treated. The article referred to is incorrect and misleading and unintentionally does a serious injustice. From the article it would appear that the Chilton county convicts are leased to the same company which had previously leased the Mobile county convicts and which had been guilty of inhumanity in the treatment of these convicts. As a matter of fact the Mobile county convicts were leased to the Sloss Sheffield Steel & Iron Company. The Chilton county convicts are leased to the Tennessee Coal, Iron & Railroad Company, an entirely distinct and competing corporation. I do not wish to cast any reflection whatsoever upon the Sloss Company; I know nothing whatsoever as to the correctness of the report made as to the treatment of convicts by that company. The Tennessee Coal, Iron & R. R. Co. wishes to be judged by its own record. It has been engaged approximately twenty years in mining coal in part with convict labor. During this time it has had in its custody and care thousands of convicts leased to it by the State of Alabama, and thousands of convicts leased to it by the various counties in the State. During this entire time not one single complaint has ever been made against the Tennessee Coal, Iron & R. R. Co. on account of the treatment of its convicts. The convicts are well fed, properly clad and humanely treated. The Tenn. Coal, Iron & R. R. Co. is proud of its record on this point. I state without hesitation that the State Board of Convict Inspectors and all of the county officials with whom the Tenn. Coal, Iron & R. R. Co. has had any business will affirm the correctness of what I have said as to the treatment which the Tenn. Coal, Iron & R. R. Co. has accorded the convicts under its care.

Very truly yours,
Walker Percy,
General Counsel, Tennesse Coal,
Iron & Railroad Company.

Dear Editor—We are having real bad weather. But it was good on corn and cotton. I guess that those that have not planted can plant now.

Mr. Clarence Ezell and Miss Mattie Lawley were married Sunday evening on Oakmulgee bridge at three o'clock.

Some of the children here have whooping cough.

Pleasant Grove sent Mr. J. R. McAfee to the Sunday School Convention.

The Methodist church has held its quarterly meeting.

We have Sunday school every Sunday and preaching every second Sunday and Saturday. I wish that the people would come to Saturday's preaching as well as all to Sunday's preaching.

Mr. Lee Lawrence is sick and has not planted his corn and cotton.

The rain is making gullies in ihe road and the mail carrier is having a real hard time of it in his little road cart.

Editor Banner. Please allow me space in your paper to say a few words in regard to what the two misses wrote in last issue. I do not know who they were, but I can say that they made a mistake about our Superintendent and Secretary being one of the best. So misses come again and don't leave the cap off, and cur the mule over.

Pine Hill, Ala., May 5, 1906.

I will be at Alpine church, if nothing prevents, the third Sunday in this month.

We are having a lot of rain, but it is needed here.

Bro. Paten filled his regular appointment here Sunday at the Methodist church.

The death angel came into our midst and taken from us little Lanore Landrum. After suffering untold agony for 39 days she fell asleep in Jesus's arms, leaving a father and mother and 4 little brothers to mourn their loss, but heaven's gain. The entire town extend to them their deepest sympathy.

Success to the Banner and its many readers.

Editor Banner. Please allow me space in your paper to say a few words in regard to what the two misses wrote in last issue. I do not know who they were, but I can say that they made a mistake about our Superintendent and Secretary being one of the best. So misses come again and don't leave the cap off, and cur the mule over.

A HUSTLER.

Pine Hill, Ala., May 5, 1906.

I will be at Alpine church, if nothing prevents, the third Sunday in this month.

We are having a lot of rain, but it is needed here.

Bro. Paten filled his regular appointment here Sunday at the Methodist church.

The death angel came into our midst and taken from us little Lanore Landrum. After suffering untold agony for 39 days she fell asleep in Jesus's arms, leaving a father and mother and 4 little brothers to mourn their loss, but heaven's gain. The entire town extend to them their deepest sympathy.

Success to the Banner and its many readers.

TOM MERONEY.

There will be a public working here Saturday, May 26, for the purpose of placing a wire fence around the cemetery. Everybody that's interested, will please be on hand.

It is possible to obtain relief from chronic indigestion and dyspepsia by the use of KODOL FOR DYSPEPSIA. Some of the most hopeless cases of long standing have yielded to it. It enables you to digest the food you eat and exercises a corrective influence, building up the efficiency of the digestive organs. The stomach is the boiler wherein the steam is made that keeps up your vitality, health and strength. Kodol digests what you eat. Makes the stomach sweet—puts the boiler in condition to do the work nature demands of it—gives you relief from digestive disorders, and puts you in shape to do your best, and feel your best. This is to notify you to appear before the Probate Court of said county at the next term thereof, commencing Monday, the 14th day of May, 1906, then and there to show cause, if any you have, why a decree for the sale of said real estate should not be made for the payment of the taxes assessed and for fees and costs. This 11th day of April, 1906.

One hundred and twenty-five women at the Society of Polictical Study in New York City, decided that nonsupport is a man's greatest sin against the marriage contract, and therefore a wife's chief cause for divorce. Despite her vaunted emancipation woman still exploits her leading-strings.

A generation ago Mr. Parton predicted that the coming man would neither smoke nor drink. Yet, laments the Philadelphia Record, the internal revenue collections of the United States Government increase apace, and instead of giving up his vices, man is reputed to have been joined by woman.

A grain and cattle merchant of Chicago predicts that nearly half a million settlers from the United States will enter Canada this year. The influence of American settlers in Canada's great Northwest is almost certain to react in favor of closer trade relations between the two countries whatever political effects it may have.

The Chicago Chronicle makes this suggestion: Why not assemble all the euthanasia cranks who wish to kill off the old and "incurable" people in one inclosure and all the cranks who are producing schemes for the abolition of death in another inclosure, organize them into football teams and then turn them loose and let them proceed to exterminate one another in true football style?

Hereafter criminals whom the law adjudges shall be killed in New Jersey will be electrocuted. This is the method of capital punishment now enforced in New York, Ohio, Massachusetts and Mississippi. There has been dispute as to the comparative suffering where death is occasioned by electrical shock and hanging, but it is a controversy that must remain unsettled. Dead men tell no tales.

The man that beats his carpets has nothing against them; he simply wants to get rid of some of the dirt that has accumulated in them; and his neighbors are not going to think that he is a filty fellow because he does this, says the Indianapolis News. We have been turning some rascals out—a mere incident. The reaction is going to be strong enough. Let us do something to be assured that we gather some substantial fruits and that all of our effort has not been "like a tale told by an idiot, full of sound and fury signifying nothing."

The sport on the diamond attracts through no side issue of the betting-book or of purses for events. Its appeal is made, declares the New York World, by the measurement of man against man in strength, skill and quickness. Men who play for Chicago or Boston one year are cheered as heartily on appearing for New York or Pittsburg another year. The game is national, the interest very human. The name on the uniform shirt stands only for local color.

The statisticians have not definitely ascertained the centre of crime, but if the lenity with which murderers are treated in Chicago determines the pre-eminence of that city as a focus of crime its title to the distinction will not be disputed, admits the Philadelphia Ledger. In an address delivered before the Chicago Medical Society recently Dr. Thomas Grant Allen declared that in six years murderers had claimed 795 victims in Chicago. Since 1900 the annual number had doubled. During this period there had been only eight legal executions.

GENERAL STATE NEWS.

Current News Garnered as It Falls From the Plant of Report.

Company Wins First of Cases.

Birmingham, Ala.—The Southern Steel Company, formerly the Alabama Steel and Wire Company, won the first of the hundred or more damage suits resulting from the explosion at Virginia Mines to be tried by a jury.

The first case where a verdict was returned by the jury was that of L. W. Huff and Katie Turner, administrator and administratrix of the estate of Steve Turner, vs. the Alabama Steel and Wire Company. At the time of the disaster the defendant company bore that name.

The plaintiffs in the first of the suits to reach a jury brought suit against the company asking for damages to the amount of $30,000 for the death of the intestate in the circuit court. The case was on trial for two weeks, a verdict being returned Saturday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock. The case went to the jury Friday afternoon about 5:30 o'clock, and Saturday morning the body asked for further from the court as to the law. They wanted to know if both the defendant and the plaintiff were guilty of negligence, could a verdict for damages be returned. Judge A. A. Coleman, presiding in the circuit court, replied in the negative.

The suit of Rochelle Nelson, administratrix, vs. the Alabama Steel and Wire Company was put on trial, but after a trial lasting two weeks the fall term of the court expired, while the hearing was still on, and the suit resulted in a mistrial.

Local members of the bar have been watching for the final result of the Huffcase with a great deal of interest.

Ryan Acquitted.

Birmingham, Ala.—Jay E. Ryan was acquitted of the charge of killing DeWitt Davis in the criminal court after a deliberation by the jury which lasted only eleven minutes.

The case went into the hands of the jury Saturday afternoon at 6:30 o'clock, and just eleven minutes later the foreman announced that a verdict had been agreed upon.

The case was on trial in the first division of the criminal court, Judge Samuel L. Weaver presiding, several days last week, and at each session of the court there were many spectators present.

Davis and Ryan were both locomotive engineers, employed by the St. Louis and San Francisco railroad. The killing occurred last September at the local round house of the Frisco system.

Stevenson Comes to Birmingham.

Birmingham, Ala.—Prof. Leon M. Stevenson, of Roanoke, one of the best known educators in Randolph county, has resigned from his duties there to accept the position of assistant editor of the Alabama Christian Advocate. He begins his new duties June 1. Professor Stevenson has the honor of being the first layman elevated to this position. For a long time the new journalist was superintendent of the city schools of Dadeville, where he acquired his reputation as a teacher. For several months there has been talk that he would enter the race for state superintendent, but he is understood to have definitely decided against this course, his health not being good enough to permit him to take part in a strenuous campaign. Many Birmingham friends will welcome him here.

New Theatre for Decatur.

Decatur, Ala.—At a meeting of the stockholders of the Lyceum Stock Company the following board of directors and officers were elected: Directors, John A. Thomason, Henry A. Skeggs, L. C. Griffitts, James A. Nelson. The following officers were elected: Thomas P. Littlejohn, president; James A. Nelson, vice-president; L. C. Griffitts, secretary; F. Lyons, treasurer. The company owns lots at the corner of Church and Canal streets, on which they will soon commence the erection of a $15,000 building, to be called the Lyceum Theatre.

Admitted to Bail.

Montgomery, Ala.—A special to the Advertiser from Pensacola, Fla., says: Will Christmas, charged with the murder of his father, Judge Christmas, the latter's wife and his stepmother and her son, near Campbellton, Fla., in February, was admitted to bail in the sum of $7,500 by Judge Francis B. Carlton in the Walker county court at De Funiak Springs.

Banks to Consolidate.

Nashville, Tenn.—A Montgomery, Ala., dispatch says that the Merchants and Planters-Farley National and the First National banks of that city are to consolidate with a capital of $1,000,000. A. M. Baldwin will be president of the consolidated banks.

Alteration in a Check.

New York.—H. L. Whaley, a salesman, was arrested charged with having presented at a bank or deposit a city warrant, which, it is alleged, had been raised from $3 to $230,000. The alterations were crudely made.

Wrecked Crew Landed.

Weymouth, Eng.—The crew of the wrecked steamer Anglo-Peruvian, numbering thirty-eight men, were landed here by the Mohawk.

Embezzlement the Charge.

Birmingham, Ala.—Charged with the embezzlement of $14,500 worth of trust funds, Benjamin P. McDonald, manager of the local office of the Goodlander Milling Company and a son of one of the leading stockholders in the company, has been lodged in the county jail, where he remains upon failure to make bond in $10,000. The arrest of McDonald created no little talk in the city, where he was well known and very popular, being a member of the Southern and other exclusive clubs, and having his residence in the fashionable South Highland section. Information is to the effect that the case will be settled out of court. McDonald is said to have lost the money in wheat speculation.

Sweeping Injunction.

Tampa, Fla.—The Jetton-Dekle Lumber Company has secured from Circuit Judge Wall an injunction restraining the American Federation of Labor, its affiliated unions, the Building Trades Council of Tampa and other union labor organizations and their members from interfering in any manner with the operations or employes of its three plants or any of its numerous contracts, and particularly against endeavoring to persuade non-union men employed by the company to cease work for contractors or workmen from using material furnished by the company. The injunction is sweeping and is intended to stop union carpenters and painters, now on strike, from interfering with the company's bringing to the city and employing non-union men.

Henry vs. Houston.

Dothan, Ala.—One Alabama county is suing another in the circuit court here, and suing for real coin of the realm with vigor and determination. Able counsel is engaged on both sides, and the case promises to be an interesting one, warmly contested from start to finish.

It seems that at the time the new county of Houston was created by action of the legislature, it being at that time a part and portion of the county of Henry, the county of Henry owed a debt, as counties usually do. After the new county had made its formal bow its repudiated parent claimed that the fledgling owed and should pay part of the debt aforesaid. This Houston county refused to do, under the contention that it did not receive from Henry any of the money in the treasury at the time of the separation, a part of which it claims it was entitled to. The sum sued for, several thousand dollars, adds to the interest of the case, which was called in the circuit court before Judge Peace and continued. It will come up for a hearing at the third or fourth week of the present term.

Heavy Damages Given.

Huntsville, Ala.—Thomas H. Steele of Jefferson county, a flagman who lost a foot on last December in a wreck near Adamsville, on the St. Louis and San Francisco railroad, has obtained a verdict in the United States court here for damages in $6,000. Robert R. Howard, conductor, lost an arm in the same accident, and was given a verdict for $12,500. Administrators of two men killed in the accident have suits here against the road asking for $30,000 each. The complainants in all these cases are represented by J. C. King, of Birmingham.

Alabama State Fair.

Birmingham, Ala.—At a meeting of the stockholders of the Alabama State Fair Association Friday night a new company, known as the Alabama Fair Grounds Company, was organized. The new company proposes to assume charge and ownership of the company and estate at present owned by the Alabama State Fair and Exhibt Association. Its first official action after its organization will be the issuance of $100,000 worth of 6 per cent bonds which will be used to put the association on a definite financial basis.

College Orators.

Birmingham, Ala.—C. E. Rice, of Birmingham, was the winner of the medal in the annual contest of the Southern Inter-Collegiate Oratorical Association, held at the University of Alabama, Tuscaloosa. His subject was "America, the Benefactor of the Nations." J. H. Cabaniss, of the university, presided at the meeting. Other speakers were: Hugh Allen Lock, Vanderbilt; Robert Richard Carman, University of Virginia; J. F. Finley, university of the South, and Robert Macey Talbert, Kentucky State College.

Odessa.—The Jewish Political Association of Southwestern Russia unanimously resolved to defer any parliamentary agitation for equality in civil and political rights until the session of parliament in the year 1907.

Paris.—The body of a man who ascended to the second landing of the Eiffel Tower and jumped off and was killed had been identified as that of August Braun, formerly a resident of Cincinnati, O.

Opening of Big Conference.

Birmingham, Ala.—The college of bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, met in the Hillman Hotel for the purpose of going over the annual message, which was read before the general conference of the church, which convened in the auditorium of the First Methodist church. Every bishop of the episcopacy was present when the conference was called to order. The session lasted throughout the day, recesses being taken for lunch and dinner.

The message was prepared by Bishop Charles B. Galloway, of Mississippi, and was quite lengthy. Embodied in it was something about every branch of the church work, together with recommendations to the general conference. It corresponds with the message prepared by the president of the United States and his cabinet members and submitted at the opening of the national house and senate. The contents are weighed and measured by the delegates to the conference and every member of the Methodist church with as much profoundness as the members of the house of representatives weigh the message of the president.

One Thousand Strike.

Chicago, Ill.—Just as the wreckers started the demolition of old structures Tuesday to make room for $6,000,000 worth of new buildings in the loop district a strike was called which promises to tie up the building industry of Chicago.

One thousand structural iron workers, following orders, dropped work Wednesday, and their idleness will precipitate the first important labor disturbance in the building trades since the 1900 lockout.

The $6,000,000 figure on proposed new buildings accounts only for improvements which follow the wrecking operations actually begun in the city's loop district. The summer promised an actual investment of $15,000,000 in new blocks.

Aside from affecting directly four-fifths of the mechanics engaged in steel and iron construction work, the strike will throw out of employment several other building workmen, such as carpenters, bricklayers, hod carriers and stonecutters.

Situation Not Encouraging.

Washington, D. C.—The Chinese government has given notice that it will open certain Manuchurian ports and interior cities to the world's trade only after it has completed the preparation of regulations for the government of the foreign colonies therein. This is understood here to mean that the opening will be conditional on the agreement by foreigners to accept their holdings on leases and not claim the right to buy their lands outright.

The active spirit in this anti-foreign movement is understood to be Tang Chao Yo, the vice-president of the board of foreign affairs, who, by reason of his education in America and his graduation from Yale, is thoroughly acquainted with modern foreign methods.

Private advices received here from China relative to the anti-American boycott in China are discouraging, and it is even predicted that the worst is to follow; that, owing to the accumulation of enormous stocks of unsold American goods at the ports of entry, the full effects of the boycott will not be felt until next autumn.

Sensational Shooting Affair.

Birmingham, Ala.—A most sensational shooting affray took place in the Peerless saloon, corner of Second avenue and Nineteenth street, the most prominent corner of the city, between Thomas O. Hewlett and Harry Haynes, two men who have been identified with the gambling interests of this city for some time. When the smoke had cleared away Hewlett was found to be dead! John T. Shugart, a well-known criminal lawyer and former legislator was fatally wounded in the abdomen; Frank Lee was shot in a finger; Linton Poss was shot in the foot, and another men was shot in the leg. Haynes was not injured.

City Detective George Bodeker, who was just across the street at the time, ran into the place and arrested Haynes without trouble. Haynes had a pistol in his hands and one in his pocket. He offered no resistance and appeared calm. He had not been drinking, it is claimed.

It seems that there has been bad feelings between Hewlett and Haynes for some time. A gambling house in which Haynes was said to be interested was closed by constant raiding by the police, while the Alabama Club, in which Hewlett was said to be interested, was not raided. It was generally understood that when the two men would meet there would be trouble.

Fire in Meridian.

Meridian, Miss.—Wednesday morning at 3 o'clock fire completely destroyed the double building, three stories high, occupied by the retail department and part of the wholesale department of the Winner-Klein Company, entailing a loss of over $100,000. The entire stock was destroyed and the building gutted, after which the high winds crushed the walls like an egg shell.

NOTICE TO DELINQUENT TAXPAYERS.

THE list being of extraordinary length this year, it will be found on pages 2 and 3 of this issue. It is worthy the attention of all real estate owners, the great proportion of the list being addressed to "Owner Unknown."

Hon. Edward D. Smith, president of the South Carolina division of the Southern Cotton Association, will deliver an address in Clanton next Thursday, May 17, to those interested in the cotton question.

IN another place will be found a letter from the General Counsel of the Tennessee Coal & Iron Company, in which an explanation is given of the statement made by "Citizen" in last week's Banner. We regret exceedingly that such a statement should be necessary, and urge upon correspondents the necessity of being more particular in their observations. That no reflection upon the T. C. I & R. R. Co. was intended, we are satisfied, but with the principle involved, that of getting the most money for our convicts, irrespective of their treatment, we are at one with "Citizen." For a period of nearly eighteen years, we have been acquainted with the convict system of Alabama, and during that time do not recollect any complaint of the T. C. I. & R. R. Co

DEMOCRATIC EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

THE Democratic Executive Committee held an interesting meeting last Saturday at which the resignation of Tipton Mullins, as chairman, was accepted, and John C. Dennis was elected to the vacant position. W. T. Callen was elected as member from Beat 4.

After some discussion it was decided to hold a mass meeting for the purpose of making nominations. There was no dissatisfaction at the primary, but it was conceded that the people of Chilton county should have an opportunity to nominate and elect their own officials, and that in this way every white man can make his voice heard and vote felt. Every man can enter this meeting and work and vote for the men of his choice.

The following resolutions were passed:

Whereas the purpose of all government is the greatest good to the greatest number, and whereas this has been since the days of Thomas Jefferson, the grand purpose of the Democratic party, and whereas peace and good will to all men, and especially to the people of Chilton county, is the object of Democracy, and whereas many of our people who believe in the principles of Democracy are now affiliating with the Republican party, and whereas it is well known to all men that the object for which the Democratic party was originally organized, to-wit: The greatest good to the greatest number, can never be accomplished through any other party than the Democratic party.

Resolved, That it is the sense of the Democratic Executive Committee that a mass meeting of the people of Chilton county be held, in which all white men are invited to participate, for the purpose of making nominations for the several offices to be filled at the coming election.

Resolved 2d, That the date of the mass meeting be left for future consideration, governed by the call of the chairman of the Democratic Executive Committee.

Resolved, That we appreciate the expressions of the press and citizens in different parts of the State suggesting that Judge S. M. Adams become a candidate for Commissioner of Agriculture and Industries, and that should he decide to enter the race we pledge him our active support, and we heartily commend Judge Adams to the Democratic voters of the State as a capable, honest and courageous man and Democrat.

Resolved, That we favor the nomination of Judge Dowdell as one of the associate justices of the Supreme Court of Alabama, and especially because he was elected to a term of six years and, under a new law, drew by lot a term of two years.

HON. DAVID O. ROBINSON

Benefitted by Vinol After all Other Medicines Had Failed.

The Hon. David O. Robinson, County Treasurer of Frankfort, Ky., writes, "I was very much run down from overwork, and suffered from indigestion and a severe nervous trouble. The medicines prescribed all failed to help me, and I could not take cod liver oil or emulsions, as the greasy mixtures upset my stomach. One of our county officials, told me about your delicious cod liver preparation, Vinol, and what it had done for him. I decided to try it, and in a remarkably short time I was a well man. Vinol built me up, cured my stomach and nervous trouble and I have not been so well for years."

A member of the Upchurch Drug co. says, "Vinol cures conditions like this because it positively contains in a highly concentrated form all of the vitality making and body building properties of cod liver oil actually taken from fresh cods' livers, and without a drop of oil to upset the stomach and retard its work.

"We ask every run down, nervous, debilitated, aged or weak person in Clanton, and every person suffering from stubborn colds, hanging on coughs, bronchitis or incipient consumption to try Vinol on our guarantee to return your money if it fails to give satisfaction." Upchurch Drug co.

IN MEMORIAM.

At her home near Lomax, toward the close of the eve, May 1, 1906, the white soul of Miss Sallie Knight was freed from its earthly tenement of clay and took its flight for the home above, not made with hands, eternal in the heavens. Though the nine weary months of suffering she has passed through many pains and sorrows, she never murmured, but with meek submission to the heavenly Father's will accepted the cross with angelic patience and with unwavering faith carried her burden to Jesus, the source of all strength. For two long weary days and nights she called mama and papa, who have crossed over some months ago, but God in His majestic power saw that she had suffered long enough and when at three o'clock He called her to summon death's warning she raised her hands toward heaven and said, "Mama and papa," and then her sweet spirit passed away and the tired body and weary heart sank into a deep peaceful sleep, with a look of sweet peace on her face as if it were the shadow of angel's wings. Her brother who came home tired and weary from the troubles of this world found their home a heaven of rest where the white winged dove of peace ever hovers and love with shining eyes welcomed them. But soon the grim reaper laid his hand upon her and after many months of patient suffering the roses in her cheeks faded into the white lillies of death; the little hands, so quick to do love's bidding, were clasped over the silent breast, and the tired eyes were closed to open again with enraptured gaze upon the beauties of the heavenly land.

A soul has accomplished the great mission of this life when it has gained life eternal. Why should we grieve that she has gone to receive the heritage given her by her Father with the bloom of youth fresh upon her? God in His infinite love wants all His children to come home.

To those of her immediate relatives and friends who are most heart stricken at the loss of this dear sister, we have nothing of this world's consolation to offer, we do not feel that we could speak any words that would ease your aching hearts or fill the vacancy of this dear one, we can only deeply, sincerely and most affectionately sympathize with those in their afflictive bereavements, but in the beautiful spirit of the Christian's theology, we dare say that He who tempers the wind to the shorn lamb, looks down with infinite compassion upon the fatherless in the hour of their desolation and that the same benevolent Saviour who wept tears at the grave in Bethany, will fold the arms of His love and protection around those who put their trust in Him. So let us each in our respective lives so improve this solemn warning of our God that at last when the great white throne we see and the record of our lives is opened, we may receive from the eternal Judge the thrilling innovation, "Come ye, blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world." LUCY JONES.

Editor Banner: Will you please allow me space in your valuable paper to say a few words about my visit to Liberty, in Autauga county, the last Saturday and Sunday in April. It was the most pleasant trip I have taken in quite awhile. The farmers were all up with their crops, and waiting for it to rain before they do any more work in their crops. They all seem to be as cheerful as if holidays were here, especially Mr. P. T.

If they are waiting on the rain, they are not waiting on their Sunday school at all, they are carring it on just the same, big, old and young are taking great interest in their Sunday school, and the children are preparing for a childrens' day. Their recitations are among the best I have ever heard. The great day will be in the future and I will come again in time to warn you of the joyful event. As I wish to write again soon I will close for this time. J. J.

Does Your Heart Beat

Yes. 100,000 times each day. Does it send out good blood or bad blood? You know, for good blood is good health; bad blood, bad health. And you know precisely what to take for bad blood—Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Doctors have endorsed it for 60 years.

One frequent cause of bad blood is a sluggish liver. This produces constipation. Poisonous substances are then absorbed into the blood, instead of being removed from the body daily as nature intended. Keep the bowels open with Ayer's Pills, liver pills. All vegetable.

BEAUTY MORE THEN SKIN DEEP.

A Good Complexion Must Come From Within

The natural desire of every ambitious woman is to have a clear skin and a beautiful complexion. Not every woman can be a Diana or Juno, but the beauty of freshness and the bloom of a clear skin are within the reach of every woman who will make the effort.

It is all a matter of intelligent trying. If the bowels are inactive, if the liver is not working properly, if the poisonous waste and refuse are not expelled promptly from the system the complexion is sure to show the effects.

The only right way to remove pimples, moth spots and blotches and clear up a muddy, cloudy complexion is to go right to the root of the trouble with the proper remedy.

The one remedy that will cure constipation, improve the complexion, brighten the eyes, tone up the liver, cure sick headache and insure a clear, velvety skin is Laxakola Tonic Tablets.

To inspire confidence, and to protect both you and the druggist, we have issued a Guarantee Contract to Florence Drug co., authorizing them to pay back the 25 cents if the tablets do not benefit you as claimed.

Riderville.

Mr. Clyde Moore and wife are visiting Mr. John Reynolds this week.

Mr. Arthur Martin and Miss Sallie Gay were joined in the holy bonds of matrimony, Sunday at 11:30 a.m., Rev. P. G. Maness performing the ceremony. May God be with the young couple.

The Sunday school convention was held at Valley Creek, April 29, and a large attendance was there and all reported a nice time.

One was trying to sell his property and move to Arizona, but after using New Discovery a short time he found it unnecessary to do so. I regard Dr. King's New Discovery as the most wonderful remedy in existence." Surest Cough and Cold cure and Throat and Lung healer. Guaranteed by Upchurch Drug co. 50c and $1. Trial bottle free.

IMPROVED CONDITIONS AT SAN FRANCISCO

Removing Wreck and Ruin Left by Earthquake and Fire.

RIGID ECONOMY WITH RATIONS

Actual Rebuilding of the City Has Begun—The Mayor Says There Should Be No Break in the Relief Movement—Underground Chinatown Amazes the Police—Other California Towns Preparing to Reconstruct—The Insane Asylum Horror.

San Francisco.—The loss of some 300 lives and the devastation of almost four square miles of the best part of San Francisco have now been written in history, and every one is confident for rapid progress in the rebuilding of a greater and better city.

The actual beginning of the disentanglement of the earthquake and fire stricken town from its disordered condition is on and the work of reconstruction will proceed rapidly from this time. On many sides are visible indications of the determination of merchants to resume business. Gangs of men with teams are excavating for foundations in numerous vacant lots, and in other places the removal of debris is well under way.

The streets are early thronged with laborers on their way to the burned district, where they are cleaning up. The boats from cities across bay and local electric cars from suburbs are packed with workingmen.

In many places advertisements are posted on walls seeking laborers, and there inquiries for men are met with numerous responses from heads of families who are willing to take any kind of labor.

Relief work was continued on a large scale, under General Greely, and with a closer check than ever against waste and against the unworthy. Distribution of food to the homeless is being made on the army ration plan, as evolved by General Greely, and the output of supplies was lessened so that twenty-one days' food is now in sight.

With no immediate prospect that conditions will be so normalized that the community will be able to feed and take care of itself for several weeks, the citizens' committee has begun to evolve some way to provide against a failure of supplies. Mayor Schmitz informed the general committee that 700 carloads of food and supplies had been distributed since April 18, and transportation lines had information of only 108 cars on the way.

"If," said the Mayor, "this information is correct; we will soon be worse off than we were a week ago. If the information has gone abroad through the country that we are amply supplied it is most unfortunate, for it is apparent that we are not. It is not even known how much money we can depend upon with which to purchase supplies, for you have heard from Mr. Phelan, on several occasions, that part at least of this money subscribed by individuals or companies in the East is disbursed through private agents here.

"While it is true that contributions of money will be very much more to the purpose than contributions of supplies, it should be made known to the world if the one is not available the other will be most gratefully received."

Chairman Phelan made a gloomy speech, in which he said that the Rockefeller and Standard Oil contributions were being distributed through Standard Oil agents, and that probably many other heavy contributions which had been put down to the credit of the committee might be distributed in the same way. "We have but $518,000 of real money," said he, "though funds placed to our credit in all parts of the country total $5,500,000."

Clothing and bedding sent will prove of the greatest value. One of the chief needs now in the relief camps is for women's and children's warm clothing. Thousands are wearing the clothing they escaped from the fire in. No material of this kind will be wasted.

In the future food will not be given able-bodied males in San Francisco with a view to forcing them to go to work. Luxuries will be given only to those who are ill.

The exodus of San Franciscans has lightened the drafts on the food supplies to a large extent. According to a Southern Pacific official 200,000 of the population of this city have left and the Southern Pacific Company has carried 50,000 persons to points east of Ogden since April 18.

In order to reduce the expenses of the army at San Francisco as much as possible, so as to have more funds for the relief of the earthquake sufferers, General Greely has decided that 1000 additional troops will be enough to take care of the situation. General Bell sent General Greely full information as to what has been done with the $2,500,000 appropriated by Congress. It is estimated that $500,000 of this fund is still unexpended.

The American Red Cross forwarded $300,000 by wire to James D. Phelan, Chairman of the Red Cross and Relief Committee. Mr. Phelan was advised that $1,000,000 more is at the disposal of the committee.

Reports from the refugee camps and hospitals show an astonishingly small percentage of sickness and the fear of threatened epidemics has been buried, it is hoped, for all time.

The water supply is getting better every day, and in several sections of the saved districts the force of water in the faucets is almost as strong as it was before the big fire.

Estimates prepared for General Greely show that 7000 tons of food were distributed free in San Francisco during the first ten days. The daily cost of relief was about $130,000.

The figures show that considerably more than enough to feed the city has been given out. The number of persons who still require relief is 200,000. It is expected that before long free food will be supplied only to women, children and sick and feeble men.

One of the best signs that order is rapidly arising out of chaos is the extension of the telegraph, telephone and street car system. The Southern Pacific Railway has obtained its temporary franchise to run tracks into the city for the disposal of debris.

It is now known that the wholesale or heavier valued district in the lower part of the city suffered the most severely from earthquakes, while the heaviest damage from official dynamiting and back firing occurred in the banking and insurance district along Van Ness avenue. Both of these questions are important factors in determining the losses. From several sources of information it would seem that the earthquake damage involved is fully forty per cent. and that of dynamite twenty per cent. of the entire destruction.

There are 108 companies interested in the San Francisco disaster, and it is now predicted by conservative insurance men here that within thirty days twenty-eight of them will be out of business. Five already have gone under and the remaining twenty-three are in danger.

Now that underground Chinatown is exposed, the police, who thought that they had a good idea of the ramifications there, are astonished at the revelations. No family of rodents ever tunnelled more persistently nor ingeniously than did the denizens of this quarter. So complete was the chain of subways that every part of Chinatown had its underground exit. The main arteries have been traced as far as Kearney street on the south and Powell street on the north, a distance of three blocks. The tunnels extend under the streets. This subterranean maze explains the mysterious escapes of Chinese criminals and the failure of many a raid upon fantan games or slave dens.

Probably no other class of professional men suffered so severely as the physicians, more than 1000 of whom had their offices in the burned district. Few saved even so much as a scalpel. Not only have their libraries, instruments, records of personal research and office paraphernalia been destroyed, but the diplomas, without which they cannot practice in another State, have drifted to the four winds.

The Oakland refugee camps are being deserted at a rapid rate. The only hindrance to more rapid evacuation being the difficulty of getting money for transportation from friends and relatives at other points. The mails are congested, the express companies nearly swamped with business and the telegraph companies working every available end of communication to handle the enormous mass of business.

H. J. Kinney, formerly of Hot Springs, Ark., has been released under a pardon from Oakland prison, following his transfer from the Government prison at Alcatraz Island. He was arrested on the first day of the fire for having drawn a revolver in order to compel an automobilist to carry his wife, children and two injured women to a place of safety. The policeman who made the arrest misunderstood the situation, and Kinney languished in prison for ten days before he got some one sufficiently interested to seek a pardon for him.

The conditions following the earthquake at the State Hospital for the Insane at Agnews, in Santa Clara County, have yet to be fully told.

Desperate maniacs were liberated by the crumbling of the walls, and with no other means of detention at hand, many of them had to be tied to trees like wild beasts.

Several inmates escaped during the excitement, but were recaptured and are housed in the San Jose jail. The 100 most dangerous have been sent to Stockton. One hundred and one bodies have been taken from the ruins.

As for the remainder, Agnews now resembles a tented city. About 850 are being cared for on the lawns. The grounds are roped off into two sections. On one side the women live in their tents, and the men have a little town on the other side of the intervening ropes.

OTHER TOWNS WILL REBUILD

Earthquake Damage Outside of San Francisco to Be Repaired at Once.

Bakersfield, Cal.—The rest of the State is following the lead of San Francisco and getting ready to rebuild and go at it again.

The cities which have the most to do are San Jose and Santa Rosa. The damage at other points is not excessive; perhaps Salinas is the next heaviest sufferer.

There the Spreckles sugar factory, which was twisted out of shape by the earthquake, has begun an addition which will cost $250,000. Damage was heavier at Hollister, one of the oldest towns in northern California and the county seat of San Benito, than was reported at first. It is estimated at half a million.

To Reward Army Heroes.

Washington, D. C. — President Roosevelt has called upon the War and Navy Department to report the names of the officers and enlisted men of the Marine Corps and army who displayed special gallantry in checking the San Francisco fire by the use of dynamite; this with a view to their reward and commendation.

STANDARD OIL FLAYED IN PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

Secret Rebates and Huge Unlawful Profits Vigorously Attacked by Roosevelt and Prosecutions Promised.

COMMISSIONER GARFIELD'S FINDINGS

Monopoly Built Up by Railroads—Trust Benefits Enormously From "Unjust and Illegal Rates," and Has Advantage Over Independents Even in Open Rates—Passage of Rate Bill and Correction of Humphrey Decision Urged.

Washington, D. C.—Flagrant and persistent violation of the law by the Standard Oil Company, its enormous profits from unlawful secret rates by which it has been enabled to bleed the public of still greater profits, and the connivance of railroads in violation of the law, are laid bare by President Roosevelt in his message to Congress, based on the report of James R. Garfield, Commissioner of Corporations, of his investigation of Standard Oil, which is transmitted with the message.

In the message the President renews his suggestion for Governmental supervision and control of railroads. He declares it necessary not only for the protection of the public, but for the protection of the railroads themselves.

The investigation disclosed, as the President points out, that up to the time when it was begun the Standard Oil Trust profited to the extent of at least $750,000 a year from secret rebates from railroads. In addition it was favored by open rates in all competitive fields.

President Roosevelt declares in effect that the great corporations known as trusts have the railroads at their mercy.

In the President's message and the Garfield report the officials of the Standard Oil Company are accused of lying, of crushing out competition by unlawful means, of obtaining monopolies by secret understandings with railroads, and of practically all of the crimes that have been alleged against the great trust.

The President's only recommendations in his message are that the immunity law be corrected, that the free alcohol bill be passed, which would be a set-back for the Standard, and that the further exploitation by the trusts of coal and oil lands owned by the Government be prevented.

The message is, in part, as follows:

"A very striking result of the investigation has been that shortly after the discovery of these secret rates by the Commissioner of Corporations the major portion of them were promptly corrected by the railroads, so that the most of them have now been done away with. This immediate correction, partial or complete, of the evil of the secret rates is, of course, on the one hand an acknowledgement that they were wrong, and yet were persevered in until exposed; and on the other hand a proof of the efficiency of the work that has been done by the Bureau of Corporations.

"The Department of Justice will take up the question of instituting prosecutions in at least certain of the cases. But it is most desirable to enact into law the bill introduced by Senator Knox to correct the interpretation of the immunity provision rendered in Judge Humphrey's decision. The hands of the Government have been greatly strengthened in securing an effective remedy by the recent decision of the Supreme Court in the case instituted by the Government against the Tobacco Trust, which decision permits the Government to examine the books and records of any corporation engaged in interstate commerce; and by the recent conviction and punishment of the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad and certain of its officers.

"But in addition to these secret rates the Standard Oil profits immensely by open rates, which are so arranged as to give it an overwhelming advantage over its independent competitors. The refusal of the railroads in certain cases to pro-rate produces analogous effects. Thus in New England the refusal of certain railway systems to pro-rate has resulted in keeping the Standard Oil in absolute monopolistic control of the field, enabling it to charge from three to four hundred thousand dollars a year more to the consumers of oil in New England than they would have had to pay had the price paid been that obtaining in the competitive fields."

The message continues:

"It is not possible to put into figures the exact amount by which the Standard profits through the gross favoritism shown it by the railroads in connection with the open rates. The profit, of course, comes not merely by the saving in the rate itself as compared with its competitors, but by the higher prices it is able to charge, and (even without reference to these higher prices) by the complete control of the market which it secures, thereby getting the profit on the whole consumption.

"It is unfortunately not true," states the President, "that the Standard Oil is the only great corporation which is benefiting in wholly improper fashion. The Attorney-General's investigation tends to show that the Sugar Trust rarely, if ever, pays the lawful rate."

On the subject of curbing monopolies, the message says:

"The argument is sometimes advanced against conferring upon some Governmental body the power of supervision and control over interstate commerce that to do so tends to weaken individual initiative. Investigations such as this conclusively disprove any such allegation. On the contrary, the proper play for individual initiative can only be secured by such Governmental supervision as will curb those monopolies which crush out all individual initiative. The railroad itself cannot without such Government aid protect the interests of its own stockholders as against one of these great corporations loosely known as trusts.

"The Government should have power by its agents," the President maintains, "to examine into the conduct of the railways—that is, the examiners, under the direction of the Interstate Commerce Commission, should be able to examine as thoroughly into the affairs of the railroad as bank examiners now examine into the affairs of banks."

In conclusion the President writes:

"Though not bearing upon the question of railroad rates, there are two measures of consideration of which is imperatively suggested by the submission of this report. The Standard Oil Company has, largely by unfair, or unlawful methods, crushed out home competition. It is highly desirable that an element of competition should be introduced by the passage of some such law as that which has already passed the House, putting alcohol used in the arts and manufactures upon the free list. Furthermore, the time has come when no oil or coal lands held by the Government, either upon the public domain proper or in territory owned by the Indian tribes, should be alienated. The fee to such lands should be kept in the United States Government, whether or not the profits arising from it are to be given to any Indian tribe, and the lands should be leased only on such terms and for such periods as will enable the Government keep entire control thereof.

"THEODORE ROOSEVELT."

Commissioner Garfield's Report.

Commissioner Garfield, in his report, classes the more important forms of discrimination in favor of the Standard by the railroads, under the heads of secret and semi-secret rates, discriminations in the open arrangement of rates, discriminations in classifications and rules of shipment and discriminations in treatment of private tank cars. He says:

Not only has this resulted in great pecuniary advantage in transportation cost to the Standard, but it has had the far more important effect of giving that company practically unassailable monopolistic control of the oil market throughout large sections of the country.

The manufacture of refined oil, commonly known as kerosene, is about 26,000,000 barrels annually, of which the Standard Oil Company directly and indirectly controls about 23,000,000. It also controls approximately the same proportion of the other finished products of petroleum.

In the full report submitted the commission reaches these conclusions:

"The general result of the investigation has been to disclose the existence of numerous and flagrant discriminations by the railroads in behalf of the Standard Oil Company and its affiliated corporations. With comparatively few exceptions, mainly of other large concerns in California, the Standard has been the sole beneficiary of such discriminations. In almost every section of the country that company has been found to enjoy some unfair advantages over its competitors, and some of these discriminations affect enormous areas."

Many of the secret rates discovered by the Bureau of Corporations have applied only on shipments of oil wholly within single States. Standard Oil which controls refineries in twelve States, is obviously in a position to make extensive use of such intrastate rates, or as they are ordinarily designed, State rates.

For the purpose of more effectively concealing the secret rates given to the Standard Oil, railroads in several important cases, Mr. Garfield finds, have used peculiar methods of billing.

A most careful review of the facts and the explanations leads to the following conclusion:

The Standard Oil Company has habitually received from the railroads and is now receiving secret rates and other unjust and illegal discriminations.

Oil is from two to five cents higher in non-competitive than in competitive fields.

The monopolistic control extends from the well of the producer to the doorstep of the consumer.

The New York Central alone of the railroads refused to give access to its records of State rates.

These discriminations have been so long continued, so secret, so ingeniously applied to new conditions of trade, and so large in amount as to make it certain that they were due to concerted action by the Standard and the railroads.

The Standard Oil Company is receiving unjust discrimination in open rates.

The New England territory has been in control of the Standard Oil by reason of the refusal of the New Haven and Boston and Maine to pro-rate—i. e., to join in through rates—on oil shipped from west of the Hudson, and by means of the adjustment of published rates.

The Standard Oil has maintained absolute control of almost the whole section of the country south of the Ohio and east of the Mississippi by means of secret rates and open discriminations.

Case after case is cited in Commissioner Garfield's report to prove that the Standard is still receiving secret and unlawful rebates and rates, although the officials of the trust declared at the beginning of the investigation that the Standard was not receiving such discriminations.

INDIANS WIN $4,000,000

Government Must Pay For Removal of the Cherokees.

Fifty Thousand Redmen Benefit by Largest Private Claim Ever Allowed Against the United States.

Washington, D. C.—The responsibility for the payment of the expenses of the removal of the Cherokee Indians from the Eastern States to the Indian Territory, more than half a century ago, has been decided by the Supreme Court of the United States to rest with the Government. By this decision the largest private claim ever allowed against the United States Government was awarded. It will distribute $4,589,588 among the Eastern Cherokees, who number about 50,000 persons. Nearly all of this money will go to residents of Indian Territory.

The opinion was handed down by Chief Justice Fuller, and affirmed the decision of the Court of Claims with slight modifications. These expenses were charged to the Cherokee treaty fund and the Indians alleged that this was improperly done. The question of interest on the payments also was raised. The judgment of the Court of Claims was in favor of the Cherokees and against the United States, and called for the payment of about $4,000,000. The case has received much attention from Congress and in the courts.

The modification in the decision of the Court of Claims, which was made by the Supreme Court, consisted in cutting out the old settlers or Western Cherokees, thus giving the entire sum awarded to the Eastern Cherokees, who did not remove from their homes in North Carolina, Georgia and Tennessee until 1838. Robert L. Owen, who is an Indian and represented the Eastern Cherokees, said that originally there were about sixteen thousand of them, but that their descendants number about fifty thousand. The award will be divided among them after expenses are paid.

The original claim was for $1,111,284, but the award carries an allowance of interest since 1838. The money used in the removal was part of a fund growing out of the sale of the Eastern lands of the Indians and held in trust for them. The Government especially resisted the allowance of interest, but it was overruled. The old settlers were cut out because the court found that they had heretofore been fully reimbursed for their share of the expenditures from the trust funds. The decision provides for a per capita payment to the Cherokees who remain in North Carolina, Tennessee and other Southern States. There are about six thousand of them. They asked for one-fourth of the entire award.

Mr. Owens will receive a fee of fifteen per cent. of the award, the largest ever allowed in a Supreme Court case.

PARIS MOBS IN CHECK.

Minor Riots on May Day—Troops Preventing a Serious Outbreak.

Paris.—May Day was a day of high nervous tension and considerable excitement, but there has been no organized movement which by any possibility could be described as revolutionary.

There were perhaps 100,000 persons on the streets in the character of manifestants and some of them suffered severely at the hands of the police and soldiers, but there was no concerted purpose on the part of the mob, and curiosity was the principal motive for the presence of a large majority of the crowd. About a thousand disorderly persons were arrested.

The workmen, on the whole, were orderly, and, barring a few hotheads, confined their demonstrations to wearing scraps of pasteboard on their hats or collars with the inscription: "A day of eight hours' work and a Sunday holiday."

BABY AND MOTHER DROWN.

Mrs. Scheibner Leaped Off the Pier to Save Her Little Son.

New York City. — Mrs. Marcus Scheibner and Jacob, her two-year-old son, were drowned in the East River off the foot of Tenth street. Mr. Scheibner is a Jewish lecturer.

Mrs. Scheibner, her husband and two children, the second one a boy of seven years old, went to the pier at the foot of East Tenth street to spend an hour or two.

Little Jacob ventured too near the edge of the pier and slipped into the water. Mrs. Scheibner, with a cry of horror, ran to the pier's edge. She saw her baby swirling in an eddy and being carried from the pier. She stood dazed for an instant, and then leaped into the river after little Jacob. Both were drowned.

She had been in ill health for several weeks and her mind had failed. She declared God had forgotten her and had neglected to call her. Mrs. McKittrick was born in County Kildare, Ireland, March 17, 1798. The fact of her birth is duly recorded in the parish register, and the authenticity of her age is well established. She was eighty years old when she came to America.

Origin of Familiar Sea Terms.

There is hardly a language which has not been called upon to provide at least one of the curious sea terms which are in constant use and whose origin is so obscure.

For instance, says the Marine Journal, the word "admiral" is not of English origin, but is from the Arabic "Emil el Bagh," or Lord of the Sea. Captain comes from the Latin caput, but mate is from Icelandic, and means a companion or equal. Coxswain is a word whose derivation would never be guessed. The coxswain was originally the man who pulled the after oar in the captain's boat, which was known as the cockboat. This in turn in a corruption of the word coracle, a small round boat used on the Wye and Usk rivers. So coxswain comes to us from the Welsh.

Commodore is not so difficult to trace to its beginning. It is simply the Italian commandatore, meaning commander. No such person as Davy Jones ever existed, though we often hear of him and his locker. One should speak of "Duffy Jonah's locker," for that was the original. Duffy is the West Indian name for spirit or ghost, while Jonah refers, of course, to the prophet.

Another curious case of a term gradually corrupted out of its original form is the dog watch. It was originally the "dodge watch," because it lasted only two hours instead of four, and this makes it possible that the same men shall not be on duty every day during the same hours.

Then there is the "sheet anchor," the name given to the largest anchor carried by a vessel It is really "shote anchor," and is so called because of its great weight, which makes it easy to shoot out in case of emergency.

Instead of the terms "port" and "starboard," which are used nowadays, they used to talk of "larboard" and "starboard." Starboard has nothing in common with stars, but is really the Anglo-Saxon "steer board" for "steer side," because in all galleys which were steered by an oar the oar was fixed somewhat to the right hand side of the stern, and the helmsman held the inboard portion in his right hand. "Larboard" was probably a corruption of lower board, the larboard side being inferior to the other.

The "jury mast" has nothing in common with a jury except its derivation from the same word, "jour," the French word meaning day. The jury mast is one which is put up temporarily—for a day—just as a jury in its legal term meant a tribunal summoned for a short period only.

Struck by Lightning.

Mrs. Nancy Cleary, of Brewers, N. C., suffered as if struck by lightning. She says: "I was almost paralyzed from my waist down and my back hurt me constantly, from female troubles. I had headache, seemed always tired, and felt as if I was dying. I took wine of Cardui, which cured me, and now I feel like a new person." Cardui relieves periodical pain, and makes sick women well. $1.00 at drug stores.

Norwegian Heirlooms.

Among the marriage customs in Norway one of the quaintest is the presentation of a pair of spoons—wooden or silver, according to the position of the family—to the bride and bridegroom of the day. These spoons are connected with each other by means of a chain and are generally adorned with mottoes or appropriate proverbs. Many of them have been handed down from one generation to another and are looked upon as heirlooms. They are inscribed with such maxims as "A soft answer turneth away wrath" and "Good food satisfied hunger." Another heirloom which is much valued in Norway is the silver "peg tankard" used for fetes or weddings. This is often richly chased and decorated with the arms of the country, while tiny silver pegs placed at regular intervals one above the other in the inside of the cup indicate the draft which in olden times was supposed to be taken by each guest without drawing a breath.

Brazil's military peace footing consists of 28,000 [illegible] and she possesses twelve naval [illegible] manned by 3,800 sailors. Argentina has a standing army of about 120,000 men, while her navy consists of forty-five vessels, manned by 5,000 men.

AN EVERY-DAY STRUGGLE.

Men and Women of Every Occupation Suffer Miseries From Kidney Complaints.

J. C. Lightner, 708 So. Cedar St., Abilene, Kansas, is one of the thousands who suffer from kidney troubles brought on by daily work. "I first noticed it eight or ten years ago," said Mr. Lightner. "The dull pain in the back fairly made me sick. It was hard to get up or down, hard to straighten, hard to do any work that brought a strain on the back. I had frequent attacks of gravel and the urine was passed too often and with pain. When I used Doan's Kidney Pills, however, all traces of the trouble disappeared and have not returned. I am certainly grateful."

Rainfall and Tree Growth.

A report has recently been published which shows how closely the growth of trees is dependent upon rainfall. Not only was this seen in the case of one and two-year-old trees, but in an investigation extending over a period of twelve years, during which time the annual rings of growth were carefully examined. With an annual precipitation of from thirty to thirty-five inches a width of ring was produced varying from .11 to .35 inch. If on the other hand, there was either an unusually large or small rainfall in any given year this was followed by a corresponding tree growth in the following year.

RUNNING SORES ON LIMBS.

Little Girl's Obstinate Case of Eczema—Mother Says: "Cuticura Remedies a Household Standby."

"Last year, after having my little girl treated by a very prominent physician for an obstinate case of eczema, I resorted to the Cuticura Remedies, and was so well pleased with the almost instantaneous relief afforded that we discarded the physician's prescription and relied entirely on the Cuticura Soap, Cuticura Ointment and Cuticura Pills. When we commenced with the Cuticura Remedies her feet and limbs were covered with running sores. In about six weeks we had her completely well, and there has been no recurrence of the trouble. We find that the Cuticura Remedies are a valuable household standby, living as we do twelve miles from a doctor, and where it costs from twenty to twenty-five dollars to come up on the mountain. Mrs. Lizzie Vincent Thomas, Fairmount, Walden's Ridge, Tenn., Oct. 13, 1905."

In Buenos Ayres horse racing is a social institution, as much so as the Spanish bull fight. All the elite, from the president and his cabinet down, attend the meeting, although the races are invariably held on Sunday. The jockey club is quite as modern and luxurious and exclusive as in London or Paris, and the initiation fee is three times as much. The club takes a small percentage of all bets made, and it is said that nearly $15,000,000 is yearly wagered on this "sport of kings."

A Strange Story.

Mrs. Isaac W. Austill of Chestnut Ridge, N. C., tells a strange story of great suffering. "I was in bad condition for months," she writes, "under treatment of doctors, but got no relief. My periods had stopped, all but the pain. After taking part of a bottle of Wine of Cardui, nature worked properly and without pain. I advise all suffering women to use Cardui." A pure specific remedy for women's ills. $1.00, at druggists.

Fearless South African Birds.

Birds are said to be much more tame and confiding in South Africa than they are at home, probably because there they are much less molested.

The Cape swallow often builds in the living room of the up-country Boer, fastening its nest to some part of the roof timber. The Boer, whose house is usually haunted by a plague of flies, not only tolerates the swallows, but encourages them. The swallows on their part wage constant warfare upon the swarms of flies, and flit constantly in and out, hawking about the chamber with a perfect fearlessness quite delightful to see.

Among other South African birds which manifest this wonderful tameness is the Cape wagtail, which not only penetrates to the living room in search of flies, but will pick them from the old Boer's veldschoens as he sits on his stoop and perch about his chair.—Country Life.

It was a terrible torture that Mrs. Gertie McFarland of King's Mountain, N. C., describes, as follows: "I suffered dreadful periodical pain, and became so weak I was given up to die, when my husband got me Wine of Cardui. The first dose gave relief, and with 3 bottles I am up doing my work. I cannot say enough in praise of Cardui." A wonderful remedy for women's ills. At druggists, $1.00.

An Interesting Letter.

Mary Bagguley of 117 Peach St., Syracuse, N. Y., writes to tell of the terrible suffering of her sister, who for the past 24 years, has been tormented with side ache from female trouble, keeping her weak and ailing. "She took Wine of Cardui and is now well. Cardui has been a God send to us both," she writes. For all women's troubles, Cardui is a safe, efficient, reliable remedy. At druggists $1.00.

Blessing the Beasts.

A quaint ceremony is witnessed in parts of Normandy twice a year. It is the "blessing of the beasts." The cows, asses and a few thoroughbred horses which are raised in that part of France are brought together in front of the church, whence issues a procession of gayly dressed peasants to the sound of a chant sung by the priest and people. Then the pastor sprinkles a few drops of water on the head of each animal. Sometimes as many as a couple of hundred peasants take part in the ceremony, but not a trace of levity is to be seen on their faces. When the ceremony is completed the procession passes through the village singing, and then disperses.

In the eye socket of a skull of a huge mastodon unearthed in the forty-three Gold Run claim, near Dawson, last month, was found gravel that washed $1,600 in gold.

Perils of a Diver.

After recovering the sheet anchor of the British battleship Cumberland, which had sunk in twenty-two fathoms of water in the Mediterranean, a diver rose to the surface too quickly and died after two days from the effects of the pressure.

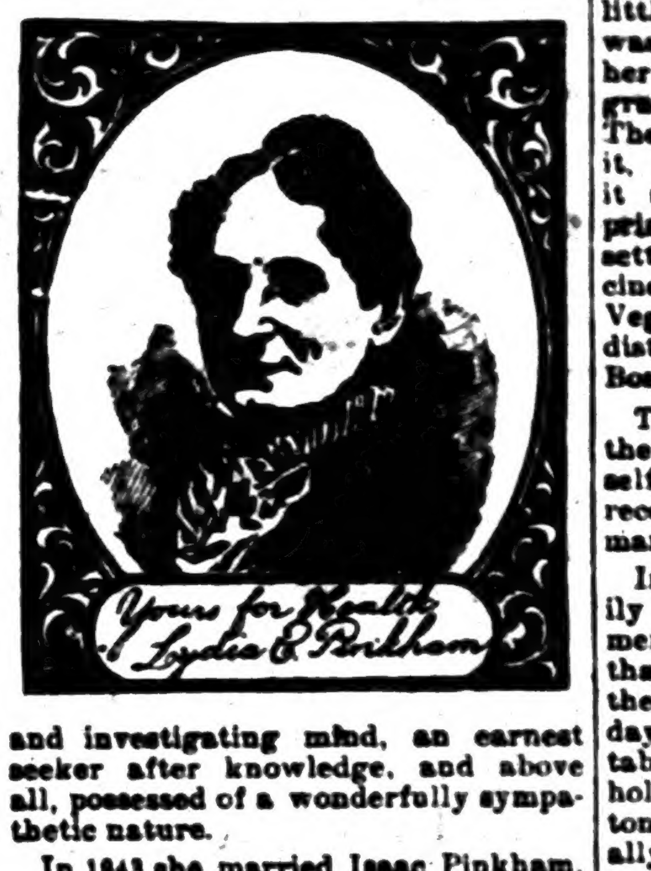
WHO SHE WAS

SKETCH OF THE LIFE OF LYDIA E. PINKHAM

And a True Story of How the Vegetable Compound Had Its Birth and How the "Panic of '73" Caused it to be Offered for Public Sale in Drug Stores.

This remarkable woman, whose maiden name was Estes, was born in Lynn, Mass., February 9th, 1819, coming from a good old Quaker family. For some years she taught school, and became known as a woman of an alert and investigating mind, an earnest seeker after knowledge, and above all, possessed of a wonderfully sympathetic nature.



Yours for Health
Lydia E. Pinkham

In 1843 she married Isaac Pinkham, a builder and real estate operator, and their early married life was marked by prosperity and happiness. They had four children, three sons and a daughter.

In those good old fashioned days it was common for mothers to make their own home medicines from roots and herbs, nature's own remedies—calling in a physician only in specially urgent cases. By tradition and experience many of them gained a wonderful knowledge of the curative properties of the various roots and herbs.

Mrs. Pinkham took a great interest in the study of roots and herbs, their characteristics and power over disease. She maintained that just as nature so bountifully provides in the harvest-fields and orchards vegetable foods of all kinds; so, if we but take the pains to find them, in the roots and herbs of the field there are remedies expressly designed to cure the various ills and weaknesses of the body, and it was her pleasure to search these out, and prepare simple and effective medicines for her own family and friends.

Chief of these was a rare combination of the choicest medicinal roots and herbs found best adapted for the cure of the ills and weaknesses peculiar to the female sex, and Lydia E. Pinkham's friends and neighbors learned that her compound relieved and cured and it became quite popular among them.

All this so far was done freely, without money and without price, as a labor of love.

But in 1873 the financial crisis struck Lynn. Its length and severity were too much for the large real estate interests of the Pinkham family, as this class of business suffered most from fearful depression, so when the Centennial year dawned it found their property swept away. Some other source of income had to be found.

At this point Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was made known to the world.

The three sons and the daughter, with their mother, combined forces to restore the family fortune. They argued that the medicine which was so good for their woman friends and neighbors was equally good for the women of the whole world.

The Pinkhams had no money, and little credit. Their first laboratory was the kitchen, where roots and herbs were steeped on the stove, gradually filling a gross of bottles. Then came the question of selling it, for always before they had given it away freely. They hired a job printer to run off some pamphlets setting forth the merits of the medicine, now called Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and these were distributed by the Pinkham sons in Boston, New York, and Brooklyn.

The wonderful curative properties of the medicine were, to a great extent, self-advertising, for whoever used it recommended it to others, and the demand gradually increased.

In 1877, by combined efforts the family had saved enough money to commence newspaper advertising and from that time the growth and success of the enterprise were assured, until to-day Lydia E. Pinkham and her Vegetable Compound have become household words everywhere, and many tons of roots and herbs are used annually in its manufacture.

Lydia E. Pinkham herself did not live to see the great success of this work. She passed to her reward years ago, but not till she had provided means for continuing her work as effectively as she could have done it herself.

During her long and eventful experience she was ever methodical in her work and she was always careful to preserve a record of every case that came to her attention. The case of every sick woman who applied to her for advice—and there were thousands—received careful study, and the details, including symptoms, treatment and results were recorded for future reference, and to-day these records, together with hundreds of thousands made since, are available to sick women the world over, and represent a vast collaboration of information regarding the treatment of woman's ills, which for authenticity and accuracy, can hardly be equaled in any library in the world.

With Lydia E. Pinkham worked her daughter-in-law, the present Mrs. Pinkham. She was carefully instructed in all her hard-won knowledge, and for years she assisted her in her vast correspondence.

To her hands naturally fell the direction of the work when its originator passed away. For nearly twenty-five years she has continued it, and nothing in the work shows when the first Lydia E. Pinkham dropped her pen, and the present Mrs. Pinkham, now the mother of a large family, took it up. With woman assistants, some as capable as herself, the present Mrs. Pinkham continues this great work, and probably from the office of no other person have so many women been advised how to regain health. Sick women, this advice is "Yours for Health" freely given if you only write to ask for it.

Such is the history of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound; made from simple roots and herbs; the one great medicine for women's ailments, and the fitting monument to the noble woman whose name it bears.

Gone Home to Heaven.

The infant of Mr. and Mrs. Peaice Birley is dead. The parents have our sympathy; weep not, for it is at rest. Christ said "Suffer little children to come unto me, for of such is the kingdom of heaven." Dear mother, try and say from the heart "The Lord giveth and the Lord taketh away, blessed be the name of the Lord." And while you are a broken family on earth, may you so live that you may not be a broken family on that eternal shore where sickness, pain nor sorrow never comes and say with the poet, I know we will meet up there.

AN APPEAL.

Speigner, Ala., May 6, 1906

Editor Banner—I now appeal to the good and true Caucasian race of old Chilton county to help an innocent white man from being persecuted and murdered by black African race and a few desperate and conscienceless white men, who have no Christianity in their breasts and well know that I didn't kill that old negro John Hines. All around Dixie and Stanton the people well know that the negroes are in the majority. There are over 2020 negroes in Beats 7 and 8 in Chilton county. You remember how I have been murdered up and other innocent white men in Chilton county. And the above stated negro, John Hines, did state to me and others who shot me, and asked me to forgive him, which was done, and he would go before the next Grand Jury and divulge the whole shooting scrape; that he was made to go with the crowd which lead to his death. Yours most respectfully,

W J. A. MELTON.

G. Maness, T. U. Crumpton, A. I. Vanmartin and T. G. Milling They did their work well, their talks were very interesting and instructive.

Also a goodly number of superintendents reported the conditions of their schools and made some good talks. Resolutions of Respect

To the Worshipful Master, Wardens and Brethren of Amand Lodge No. 250, A. F. & A. M:

The scythe of time has removed from our ranks our beloved brother F. M. Connell, whose faith and fidelity in Masonry held out faithful to the end, and he no doubt has gone up higher to dwell with the Grand Architect above, the Supreme Ruler of all. While our loss is his gain, it should remind us with a never dying faith that we, too, sooner or later must be lain as low as he and that we should do the work of Him who gave us life while it is day, for as the time came to our brother to forever leave the Lodge below, so will it come to us.

To his wife and children: As husband and father has paid the last debt, in faith we beg you in God's name to emulate him. As a veteran of war and a veteran of his church and lodge and a soldier of the Cross, you all can give him up with that grand consolation that he has gone to receive that blessed pension that our Saviour has gone to prepare for those who kept the faith. He is ready, he is waiting on the other shore, do not neglect to try to meet him there.

He was born Feb. 14, 1822, died April 7, 1906. United with this Lodge Nov. 28, 1863, and was made an honorary member May 23, 1896

We desire a copy sent to his family and that a page in the minutes of this Lodge be dedicated to his memory. Sleep on, dear brother, husband and father until the last great roll call and Jesus comes to make up his jewels.

Clanton, May 10, 1906

Editor Banner—I have noticed some correspondence in the county newspapers on the subject of the hire of the convicts, and I have been informed that some have thought that I was the author of the article in last week's Banner, signed Citizen. I just wish to say that I never saw the article until I saw it in the Banner. I did not come back to Clanton to enter into a controversy with reference to county affairs. I must confess that I noticed in the Union an article on the subject of the hire of the convicts, in which a comparison was made between the price for which they are now hired and the price for which I was able to hire them. But I know that the Commissioners' Court well remembered that when I let the convicts that it looked as if we would be compelled to keep them and feed them at the expense of the county, and I know that the people know, when they stop to think, that at the time I let the convicts, wages were low, in fact cotton and all commodities were cheap, working men were seeking work and in many instances unable to find it. I wish to thank Judge Reynolds for admitting this in his last article, and his article would have been more commendable if he had informed the public just why he received $35.00 per month; he knows and admitted to me that convict labor is not worth $35.00 per month. I take it that the people of Chilton know a thing or two, and that they know that when the convicts were hired for $4.50 per month that it was the best that could be done, and much better than feeding them at the expense of the county. I felt that justice to myself demanded this statement.

I never entertained a proposition to hire the convicts to a coal mine.

Respectfully,
S. M. Adams.

Pine Mills, Texas, May 7, 1906

Editor Banner—The people of this community are badly behind with their crops on account of so much rain.

We had a large crowd at Mount Pisgah May 5, for the purpose of decorating the cemetery. After which we had a good sermon by Bro Arrington. I am glad to say the cemetery at Mount Pisghh is in good shape.

I am glad to say our community has good health, but sorry to say we have lots of boll weevils. I think the boll weevils and candidates will take our country. But if the rain will stop and the candidates won't stir too much, we will make a good corn crop. So good bye to the Banner. D. V. Wagoner.

Card of Thanks.

Editor Banner—Please allow me space in your valuable paper to express my thanks to my friends and neighbors in this community, near Cooper, for their kindness in assisting us during the sickness and death of my beloved grandfather, W. D. Courtney, who died April 12th, 1906. May God bless and reward those who lend a helping hand in time of need is my sincere prayer. Lela Vinson.

Maplesville.

We have been having some very chilly weather, making morning fires very comfortable Farmers have heavy complaints to make of injury to cotton and some to corn. Gardens were so far advanced as not to be injured much except okra.

We regret that Mr. Snow is in Birmingham for treatment. He took great interest in our Sunday school and is gifted in drawing illustrations for the benefit of the children. We miss him very much and hope most earnestly for his recovery.

Dr. Dunlap is with us professionly and is quite popular by his pleasing address.

Mr. Woolley and wife have visited his daughter here, Mrs. Dorson Williams.

Mrs. Williams of Selma has been with her son here.

Mr. T. U. Crumpton is in Chattanooga attending the Convention.

Miss Mary Adams and Mr. Peagler were quietly married at the bride's home last Wednesday; only a few select friends were invited. The happy couple left immediately on the train for their home in Selma. We congratulate Mr. Peagler on the selection of a good, true woman. She will be greatly missed from our Sunday school; there was never a truer worker than she was. She goes from us with the well wishes of a host of friends.

Mr. Ed Ensign is in Montgomery on business.

Mr. Ernest Coburn of Mulberry was with friends here lately.

Mr. Willis Bowline is with his family here on a visit.

Our community was saddened on the 11th, by the death of Mr. Finis Walker. He was a most devoted son of his widowed mother and brother to his family: He was the oldest child and in his 22d year.

Mrs. Goodwin and her daughter, Mrs. Frank DuBose, are visiting her aunt, Mrs. Merchant.

Our community was much livened by a show the past week. The writer, as well as the clown, was much astonished that it required so many old people to care for so few children in the circus. The clown most aptly took off some of our most popular young men. Mr. Perry figured largely in a most wonderful heavenly dream, and Dr. Dunlap for his popularity with the fair sex.

Mr. William Walker ofh Lily attended the services at Sand Mountain Methodist church accompanied by the charming Miss Adair, Sunday afternoon. They report a most delightful drive, enjoying the bracing mountain air and beautiful scenery. Mr. Walker is gifted as an entertainer of the ladies, particularly with the fleetest teams in the country. Success to the Banner. Long may she wave.

Clanton 7. Thorsby 6.

In one of the most closely played and exciting ball games ever seen here, the home team downed the Thorsby boys Saturday evening after a hard fought, 10 inning game. The Thorsby team played hard to win, and on several occasions it looked as if their efforts would be successful. Howard pitched the entire game for Thorsby and while he only struck out 4, his speed prevented hits being bunched on him when men were on bases. Simpson and Headley pitched for Clanton and both did splendid work. Headley and McDowell did the best work for the locals, while, with one or two exceptions, all the visitors played well. This makes two 10 inning games Clanton and Thorsby has played, each winning a game by one score, and it is expected that a large crowd will go with the team to Thorsby Friday evening to see the tie played off.

This is to notify you to appear before the Probate Court of said county at the next term thereof, commencing Monday, the 14th day of May, 1906, then and there to show cause, if any you have, why a decree for the sale of said real estate should not be made for the payment of the taxes assessed and for fees and costs. This 11th day of April, 1906.

L. H. REYNOLDS,
Judge of Probate.

Lost.

A Senator of the United States from the West, who first came into prominence as a lawyer in California, tells a story of the days when he was struggling for recognition at the bar.

"My first case," says he, "was one involving a complicated question of inheritance, and it was tried before the most noted jurist in California.

"Notwithstanding the complex questions of law involved, I determined to get at the bottom of things if it took a year to do so. I consulted every authority I could get my hands on, and as the result of my industry I turned out a brief that seemed to me an unanswerable one. It certainly was a comprehensive one—a point which gave me considerable uneasiness, for I feared it might prove to abstruse for the Court.

"When my turn came I arose and boldly plunged into my argument, which covered two or three hundred pages. To my delight, the judge seemed really interested at first. But this joy was to be short lived. In a while I was conscious that the attention of the court was not so intense. An hour or two later I observed signs of positive inattention, and this, too, in the midst of the most intricate part of my plea. Just as I had expected! The court was unable to perceive the fine points of my argument.

"At this juncture I hesitated and said: 'I beg pardon, your Honor, but do you follow me?'

"'So far I have followed you,' responded his Honor, 'but I'll be frank enough to say that if I could find my way back, I'd gladly quit right here.'"—Harper's Weekly.

He Wanted to See.

There resides in St. Louis a politician as well known in that vicinity for his wit as for his corpulency. Now for some time the St. Louis man has been much disturbed by his increasing avoirdupois, trying many remedies without success. At the instance of a friend, he recently took the baths at a resort in Indiana recommended for the purpose. At the end of two or three weeks he returned in a happy and jocular frame of mind, for he had managed to get rid of quite a good deal of his superfluous flesh.

The day after his return he was on his way down town, when he stopped at the butcher shop that supplied his household. Dashing inside, he demanded that the butcher cut for him twenty pounds of pork.

The butcher at once complied. The politician looked at the twenty pounds of pork for a moment or two, then began to walk away without further ado.

"Send it to the house?" asked the butcher, thinking that his customer had overlooked the usual instruction.

"Not at all, not at all!" smilingly exclaimed the politician. "We never eat pork; in fact, have no use for it. The fact is, I've fallen off twenty pounds and I merely wanted to get an idea of how much that looked like."—Harper's Weekly.

"There's a Lady Up There."

The theory that the female presence invariably commands respect is working like a charm in the alcoholic ward at Bellevue hospital. Once there was much turmoil among the delirious persons confined there, but since Dr. Armstrong has placed an elderly woman to sit constantly at one end of the ward all is quiet. When a new arrival bursts forth in song or shout all a nurse has to do is to touch him on the shoulder and say:

"There is a lady up there."

The newcomer bows and goes quietly to his cot.—New York Sun.

Living by Rule.

Some men devote so much of their energy to being invariably consistent that they never accomplish much of anything in life.—Somerville Journal.

Representative Augustus Peabody Gardner, Republican, sixth district of Massachusetts, pleads for a head tax of $40 on every male immigrant in order to restrict immigration.

Lyane, of Decatur, who is also a candidate, was not present at the meeting.

Death an Accident.

New York.—Still insisting that Charles L. Spier, Jr., confidential agent for H. H. Rogers, did not commit suicide, his friends offer a new solution to the mystery. They declare that the evidence indicates that he had carefully planned a "fake" burglary to account for the disappearance of valuable papers and books he had misappropriated, and that he accidentally shot himself.

Refuse Possession of County Convicts.

Birmingham, Ala.—Formal demand was made Saturday by George Sullivan, attorney for Mobile county, on the Sloss-Sheffield Steel and Iron Company for possession of the county convicts being worked in the mines of the company at Flat Top.

The demand was refused by M. M. Richey, first vice-president of the Sloss Company, who stated that the matter would be fought to the bitter end in the highest courts in the country if necessary.

Mr. Sullivan was accompanied by Sterling A. Wood, who has been retained as the local attorney for the Mobile county authorities. They demanded the convicts, and Mr. Richey explained the position of the company to them, saying in part:

"We will fight you to the bitter end in the highest courts in the country. We have a contract with the state and also with the county of Mobile to work these convicts at a certain price for a given length of time, and we are abiding by our side of the contract.

"We are giving the convicts the very best of treatment. We are not fighting so much for the possession of these sixteen convicts, but we are protecting the reputation of the Sloss Company in this matter. We treat the convicts well, and we intend to defend our reputation in this matter."

SCIENCE & MECHANICS

A report comes from San Antonio, Texas, to the effect that the pecan forests of Southwest Texas are threatened by a moss growth like Spanish moss that is sucking the life out of the trees. The Federal Bureau of Forestry is conducting an investigation.

During the past twenty years 2061 balloon and airship ascents have taken place in Germany and only thirty-six cases of accident have befallen the 7570 persons taking part in them. Consequently one trip in fifty-seven comes to grief, or one aeronaut in 210 meets with an accident.

Sir Robert Ball, who has been lecturing on the glacial epoch, informed his hearers recently that the next ice age is due 200,000 winters hence. Then, he says, all Northern Europe and America will be once more under an ice cap that will cover the highest mountains and last for many thousands of years.

The mathematical aptitude of boys and girls of eight to fifteen has been compared by Professor V. Marcante, of Buenos Ayres, by tests of quickness in reading numbers and in arithmetical operations. A curious discovery is that an abnormal activity of memory exists at about thirteen, followed by a period of intellectual depression, and at fourteen by a sudden leap in creative imagination and reasoning power.

Is there not a good chance that the turbine principle may eventually be adapted to explosive machines? There are already several inventors who claim that they have solved this problem. At any rate, now that the present petrol engine has reached not quite finality, but comparative perfection, it is time that some totally fresh line were struck out, and if Great Britain strikes first we shall firmly establish our lead in the world's motor matters. —Lord Montagu, in The Car.

A discovery which may be classed as important if true is the new form of artificial albumen brought forward by a German chemist. It is claimed that this new product possesses the qualities of natural albumen, which is the nourishing principle of meat, eggs, milk, etc., and with its introduction may bring about a change in the present system of nourishing the human body. The producers of the present line of foods are not likely to go into a panic over a reported discovery of this kind, although a chemical achievement of this kind may some time be possible.

Most interesting and important investigations continue to be made in the field of radioactivity, etc., by the world's greatest chemists. Professor Rutherford has followed radium through seven distinct stages of change, which he calls A to G. Radium has an atomic weight of about 225—being one of the heaviest known elements. It keeps losing a few of its atoms until at the G stage it seems to have dropped to about 207. This would seem to make it at that dead stage identical with the element lead. If this turns out to be so it will show that the chemical elements are not necessarily distinct and unchangeable basic forms of matter, but that under special conditions they may melt from one form into another.

Sixty-Year Egg, $1400.

The third part of the illustrated catalogue of the remarkable collection of birds' eggs formed by the late Mr. John Wolley contains the following specially interesting items: An account of an egg supposed to be that of the knot laid in captivity, and given by Lord Lilford to Mr. Wolley many years before the breeding place of this bird had been discovered. The recent discovery of its nesting place and eggs in the tundra of Northern Russia confirms the correctness of the identification. The collection also contains the first found egg of the stint, obtained in Siberia by Middendorf, in 1843. No fewer than seven actual specimens of the eggs of the great auk, besides several casts, are also described—the seven eggs and one of the casts being also illustrated. As indicating the increasing value of the eggs of this extinct bird it may be noted that one of them, purchased by Mr. Wolley in 1846 for 28s., is now probably worth £280.—London Globe.

In Authorship.

Anybody can write. Millions write. But only those who have the instinct, or the knowledge, or the knack, can place a story with the magazine that will publish it or a manuscript with the maker of books who will issue it in leather or cloth in editions of thousands. The unfortunate linger in false hope for a year or more, and are lucky to get back the "children of their brains." In other words—the "rubbish of their garrets." The editorial second thought is an awful menace to the world of literature. It is on record, however, that a certain monthly magazine in this city returned over $200,000 of manuscripts to the authors thereof, every one of which had been paid for at full rates. The editor, or editors, had accepted them in good faith, but being unable to find room for them in the periodical, sent them back with a written consent to "dispose of at will elsewhere."—New York Press.

CIRCUIT COURT.

Monday morning, a few minutes after ten o'clock, the Spring term of Circuit Court convened at Clanton, and many expressions of pleasure were heard at the reappearance of Judge S. L. Ensley, Ala., April 22, 1906

Editor Banner—Seeing my letter did not reach the waste basket in the last issue of the Banner, I will attempt to write a few lines about the great Birmingham district. Ensley is a beautiful city, situated at the foot of Red Mountain, and its many industries make it one of the most prosperous cities in the South. Every man who has a job in the Birmingham district (and every one who wants one has it) enjoys the opportunity of saving something and laying by the dollars that may become the foundation of an independent fortune. No other place has ever offered a finer opportunity to the young man who wants to succeed than the present in the Birmingham district. The wise young man who is brave enough to ignore the unreasonable demands of our distorted social system and to blaze his way carefully through the various temptations of the age is bound to succeed He must determine to be honest. To be honest he must live within his own means and exercise good judgment.

Well, dear reader, let us all take Bro. Jones' advice about the treatment of animals, for it is shameful to mistreat a dumb brute, especially a horse, which is our best friend. I find since I came here that Bro. Jones has done a good work in this part of the country while he was here a few years ago. A young man was speaking of him a few nights ago to me and said, "Ah, if I had taken the advice Bro. Jones gave me I would have been a different boy tonight."

Well, everybody goes visiting up here. The cars are always crowded and if I should try to tell who all went visiting it would fill forty Banners. Success to the Banner and its many readers.

A FRIEND.

A RELIABLE MEDICINE

An Opinion That Should Be of Interest to Every Person in Clanton.

So many patent medicines and advirtised cures are now offered to the public that our readers should be glad to know the opinion of a man who has spent years in handling them and profit by his advice.

A member of the Upchurch Drug co. says, "After having sold drugs, and all kinds and makes of medicines for so many years, naturally we have learned something about them—their value and power to cure, and we want to say to the readers of the Banner that if the people of Clanton only realized the real curative and strength creating power of our cod liver oil preparation, Vinol, we would not have clerks enough in our store to fill the demand for it."

Continued he, "You see Vinol is not a patent medicine, and it actually contains all the life giving, body building and strength-creating properties of cod liver oil actually taken from fresh cods' livers, but without a drop of the system clogging, nauseating oil. Vinol makes rich, red blood, and tones up and invigorates every organ in the body.

In the strongest manner we unhesitatingly endorse and guarantee Vinol to increase the appetite, cure stomach troubles, give strength and renewed vitality to the aged, build up puny children and run-down persons, make the weak strong, cure chronic choughs, colds and bronchitis or refund to the purchaser every dollar paid for it.

This shows our faith in Vinol, and we can only ask the people of Clanton to try Vinol on our guarantee." Upchurch Drug co.

Editor Banner—I have read a nice piece from Fairview in a recent issue, containing a very fine compliment on myself and also requesting me to write. But before I begin my piece I wish to thank the Fairview correspondent for her compliment, assuring her that I shall always remember the people of Fairview with sweetest remembrance. May I always find my labor, as teacher, as pleasant as I did there, and hope to return in the future to labor for you again.

I have not thought of anything new to write, so will write a short piece on the importance of saving time. "Time 'was' is past, thou canst not it recall. Time 'is' thou hast, employ the portion small. Time 'future' is not, and may never be. Time 'present' is the only time for thee." How many of us realize the truth that this quotation teaches? How many of us realize that the present moments are the only ones that we can call our own, and that if we fail to employ well these moments that we will never have another opportunity? So many of us seem to think that we can idle this while away and supply the future hours; that a little time amounts to nothing; that we can do enough in the future to win for us a crown, but alas, how many of us fail! When you have wasted these precious moments in idleness you will then realize the necessity of saving time.

Time is lent for noble deeds, and there is never a time but that we can do some noble deed or think some noble thought. You may ask how can I always do good? And here comes the answer: "Resist the devil, and he will flee from you." That's what the Book says. Never let one moment be spent in low or careless thoughts. Every moment that you employ well will always prove beneficial to you, and every one passed in idleness will some time prove, not only worthless, but a curse to you.

We have not time to experience all things, so let us look at the lives of others, and from this draw a picture of our future. We see when we look back that those who have spent their leisure moments in faithful study are "Blest with a kindly faculty to blunt the edge of adverse circumstances," and those who idle their time away soon come to naught. Furthermore, it is our duty to God to save the time that He has lent us, and by so doing we will win for ourselves a crown. Thanking the Editor for his kindness and you for your patience in reading this, I remain,

Very earnestly,
LOTTIE JOHNSON.

MANY THINGS.

THINGS ABOUT CHATTANOOGA AND THE GREAT CONVENTION.

After a few week's rest, too busy to write, I send you greetings from splendid, historic Chattanooga and the great Southern Baptist Convention. Let Banner readers again be reminded how impossible it is for me to get off the subject, since I am to write about "many things."

And now what can one say of Chattanooga on the bank of the Tennessee, so highly favored by Nature, the main gateway to the South, historic of song and story, her soil sacred with blood of heroes and where the busy hum of industry tells of progress, peace and plenty. A large book could be written and yet the half not told. How thrilling to drive over Chicamauga Battle Field, now known as Chattanooga and Chicamauga National Park—not like Gettysburg, with its monuments along one side alone, but the lines of both sides are equally marked. Much of the heavy artillery stands exactly where it stood when the last shots were fired, here and there are pyramids built of real cannon balls and more than 10,000 acres covered with trees pierced by many a grape shot and cannon ball, yet one feels perfectly safe for the blood is all dried up and doves are nestling in the mouths of the cannon.

Next we want to reach the crest of Lookout Mountain and stand high up on Sunset Rock, where Davis stood and made a speech. We are told the quickest and by far the most romantic way is to go up on Lookout Mt. Incline, 4,750 feet in length and for part of the way a grade of 67 feet in 100. As we stand here where the "Battle above the clouds" was fought, we look into seven states and drink in scenery not surpassed elsewhere in the United States. It inspires one with a determination to be a better Christian and a better citizen

As to the great Southern Baptist Convention, the attendace is large, the spirit fine and the meeting is sure to be the greatest in its history, coverying a space of sixty one years—years frought with good to the whole world.

Everywhere one is impressed with the South's marvelous prosperity and unlimited possibilities. We are truly thankful for progress and for the wave of prosperity that continues to sweep over the Southland, but we are sad to note a decline of the picturesque, which, of course is the penalty of progress. If we must lose our traditions, we must not lose our Southern sentiment. Love to all the home folk.

BEAUTY MORE THEN SKIN DEEP.

A Good Complexion Must Come From Within

The natural desire of every ambitious woman is to have a clear skin and a beautiful complexion. Not every woman can be a Diana or Juno, but the beauty of freshness and the bloom of a clear skin are within the reach of every woman who will make the effort.

It is all a matter of intelligent trying. If the bowels are inactive, if the liver is not working properly, if the poisonous waste and refuse are not expelled promptly from the system the complexion is sure to show the effects.

The only right way to remove pimples, moth spots and blotches and clear up a muddy, cloudy complexion is to go right to the root of the trouble with the proper remedy.

The one remedy that will cure constipation, improve the complexion, brighten the eyes, tone up the liver, cure sick headache and insure a clear, velvety skin is Laxakola Tonic Tablets.

To inspire confidence, and to protect both you and the druggist, we have issued a Guarantee Contract to Florenee Drug co., authorizing them to pay back the 25 cents if the tablets do not benefit you as claimed.

Red Cross Heroine Will Establish Railroad Hospital Car Service.

Although Over Eighty Years Old She Has Started in with Great Energy to Organize New Relief Work to Cope with Wrecks.

Clara Barton, the famous Red Cross leader, has just given new evidence that she is one of the most remarkable women the world has ever known. Feeling that the Red Cross work has been placed on a permanent basis and no longer needs her close supervision, this untiring woman, although upward of eighty years of age, has lately returned to her old home in Massachusetts and opened headquarters for a great new movement to alleviate suffering, namely, a project for organizing hospital corps on all railroads in order that with the aid of hospital cars speedy succor may be brought to persons injured in wrecks.

The portrait here presented is of especial interest, inasmuch as it is the only likeness which Clara Barton has permitted to be made in many years. The famous Red Cross worker has no love for the camera, but her close personal friend, Mrs. John A. Logan, after much persuasion finally induced her to sit for this picture. Mrs. Logan is seen standing by her side.

WORKED IN CIVIL AND FRANCO-PRUSSIAN WARS.

Clara Barton, who is entering with so much enthusiasm into a new missionary work, was born in Oxford, Mass., in 1830. During the Civil War she did relief work on the battlefields and organized the search for missing men for which Congress appropriated the sum of $15,000. After the close of that conflict she went abroad and carried on the Red Cross activities of the Franco-Prussian war, following which she did heroic work at the Johnstown flood, distributed relief in the Russian famine in 1892, and the Armenian massacre of 1896, at the request of the President of the United States carried relief to Cuba in 1898, and conducted the Red Cross relief at the Galveston flood.

Red Cross Heroine Will Establish Railroad Hospital Car Service.

Miss Barton's father was in boyhood one of the soldiers of "Mad Anthony" Wayne, and Clarissa Harlowe Barton, as her name is inscribed in the family Bible, came to the Bay State home as a human Christmas present. Like many another New England girl Clara Barton, when thrown on her own resources, took up school teaching as a means of livelihood, and when she was obliged to abandon this because of failing eyesight, she managed to secure a position in the Patent Office at Washington, and here she continued her service until the outbreak of the Civil War disclosed to her a lifework. Her advertisements in the Massachusetts papers that she would receive money and stores for the wounded soldiers and personally distribute them at the front brought quick responses, and from this small beginning the scope of her work broadened. The ministering angel of the Army of the Potomac was present at the battles of Cedar Mountain, the second Bull Run, Antietam, Fredericksburg and the Wilderness.

WAS WITH THE VANGUARD.

In the Franco-Prussian war Miss Barton was the first person to enter Strasburg after the fall of that city, and was instrumental in organizing the relief. She performed a similar service at Paris, which she entered with the vanguard at the conclusion of the siege. After her return to the United States she directed relief work in addition to the instances above mentioned during the Mississippi flood of 1882, the overflow of the Ohio River in 1883, the Louisiana cyclone of the same year, and the Texas drought of 1889, ever at the fore aiding, sustaining, and supporting by her untiring presence the failing courage of those who in their suffering learned to depend upon her with passionate love and gratitude.

Mrs. John A. Logan (Mary Simmerson Cunningham Logan) who appears with Clara Barton in this picture, is a native of Missouri, but was educated in Kentucky and married John A. Logan in 1855. Since his death she has engaged in literary work, and has resided in the city of Washington, making her home in a quaint old house filled with mementoes of her hero husband. This residence is on a most attractive little estate of about one-half acre in extent, located on the brow of a hill overlooking the nation's capitol.

COLONEL HENDERSON'S POEM.

Several years ago the late Col. D. B. Henderson wrote a poem entitled "Yes or No?" which slumbered until the other day, when it was read in Des Moines at a meeting held in the famous Iowan's memory. The poem runs:

Is there a mentor strong and good
That always indicates the road
Where we should go,
That tells us with unerring voice
Which of the words should be our choice—
The Yes or No?

We have the bibles of the earth,
With all their holy power and worth,
And yet we know
The world is wild with disputation
As to the "true road to salvation"—
The Yes or No.

When seeking virtue's truest path
And all the purest gems she hath,
Is there no woe?
Is there no doubt in noblest mind
Who in the word from heaven would find
The Yes or No?

Our hearts will whisper: "This is right;
Here live and love and drink delight
Nor dream of woe."
When reason suddenly cries out
In tones that fill the heart with doubt
And thunders: "No!"

And ever thus we rise and fall,
We hope and fear and tremble all
Until we go.
Then we shall have a sweet repose,
There is a light that melts our woes,
Lost is the No.

ERUPTION OF KRAKATOA.

Volcanic Explosions in East Indies the Most Terrific in History.

Vast Volumes of Ashes Blown Twenty Miles Above Earth—Detonations Heard Three Thousand Miles Distant.

By Sir Robert Ball.

The following description by Sir Robert Ball of the eruption of Krakatoa will be read with special interest at the present time. It is taken from his book, "The Earth's Beginning," recently published by D. Appleton & Co.

Until the year 1883 few had ever heard of Krakatoa. It was not inhabited, but the natives from the surrounding shores of Sumatra and Java used occasionally to draw their canoes up on its beach while they roamed through the jungle in search of the wild fruits. The island seemed to owe its existence to some frightful eruption of bygone days, but for a couple of centuries there had been no fresh outbreak.

In 1883 Krakatoa suddenly sprang into notoriety. Insignificant though it had hitherto seemed, the little island was soon to compel by its tones of thunder the whole world to pay it instant attention. It was to become the scene of a volcanic outbreak so appalling that it is destined to be remembered throughout the ages.

At first the eruption did not threaten to be of any serious type. In fact, the good people of Batavia, so far from being terrified at what was in progress in Krakatoa, thought the display was such an attraction that they chartered a steamer and went forth for a pleasant picnic to the island. Many of us, I am sure, would have been delighted to have been able to join the party who were to witness so interesting a spectacle. With cautious steps the more venturesome of the excursion party clambered up the sides of the volcano, guided by the sounds which were issuing from its summit. There they beheld a vast column of steam pouring forth with terrific noise from a profound opening about thirty yards in width.

As the summer of this dread year advanced, the vigor of Krakatoa steadily increased. The noises became more and more vehement. These were presently audible on shores ten miles distant, and then twenty miles distant, until the great thunders of the volcano, now so rapidly developing, astonished the inhabitants that dwelt over an area at least as large as Great Britain, and there were other symptoms of the approaching catastrophe. With each successive convulsion a quantity of fine dust was projected aloft into the clouds. The wind could not carry this dust away as rapidly as it was hurled upward by Krakatoa, and accordingly the atmosphere became heavily charged with suspended particles. A pall of darkness thus hung over the adjoining seas and islands. Such was the thickness and the density of these atmospheric volumes of Krakatoa dust that for a hundred miles around the darkness of midnight prevailed at midday. Then the awful tragedy of Krakatoa took place. Many thousands of the unfortunate inhabitants of the adjacent shores of Sumatra and Java were destined never to behold the sun again. They were presently swept away to destruction in an invasion of the shore by the tremendous waves with which the seas surrounding Krakatoa were agitated.

The development of the volcanic energy proceeded, and gradually the terror of the inhabitants of the surrounding coasts rose to a climax. July had ended before the manifestations of Krakatoa had attained their full violence. By the middle of August the panic was widespread, for the supreme catastrophe was at hand.

On the night of Sunday, August 26, 1883, the blackness of the dust clouds, now much thicker than ever in the Straits of Sunda and adjacent parts of Sumatra and Java, was only occasionally illumined by lurid flashes from the volcano. The Krakatoa thunders were on the point of attaining their complete development. At the town of Batavia, a hundred miles distant, there was no quiet that night. The houses trembled with the subterranean violence, and the windows rattled as if heavy artillery were being discharged in the streets, and still these efforts seemed to be only rehearsing for the supreme display. On the morning of Monday, August 27, 1883, the rehearsals were over and the performance began. An overture, consisting of two or three introductory explosions, was succeeded by a frightful convulsion which tore away a large part of the Island of Krakatoa and scattered it to the winds of heaven.

This supreme effort it was which produced the mightiest noise that, so far as we can ascertain, has ever been heard on this globe. It must have been indeed a loud noise which could travel from Krakatoa to Batavia and preserve its vehemence over so great a distance; but we should form a very inadequate conception of the energy of the eruption of Krakatoa if we thought that its sounds were heard by those merely a hundred miles off. This would be little indeed compared with what is recorded, on testimony which it is impossible to doubt.

Westward from Krakatoa stretches the wide expanse of the Indian Ocean. On the opposite side from the Straits of Sunda lies the Island of Rodriguez, the distance from Krakatoa being almost 3,000 miles. It has been proved by evidence which cannot be doubted that the thunder of the great volcano attracted the attention of an intelligent coastguard on Rodriguez, who carefully noted the character of the sounds and the time of their occurrence. He had heard them just four hours after the actual explosion, for this is the time the sound occupied on its journey.

If Vesuvius were vigorous enough to emit a roar like Krakatoa, how great would be the consternation of the world! Such a report might be heard by King Edward, at Windsor, and by the Czar, at Moscow. It would astonish the German Emperor and all his subjects. It would penetrate to the seclusion of the Sultan at Constantinople. It would have extended to the sources of the Nile, near the equator. It would have been heard by Mohammedan pilgrims at Mecca. It would have reached the ears of exiles in Siberia. No inhabitants of Persia would have been beyond its range, while passengers on half the liners crossing the Atlantic would also catch the mighty reverberation. Or, to take another illustration, let us suppose that a similar earth-shaking event took place in a central position in the United States. Let us say, for example, that an explosion occurred at Pike's Peak as resonant as that from Krakatoa. It would certainly startle not a little the inhabitants of Colorado far and wide. The ears of dwellers in the neighboring States would receive a considerable shock. With lessening intensity the sound would spread much farther around—indeed, it might be heard all over the United States. The sonorous waves would roll over to the Atlantic coast; they would be heard on the shores of the Pacific. Florida would not be too far to the south, nor Alaska too remote to the north. If, indeed, we could believe that the sound would travel as freely over the great continent as it did across the Indian Ocean, then we may boldly assert that every ear in North America might listen to the thunder from Pike's Peak, if it rivaled Krakatoa. Can we doubt that Krakatoa made the greatest noise that has ever been recorded?

Among the many other incidents connected with this explosion, I may specially mention the wonderful system of divergent ripples that started in our atmosphere from the point at which the eruption took place. The initial impetus was so tremendous that these waves spread for hundreds and thousands of miles. They diverged, in fact, until they put a mighty girdle round the earth, on a great circle of which Krakatoa was the pole. The atmospheric waves, with the whole earth now well in their grasp, advanced into the opposite hemisphere. In their progress they had necessarily to form gradually contracting circles, until at last they converged to a point in Central America, at the very opposite point of the diameter of our earth, 8,000 miles from Krakatoa. Thus the waves completely embraced the earth. Every part of our atmosphere had been set into a tingle by the great eruption. The waves passed over our heads, the air in our streets, the air in our houses, trembled from the volcanic impulse. The very oxygen supplying our lungs was responding also to the supreme convulsion which took place 10,000 miles away. It is needless to object that this could not have taken place because we did not feel it. Self-registering barometers have enabled these waves to be followed unmistakably all over the globe.

Such was the energy with which these vibrations were initiated at Krakatoa, that even when the waves thus arising had converged to the point diametrically opposite in South America their vigor was not yet ex-

AWFUL BALLOON VOYAGE.

German Military Aeronauts Safe Only After a Terrible Experience.

War Airship Was Driven Five Hundred Miles Over Baltic Sea and Dropped in Swedish Snow Bank—Barely Averted Drowning.

The progress of balloon experiments in the German army has just received a severe setback by the fearful experiences of two members of the Aerostatic Corps, named Wolff and Brand, who have returned to Berlin after having been given up for dead, following a balloon ascension, during which they completely disappeared. The two men were blown all the way from Berlin to the Baltic Sea, where they were driven by a gale clear across that body of water, and finally landed, half dead, in a little village in Sweden, traveling altogether more than five hundred miles. The story of their flight is one of the most thrilling in the history of ballooning in Europe.

UNABLE TO MAKE DESCENT.

The two balloonists, caught in the gale in the upper air, were blown at terrific speed for three days, unable to make a descent without being dashed to death.

As the wind seemed to slacken, the balloonists opened their valve, preparing to descend. What was their horror upon seeing as they dropped from the clouds that the open sea was beneath them. They tried to shut the valve, but were only partly successful.

When within a few hundred feet of the water, the valve was closed by Wolff, who climbed up to the cordage surrounding the gas bag to do it. But the balloon still dropped nearer the sea. Finally, desperate, the balloonists climbed into the balloon's rigging and cut the basket from under them.

Clinging to the cordage about the balloon, the two men hung between hope and fear for a few moments as the bag seemed to hover uncertainly. The thought came into their minds simultaneously that one must drop off and lighten the weight to save his comrade; otherwise both must drown. But slowly the bag began to rise once more.

CLUNG TO CORDAGE FOR HOURS.

After clinging for hours to the cordage, thousands of feet in the air over the sea, the two soldiers made out the land. As soon as it was safe, the valve was opened again, and the balloon was allowed to descend slowly. The two men landed in a snow bank within a few miles of a little Swedish village. They had to walk two miles, almost exhausted, through the snow, and collapsed just as they reached the first cabin.

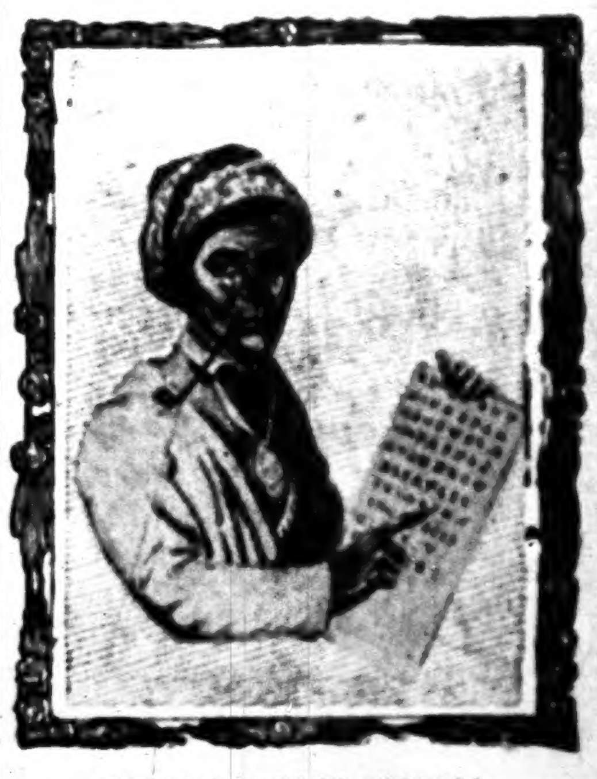
THE STATE OF SEQUOIA.

The Name of the Originator of the Cherokee Indian Alphabet to be Honored.

The decision of the convention, which recently met at Muskogee, Indian Territory, upon a name for the new state to be added to the Union brings a total of thirty-three states which have adopted Indian titles for state names. The convention, after some little discussion, decided that the new state should be known as Sequoia, as a tribute to the great Cherokee leader, and is a fitting honor which America owes to one of the really great red men of this continent. The Cherokee Indian alphabet was originated by George Gist, a half-breed, known to the tribe as Sequoia. He was a statesman and a peaceable leader among the tribe. He was an illiterate man but the idea of an alphabet for the Cherokee tribe was conceived from the brands he saw on cattle. He carved eighty-six characters with his hunting knife out of pine bark, then he called the wise men together, and explained the characters. The tribunal council adopted that, and in later years one of the tribe translated the Bible into the Cherokee language, through which medium Christianity was first taught among the Cherokees. It is to Sequoia that the Cherokee nation owes its splendid system of schools.



THE HALF-BREED SEQUOIA.

While in search of a lost band of Cherokee Indians in 1844, Sequoia lost his life.

California has already honored him by naming the "Big Tree" of that state "Sequoia gigatea" after him. England knows this tree as the "Wellingtonia."

Thirty-two of the states of the union have adopted Indian titles, but they are usually place-names; no state commemorates in its title any original American citizen. True we have Delaware named for Lord De le Warr, Pennsylvania for the Quaker, William Penn, and one for George Washington, but none to commemorate an Indian.

ENGLISH LANDSCAPE.

Their Roads and Bridges are Substantial, Enduring and Picturesque.

In Comparison With American Rural Improvements They Convey The Idea That We Think But Little Of Posterity.

There is an old story which will bear telling again as it illustrates so well the disadvantages to be overcome in a new country. It is of an American traveling in England who, when out walking one day stopped in front of an old English mansion to admire it and its surroundings. What particularly impressed him was the magnificent sweep of velvet lawn which extended without a flaw or blemish from the hedge along the roadway up to the very steps of the house. An old gardener was at work on the place and at that particular time was pushing a lawn mower across the sward. The American hailed him and with the usual freedom and inquisitiveness of his nationality asked many questions as to the conduct of affairs in such an establishment as the gardener was connected with.

"Tell me," he said to the gardener, "how do you make a lawn like this. I have a place in America and I am trying to make a lawn around the house, but it doesn't seem to do well." The old gardener scratched his head and, looking doubtfully at the American, he said: "You must have a good subsoil, and a good surface soil and the sod must be well laid. Then you must roll it, and cut it and water it, and keep on doing this until it's right."

A CENTURY TO MAKE A LAWN.

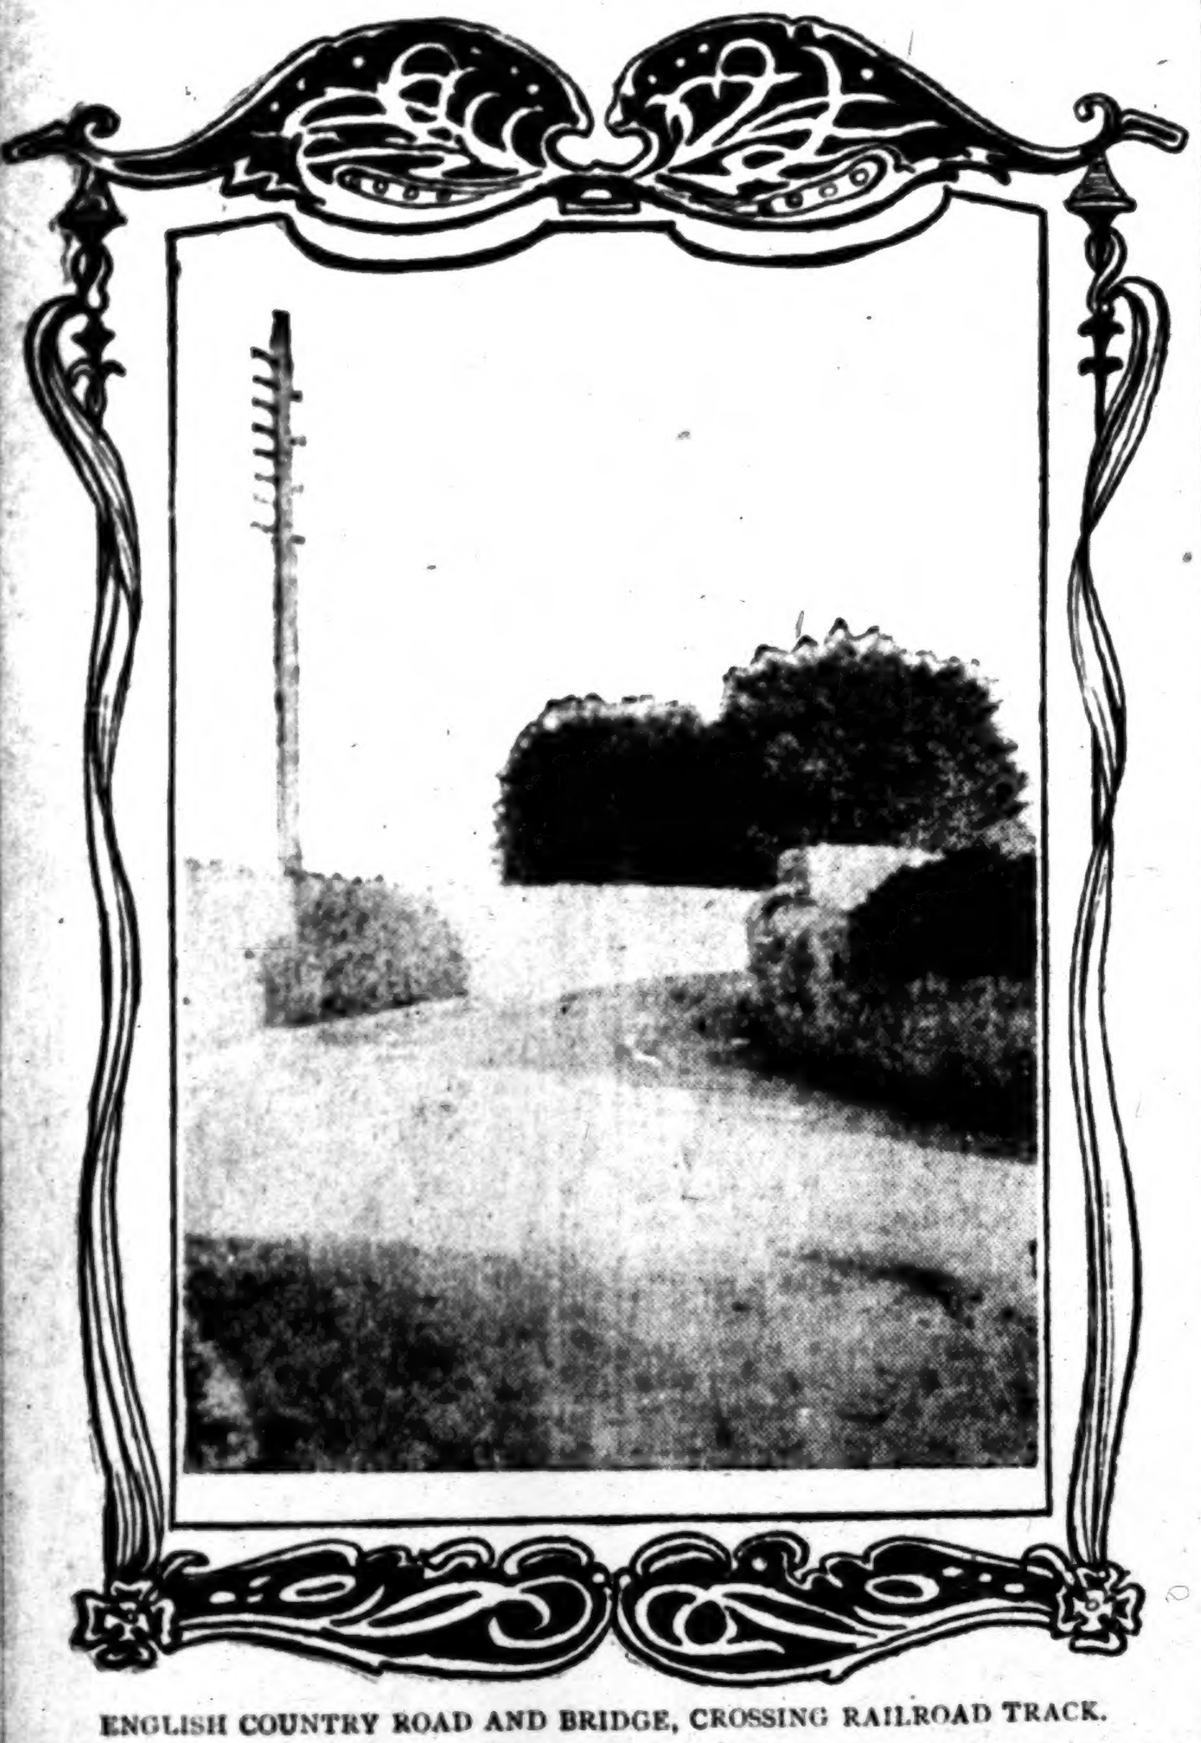
The American agreed with him that the process was simple, and then asked, "How long will I have to do this before the lawn is like that one?" The old gardener again spoke doubtfully, but finally gave it as his opinion that if his directions were followed for anywhere from fifty to a hundred years the results would be all that could be desired.

This same idea might also apply to the roads and bridges throughout England, for much of their excellence is due to the fact that their foundations were laid scores of years ago and generation after generation of workers has been tinkering at them ever since. In fact, the roads built by the Romans now serve as the foundations for some of the best known English highways, and to the south of London, east and west through the beautiful county of Surrey there is a road now greatly patronized by the owners of motor cars which in its beginning was the highway beaten hard by the sandaled feet of the early Britons as they toiled to the east coast from Wales with their back-breaking burdens of tin. This same road was afterwards improved in its texture and grades because of its being the highway for the pilgrims of western England en route to Canterbury. It is still shaded in places by the yew trees planted perhaps a thousand years ago to furnish bows - the sturdy British archers.

ENGLISH ROADS VERY NARROW.

In the first place the English road is generally narrow, so narrow, in fact, that it is only in certain places that one team can pass another without considerable manoeuvering. If all the labor expended upon an American country road were to be concentrated upon a narrow track only wide enough for a farmer's wagon, great improvement in results would be noted, for it is of course much cheaper to lay the foundations, build up the body, and surface a road fourteen feet wide than to put into shape a highway which, at its narrowest point the ambitious Americans have extended to forty feet. This, in itself, is a point which if intelligently adopted would in many places solve the question of a practicable roadway upon which in all kinds of weather and at all times of the year a single team of horses could haul a profitable load to market.

The English farmer uses a cart upon which a single horse draws anywhere from one to two tons of dead weight. The tires of the wheels are from four to eight inches in breadth, thereby cutting no ruts and each passing vehicle adds to the solidity and smoothness of the road in that its wheels serve as effective rollers.



ENGLISH COUNTRY ROAD AND BRIDGE, CROSSING RAILROAD TRACK.

It is not due to any peculiar advantage of soil, and certainly not to any advantages of climate that English roads are better than American roads, for if one leaves the highway in the English country, the lanes will be found, by a traveling American, to have a most homelike appearance in their rutted condition, and a very great contrast in the matter of holes, bogs and boulders to the highway left behind. No climate could be more threatening to the solidity of a roadway than the moist and changeable weather of the British Isles.

STURDY APPEARANCE OF THE BRIDGES.

In the matter of bridges, solidity seems to be the purpose in view. The arches and retaining walls are built of stone, approaches are gradual, and when once the finishing touch is put upon one of these structures, it will with little supervision and care outlast even to many generations the men whose handiwork it is. The solid masonry arch, the heavy stone-capped wall, and the gradual rise of the roadway to the centre of the bridge are entirely utilitarian in the minds of the builders, but they possess a certain sturdy character of their own which is a form of beauty welcomed by the eye. Time softens the colors, ivy creeps over the stones and in a short space, even if newly built, one of these English country road bridges takes a permanent place in the landscape giving the impression of always having been there and of intending always to remain.

THEIR VALUE TO THE TEAMSTER.

Aside from the beauty, strength and durability of these macadam roads and stone bridges, they possess an economic value which plays a large part in the conduct of an English farm where the margins of profit are small, and there is no reason to believe but that the American farmer, especially in regions where the cultivation of the land is more or less intensive, we would find similar roads and bridges of enormous value through an appreciable increase in his ability to reach his market in the shortest time at the minimum expense and with the least motive power.

BAD FOR COUNTERFEITERS.

Secret Service is Hard Pushing this Dangerous Class of Criminals.

Detectives Kept on Alert to Cope With Clever and Brainy Schemes for Passing Illegal Money—The King of Counterfeiters.

This has been a bad year for criminals. This statement is based on data brought out at the convention of the Police Chiefs Association of New York State, an address delivered by the president of the International Association of Police Chiefs and by the operations of the various police bureaus of the United States government. The secret service division of the Treasury alone caused the arrest of 532 persons charged with serious crimes. Of those taken into custody forty-one were arrested for counterfeiting the currency, fifty-two for making alterations in the currency, 344 for counterfeiting coin and the remainder for various violations of the United States statutes. Of the 532 alleged offenders, 392 were native Americans, forty-two were Italians (some of whom were naturalized) and thirteen were Austrians. The largest number of arrests were made in Pennsylvania where those apprehended numbered ninety-four. New York followed with seventy-seven arrests, Ohio with thirty-five, California with twenty-nine, Missouri with twenty-three and in the remaining instances every state and territory with the exception of Alaska was represented.

As compared with last year there was a decrease in the amount of counterfeit currency seized by government officers and an increase in the amount of counterfeit coin confiscated. The total face value of the notes seized was $36,834, against $44,350 the preceding year, and of the spurious coin, $24,110 as against $16,419 the year before. The number of plates for printing counterfeit bills captured by the government was 165 and the number of dies and molds for casting and stamping counterfeit coins was 454. Nearly all this stuff was seized by the Government before it had been placed in circulation. Nine classes of counterfeit notes were placed in circulation and of these, in the opinion of the Treasury officers only four were cleverly enough executed to be called dangerous.

RAISING SMALL BILLS.

The feature of the work of makers of false money this year was in raising the denomination of bills. There was rather a remarkable increase in this illicit industry and the raisers were particularly busy in circulating these altered obligations in Ohio, Indiana, Illinois and other states of the middle west. It is believed by the officers of the secret service that the leading offenders in this division of criminal work were captured, though there is no doubt that many altered bills are still passing from hand to hand in the channels of trade. Counterfeiters in the United States do not restrict their operations to the manufacture of American money, and one of the skillful pieces of work done by the secret service men was the apprehension of three groups of counterfeiters who were issuing fraudulent obligations of the Austro-Hungarian government.

BROCKWAY THE "KING OF" COUNTERFEITERS.

Because of the comparative isolation of Hawaii, its large foreign population and the amount of silver in circulation, it seems that the coining industry has been active there. Chief Wilkie of the Secret Service has announced that arrangements have been made for the establishment of a branch of the service at Honolulu, "where indications have pointed to the development of coining enterprises and it is hoped that the contemplated measures of suppression may be effective."

Another reason why the past year has been a difficult one with criminals is that there has been an increase of co-operation between the police department of the various cities, and general improvement in criminal identification and police work. As Richard Sylvester, major and superintendent of the police department of Washington, D. C., and president of the International Association of Police Chiefs recently said: "If the police forces of the country today adhered to the methods and practices of ten years ago they would not be prepared to contend with the criminal and disorderly classes. It should not be forgotten that in this period those agents of the people who are chosen to combat crime must more than ever before have a higher intelligence, more accurate training, greater courage, both moral and physical, in order to cope with educated, clever, unsuspected professionals who have succeeded the goldbrick man of days gone by. In time the bank burglar with his can of powder and drill has given way to the yeggman who uses nitro-glycerine; the faker who delighted the citizens with cheap gold rings has given place to the "gentleman" who sells cheap gold mines and three-card monte has gone over the divide and "bucket-shops" and "sure-things" prevail. The charms of rapid life have produced embezzlers, check-raisers and forgers."

It is a fact worth noting that the King of Counterfeiters is at large, but is under surveillance of secret service men. This old and skillful operator is Wm. E. Brockway, and he lives in N. Y. He has done penance for his offences against the statutes of the United States, but though now old, yet so great is he as a maker of counterfeit money that the secret service men never lose sight of him. Brockway can make money which any banker in the country would accept as genuine.

ERUPTION OF KRAKATOA.

hausted. The waves were then, strange to say, reflected back from their point of convergence to retrace their steps to Krakatoa. Starting from Central America, they again described a series of enlarging circles, until they embraced the whole earth. Then, advancing into the opposite hemisphere, they gradually contracted until they had regained the Straits of Sunda, from which they had set forth about thirty-six hours previously. Here was, indeed, a unique experience. The air waves had twice gone from end to end of the globe. Even then the atmosphere did not subside until, after some more oscillations of gradually fading intensity, at last they became evanescent.

But, besides these phenomenal undulations, this mighty incident at Krakatoa has taught us other lessons on the constitution of our atmosphere. We previously knew little, or I might almost say nothing, as to the conditions prevailing above the height of ten miles overhead. We were almost altogether ignorant of what the wind might be at an altitude of, say, twenty miles. Krakatoa drove into those winds prodigious quantities of dust. Hundreds of cubic miles of air were thus deprived of that invisibility which they had hitherto maintained.

With eyes full of astonishment, men watched those vast volumes of Krakatoa dust start on a tremendous journey. Westward the dust of Krakatoa took its way. Before the occurrence of that eruption no one had the slightest suspicion that far up aloft, twenty miles over our heads, a mighty tempest is incessantly hurrying with a speed much greater than that of the awful hurricane which once laid so large a part of Calcutta on the ground and slew so many of its inhabitants. Fortunately for humanity, this new "trade-wind" does not come within less than twenty miles of the earth's surface. We are thus preserved from the fearful destruction that its unintermittent blasts would produce—blasts against which no tree could stand and which would, in ten minutes, do as much damage to a city as would the most violent earthquake. When this great wind had become charged with the dust of Krakatoa, then, for the first and, I may add, for the only time, it stood revealed to human vision. Then it was seen that this wind circled round the earth in the vicinity of the equator and completed its circuit in about thirteen days.

In some violin experiments in a menagerie the influence of the instrument was greatest on the puma, which became much excited when lively music was played, but was soothed by slower melodies. Wolves showed an appreciative interest, lions and hyenas were terrified, leopards were unconcerned, while monkeys stared in wonder at the performer.

The center would then attack, press the French back upon the river, and before they could get across strike them on both flanks, or drive them into the water. To Lowenberg fell the special task of moving further up the Marne to Monte Pelier, the only other point at which the French could cross. Here the south bank fell away and the north bank rose in three hills, the center of the trio being really a small mountain, with a flat top, which commanded the bridge below and the banks of the Marne for some distance. The French fortifications did not extend this far, and the main danger was in the possibility of an opposing force reaching the hill before we could get there.

With a detachment of ten infantry regiments and one of cavalry we pushed on through the night, and before dawn reached the Sillery forest, which extended to the base of the Monte Pelier. Here we encamped to await the signal to advance and the arrival of a regiment of artillery.

Early in the afternoon we heard firing away to the east. The battle had opened. Hourly it grew heavier. The sharp, snappy bark of the high-power field guns blended with the roll of rifles and the wierd howl of the new multiplex ribbon Gatlings, which sent out a continuous stream of explosive bullets, bursting on the slightest impact and tearing their victims horribly. Presently the great twelve-inch guns on the high banks came into play. Their booming reports echoed through the heavens, bespeaking enormous projectiles. The din was fearful. I thanked my stars that I was not within range.

As the darkness came on we could catch the flashes or light as the French guns belched out their tons of iron and the mortars their pots of acid fire and liquid gas. It was not until afterward that I learned the full extent of the devilishness of man's inventive ingenuity in providing means for the destruction of human life.

Then came our signal. High in the air, to the east, appeared a shower of golden sparks, and the mysterious echoing boom of an aerial projectile was borne to our ears. The sparks paled and fell, and from their midst floated three blue stars. "It means that the French are retreating to the river and that Monte Pelier must be taken," said Lowenberg. He gave an order and the word was passed on. The artillery had not come—it never came, as a matter of fact. Some one had blundered. But we waited not. Here was our task, and we moved toward it with alacrity.

The woods came to an end. In front of us the hill loomed up to the sky, a great, dark, rock-strewn mass, its shadows inky black in the starlight. Lowenberg, Fleischmann and I were in advance, and as we emerged from the woods, the troops pressing behind, there was a flash directly in front of us and a sharp report. A bullet whistled past my ear. Another flash and report, another and another, each farther up the hill. Silence fell, broken only by the tramp of thousands of feet. We saw that our advance was known to the French, but we pushed on. It was no time to stop.

We had covered half of the distance and were climbing steadily when the whole top of the hill lighted up and a hail of lead descended. The front row of cavalry went down, a struggling mass of men and horses. It was no place for cavalry. Again and again came that terrible flash, the crashing report as of thousands of rifles and the song of lead in our ears was terrible. The storm was too heavy. Officers and men alike threw themselves on the ground and sought shelter behind the boulders with which the hill was strewn, or in depressions in the ground. The fire became continuous. And now the French hoisted great searchlights that revealed our ranks. The sharp white rays dazzled our eyes and we could see nothing. Some eight thousand troops hugged the ground, sheltered and unsheltered. Men groaned and cursed and shrieked in agony. Horses, maddened with pain and fright, staggered to their feet and went galloping down the hill, killing and maiming many. At brief and regular intervals came that sheet of flame and the hail of bullets. It was death to retreat and death to remain. So we lay until daylight.

As the dawn broke and the sun lit the sky the French continued their destruction in a more diabolical fashion. From the top of the hill they rolled great balls of tough paper, which broke on the rocks and scattered burning acids and noxious gases. Directly above the point where we three lay there was a well-defined hummock which deflected these hideous implements of warfare, else I should not have survived that experience. Of those who were not so protected few escaped. The whole side of the hill, for half a mile, was covered with dead and dying.

During the night the firing on the east had diminished, but with the dawn it opened again, and the heavens were rent with the crash and roar of mighty guns, which continued all day without intermission. The firing above us ceased, however, and the horrible balls of acid came no longer. Lowenberg concluded that the French ammunition had given out and that an attack was again possible. A single regiment had been left behind as a reserve. An orderly was sent back, and presently we heard the bugle sound the advance.

It was a magnificent sight to see them come from the woods and climb the slope. They adopted the Indian style of advance, in open order, sneaking from rock to rock—there were no trees to give shelter. When they reached us we rose and led them. I kept near Fleischmann, who was jealously guarding Lowenberg. On we went, a few yards at a time. We were less than a hundred yards from the top when the bugler at Lowenberg's side gave the signal for a rush. As the clear note rang out the men straightened from their crouching positions and, drawing together, went up on the run, shouting their stirring war cry: "Vorwaerts, Preussen!"

As we reached the last yard of the ascent the very air over our heads burst into flame. Had we been a foot higher our whole line would have gone down as did the cavalry the night before. But the French aimed too high with this, their last volley, and the next moment we were upon them, clashing against a wall of bristling bayonets. Steel struck steel all along the line. Fleischmann had fallen back, slipping on a loose stone. Now he fairly leaped ahead of us, his great sabre sweeping down a row of bayonets as a scythe in ripe wheat. The French stood in a pit dug around the brow of the hill and fought like demons. There seemed to be thousands of them. Our revolvers were emptied immediately, and it was then a primitive fight—hand to hand, face to face, shoulder to shoulder. I struck out to right and left with but one idea—self-preservation. As in a dream I heard the deadly clash of metal, the puffing and grunting of straining men; the blasphemy; the shriek of the wounded.

Farther around the hill top our men were falling back; and farther yet they were clear inside the line, driving the French before them. A few of our men gathered about us, and, almost surrounded by the infuriated French, we held our own, fighting with the absolute desperation that comes into a man's heart but once in a lifetime. We were fairly walled in with the dead, yet as fast as they went down others came forward. There seemed to be no end to the cut and slash, the spurting of red blood, the glare of angry eyes looking into our own with murderous hate. Lowenberg was on my right; at his right Fleischmann, wielding his sabre like a flail. "Steady, boys," he cried, and again, "Steady. We'll have them on the run." But in my heart I knew that it could not be so; that we must go down in blood and dust, victims of a misguided principle.

Then an ugly, squat Frenchman, who had been felled some time before by one of Lowenberg's lightning strokes, wriggled up through the heap of dead, and with a desperate thrust sent his bayonet into Lowenberg's vitals. Ah, God, how it sickened me. My beloved friend sank with a gasp. A mist obscured my sight; for a moment I weakened and my sword wavered. Before I could recover, the butt of a musket appeared in the air immediately before me and descended upon my head. My ears rang like a foundry. The whole world seemed suddenly to be whirling like a Fourth of July pinwheel, with multitudes of sparks flying. I tottered backward and fell heavily upon the pile of dead in the trench. As I went down I looked at Fleischmann. He stood erect, with feet well spread, like some great war-god, a sabre in each hand, hewing, smashing, cutting, his lips compressed, his jaws set with determination. He had thrown away his coat long before; his hat was gone; a cut on his temple let the blood trickle down over his bronzed cheeks. Into my heart came a great love for this mighty fighter. Then my light went out and the horrid noise of war faded away into the great silence.

It was Fleischmann's voice in my ears that wakened me. I lay upon the grass in a small, open shed. He was bathing my head with cool water. Quickly recollection came back to me, and stung into activity by my supposed danger I rose to my feet. But the danger was past. Save for the dead and wounded there was not a Frenchman in sight. Fleischmann was as calm as before the fight began. He told me that just as he was about to give up, his comrades came to the rescue. We were in full possession, but at what a fearful cost! Out of ten thousand men barely five hundred to answer the call.

I found Lowenberg lying on a heap of straw, his light flickering, his mind wandering. At intervals he gave orders, cried out to his wife, or sang snatches of German ballads. One of his under officers, who was a physician, sat near. He shook his head in answer to my inquiry. There was no hope.

Presently my friend turned his head and looked at me with eyes suddenly grown clear. "Adams," he said, faintly, "tell the boys it was a good fight. They were true Prussians. And tell—tell his Majesty——" He half rose, and raised his arm with clenched fist. "For God and the Fatherland," he cried in ringing tones, and fell back dead.

We turned the French guns in the direction of the river and prepared to hold our little fort for the expected assault. For several hours there had been little or no firing to the east, where the main armies were engaged. It was late afternoon now. The sky was becoming overcast, and the wind was rising.

Presently the sound of firing rose again. All the guns in the world seemed to be going off at once. From our elevated position we could see far out on the plain. I picked up a glass from a dead officer and put it to my eyes. There lay the panorama of war. Like moving patches of dead grass appeared the opposing forces. The brown khaki of the Germans and the soft gray sea-island-cloth of the French gave distinction enough. There was no smoke, for this is the day of smokeless powder. The center of fighting appeared to be well down the bend of the Marne, and as I watched I could see that the water was full of black specks. The French were being forced into the river. A large body of the gray was hurrying up the river bank, making for the Monte Pelier crossing. And we with but half a thousand men to defend it!

The wind increased in force. The skies grew dark. And now, coming from the south, appeared a shoal of small airships, of a new, dirigible type, with fans and rudders. They circled above us, hardly a quarter of a mile away, and swung down toward the battlefield, heading into the gale in regular formation. And as I watched a strange thing happened. The ships were poised directly over the victorious Germans. Suddenly a series of peculiar popping reports came to my ears. I saw the Germans breaking, scattering, running away from the French. The ground beneath them, behind them, in front of them, sparkled, like the phosphorescent ocean. I saw the whole army moving north, a struggling, disorganized horde. They left behind them a brown track, and as the sky lightened for a moment I saw that the track was human—the bodies of men prone upon the earth. I called Fleischmann. "Look," I cried. "The army is retreating. See the sparks around them. What does it mean?"

He put the glasses to his eyes. "Ah, Himmel," he groaned. "It is dynamite, nitro-glycerine, some terrible explosive. They are sprinkling it from above. Our boys are being blown to pieces. We cannot escape." Before he could see more the sky became black with the approaching storm and the rain came down in sheets, shutting out the plain and the doomed army.

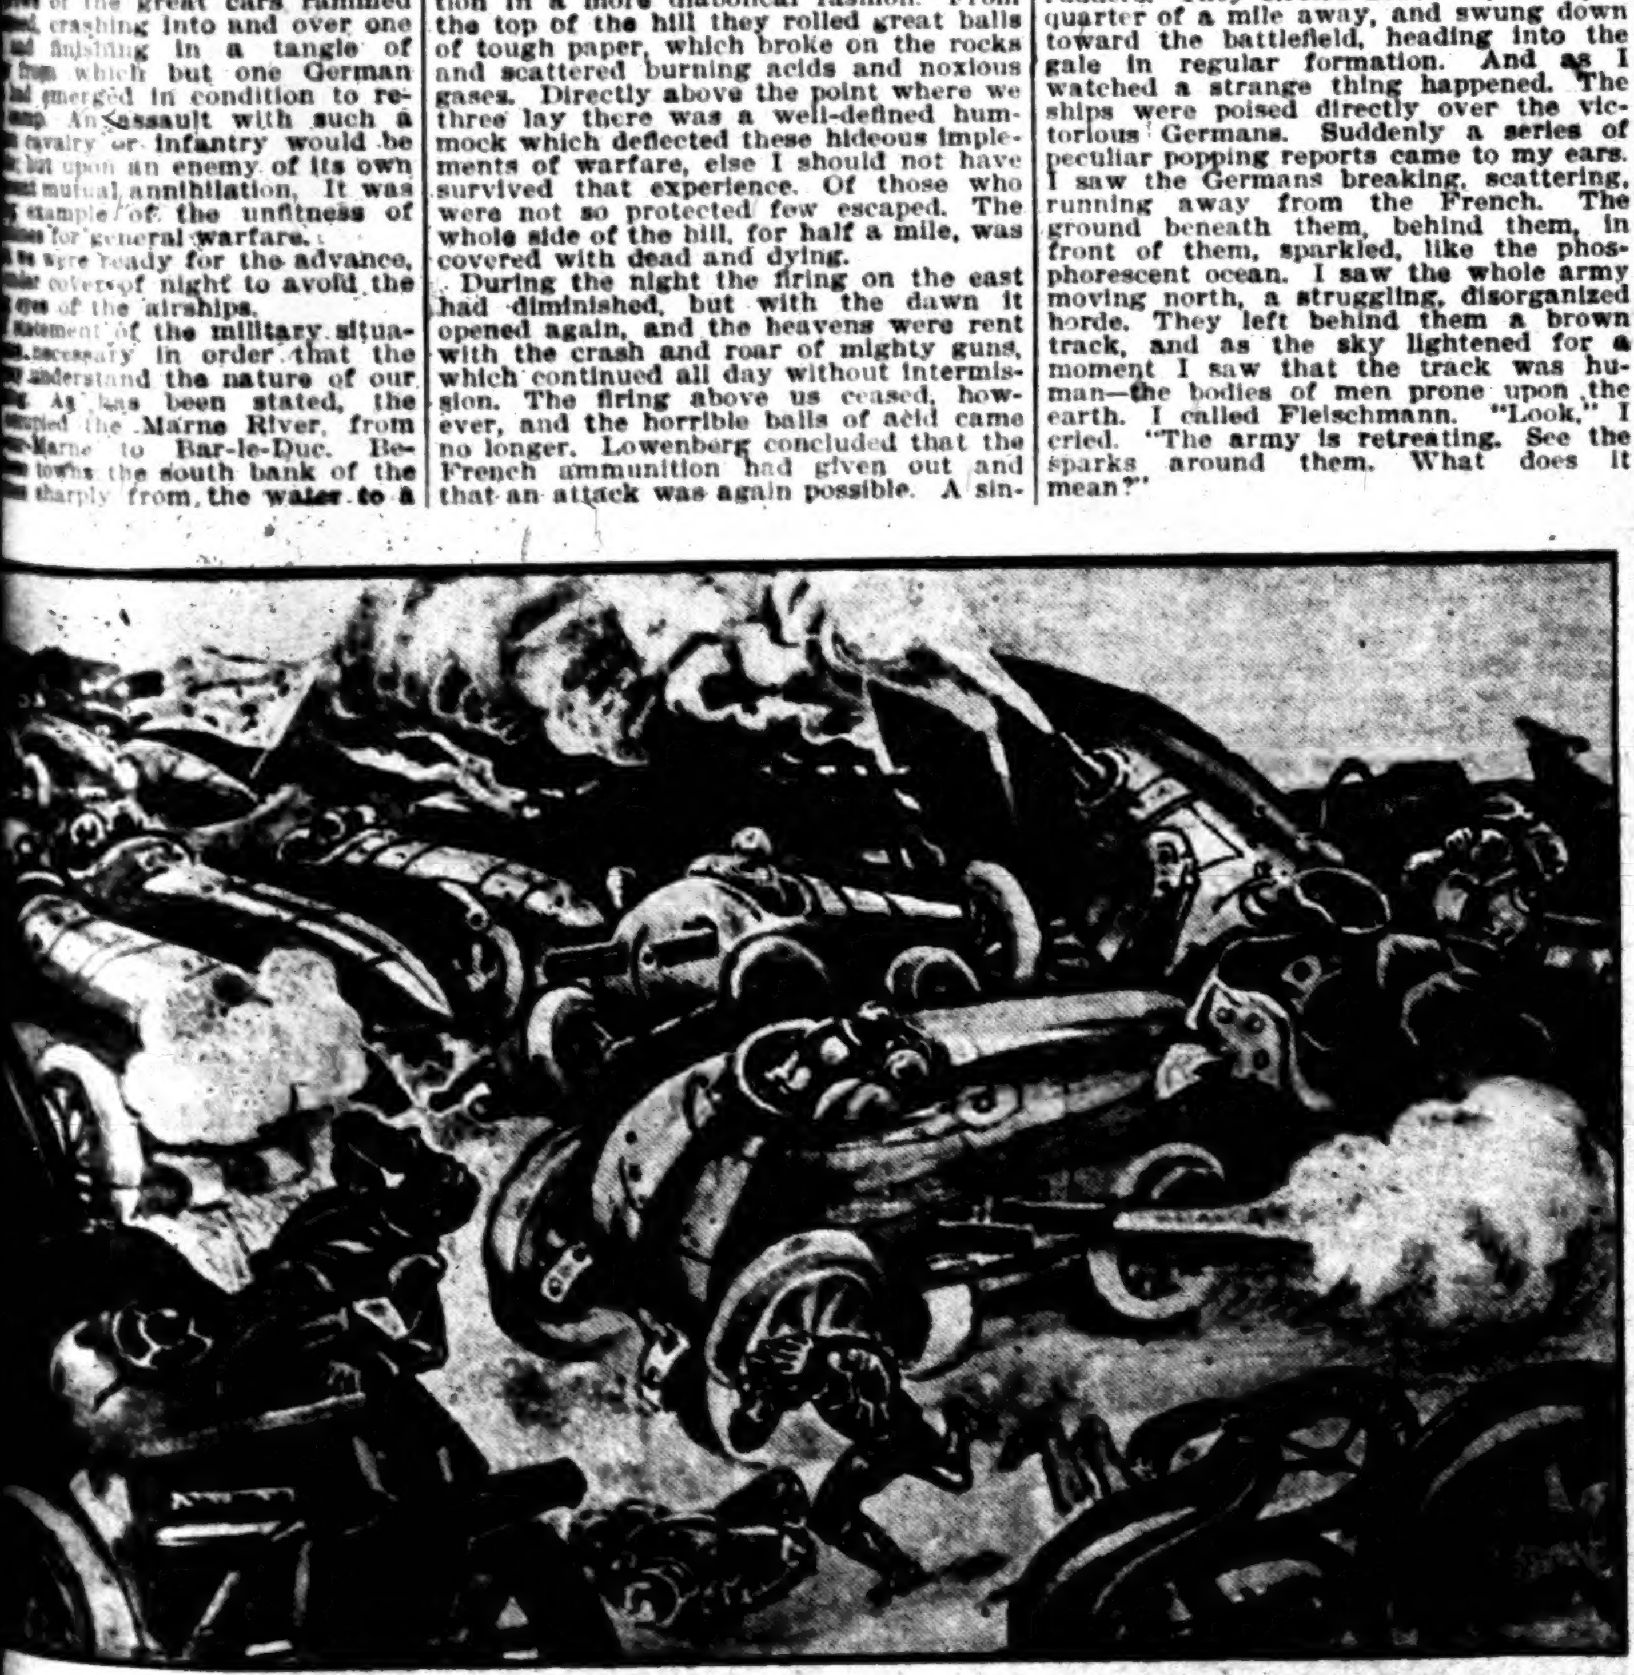
We took shelter under the little shed, depressed and silent. It was very dark. The wind blew fiercely. In spite of the rain, however, Fleischmann insisted on making a tour of the lines to see that the men were on guard. Faithful Fleischmann. Let me pay tribute here to your unwavering loyalty.

I had dropped into a doze, weary with the day's excitement, when there came a smash and the little shed tumbled about my ears. I heard a high-pitched humming in the air above me, like the drone of a bee's wings, many times intensified. Some enormous bulk hovered over me. I reached upward in involuntary defense, and my hands grasped what I knew instantly to be the basket of one of the dynamite ships. I was carried along with it, fearing to let go. My feet dragged over the ground, and the next moment I swung off into space, but I kept my wits, and, throwing a leg over the edge of the basket, clambered in. Though it was intensely dark I knew that I was rising. I felt around the basket. It was unoccupied save by myself. In one corner a small motor sparkled, going at high speed. I had been sufficiently associated with aeronauts to know that this controlled the steering fans, but that the ship would float without its operation. And with a shrewd suspicion that I might want the power later I switched off the current. The humming stopped and I floated as in a subterranean lake.

I was very tired. My head was aching and I realized that I had not eaten for a day and a night. Fumbling around I found another switch, and, turning it, was delighted by the illumination of the interior of the basket from several tiny incandescent lamps. In one corner stood a wicker hamper, labeled "Provisio." I opened it eagerly and found a supply of crackers, cheese, sardines, canned meat and sweet chocolate. A rack on the side held three tins of water. So, in reasonable comfort, I sat there in the basket and ate my lunch. The rain had ceased; the wind fell; far above me appeared a pale mist, through which the moon broke in mellow light. The mysterious silence, the absence of apparent motion as I sailed through that moonlit sea, brought peace to my mind. I thought quietly of Aimee; of Lowenberg, dead and gone; of brave Fleischmann left behind in the little fort; of all the happenings of that terrible fight. It seemed far away, as though in the dead past a thousand years ago.

And when I had thought until I was weary, I sent up to God a little prayer for courage, knowing that my life was in imminent danger, and then lay me down to sleep.

(To be continued.)



"THE TWO FORCES CAME TOGETHER IN A TERRIFIC CHARGE."

AND THEY NEVER KNEW.

A Little Story of Real Life.

The great financier buried his face in his hands as a great flood of bitterness crowded his soul. He had locked the door of his private office and denied himself to every one all morning, just as years before he had shut the world and its people from his heart.

When but a child he had been branded as a "bad boy," and other children were forbidden to play with him. He had grown up asking himself why no one loved him. That he was bad he had learned as a parrot would, but the real meaning was too vague to be understood by his childish mind.

At school no one had understood him. Once, when he was disobedient, a plan had been conceived to punish his favorite teacher. He was so grieved that he ran away for fear he might again cause pain or punishment to the one he loved. No one came and asked why he did so—he was expelled.

That to starve, to die, was better than to live without sympathy, had been his early conclusion, for truly was he being eaten up with a gnawing hunger for sympathy and companionship.

Once, when he was a young business man, successful, indeed, because he gave his life—his whole energy—to work, some one started a report that he was dishonest in a deal.

He cried out against the injustice of a world which would not see. He was tried, and the judge, who, no doubt, meant to be honest, decided against him, because circumstances were not in his favor.

Not one came to say, "I know, I believe you are honest." No wonder, like a haunted thing which would fly to shelter from the eyes of the world, he lived alone in his grief of being misunderstood.

Years after, when it was found that he was honest, that he had been falsely accused, no one came to rejoice with him—and he cared but little, but realized anew how little the world cared to be just.

His eyes were kind and seemed to appeal to you to respond, but his mouth was set and firm, and lines, which once expressed sweetness, had now deepened into furrows of care and coldness.

As he sat there dreaming his life over, he wondered who was ever denied sympathy as he.

A rap came on the door, and he admitted his bookkeeper, a woman. She looked frightened, and there were traces of tears in her eyes.

He asked her to be seated. Any one in trouble was welcome, particularly this woman, whom he had more than admired.

"I have come," she said, "to ask what you are going to do with me. There is money missing from the safe. There is no way to prove my innocence, for I believe I alone have the combination, and I am too poor to return the money. Of course, you cannot know or understand that I would not steal"—and the woman wept bitterly.

"Why do you say I cannot understand?" he asked.

"I do not know," she said. "I only felt you would not—no one ever does. We are born in one sphere and forced to live in another, where it is all mistrust and bitterness."

"I do know; I do understand," he replied.

The woman looked at him through her tears and saw two great eyes of kindness, yet she dared not believe.

"You really do not think I took the money?" she asked.

"And if I didn't would you care, other than for the disgrace?"

"Yes, oh yes! I should want you to think me honest, because I know how you hate dishonesty."

"Then I do believe in your innocence. There are none who can so sympathise as those who have suffered, and I only hope you may never suffer as I have."

"But you, sir, are rich," she said.

"Yes, in money, but as for friends—I have none."

How she wished to tell him how she admired and loved him! But she was a woman, and only a bookkeeper, so she thanked him for his trust in her, but forgot to offer him the word of sympathy, and he, thinking no one could love him, mistook her modesty for indifference.

So the word which trembled on his lips when he saw her troubled was left unsaid.

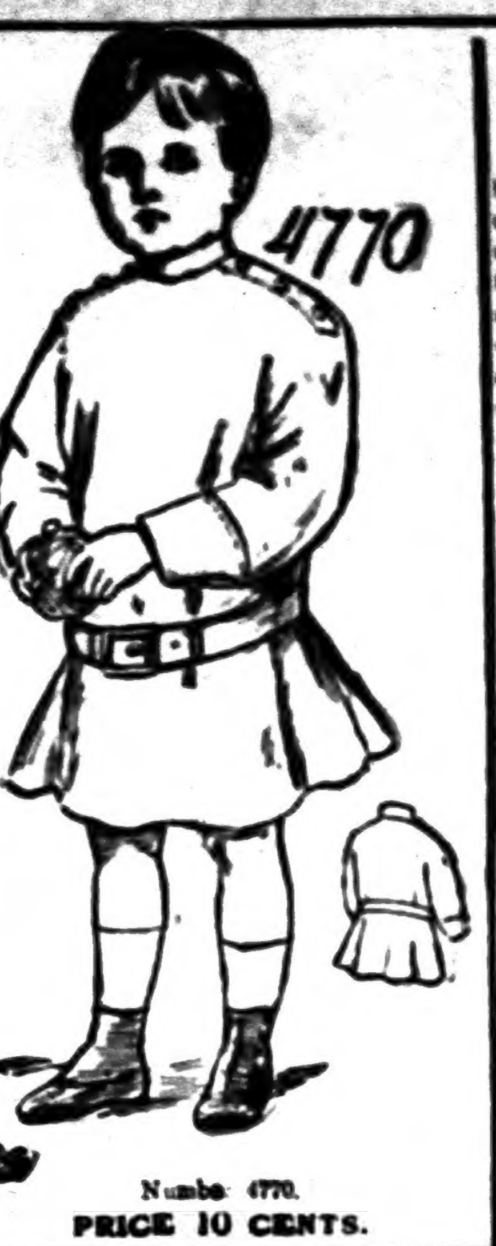
PALISADE PATTERNS.



Number 4770.
PRICE 10 CENTS.

A MAJOR DRESS FOR THE BOY OR GIRL.

Mother is always glad of new ideas in frocks for her young offspring and the one sketched here is excellent in style and practicability. The frock is in one piece and thus easily put off and on. It has the further advantage of closing on the shoulders, being slipped on over the head and buttoned along shoulder pieces which resemble epaulets and give a broadening effect. A pretty stitched cuff completes the sleeve and reinforces a place which is subject to much wear. The frock is belted in long waisted manner and leather is the best material for the belt. A crash or serge would serve as a resister of wear and soil, and with a belt and shoulder buttons of red, the frock would be quite fetching. For the medium size 2 yards of 36-inch material are needed.

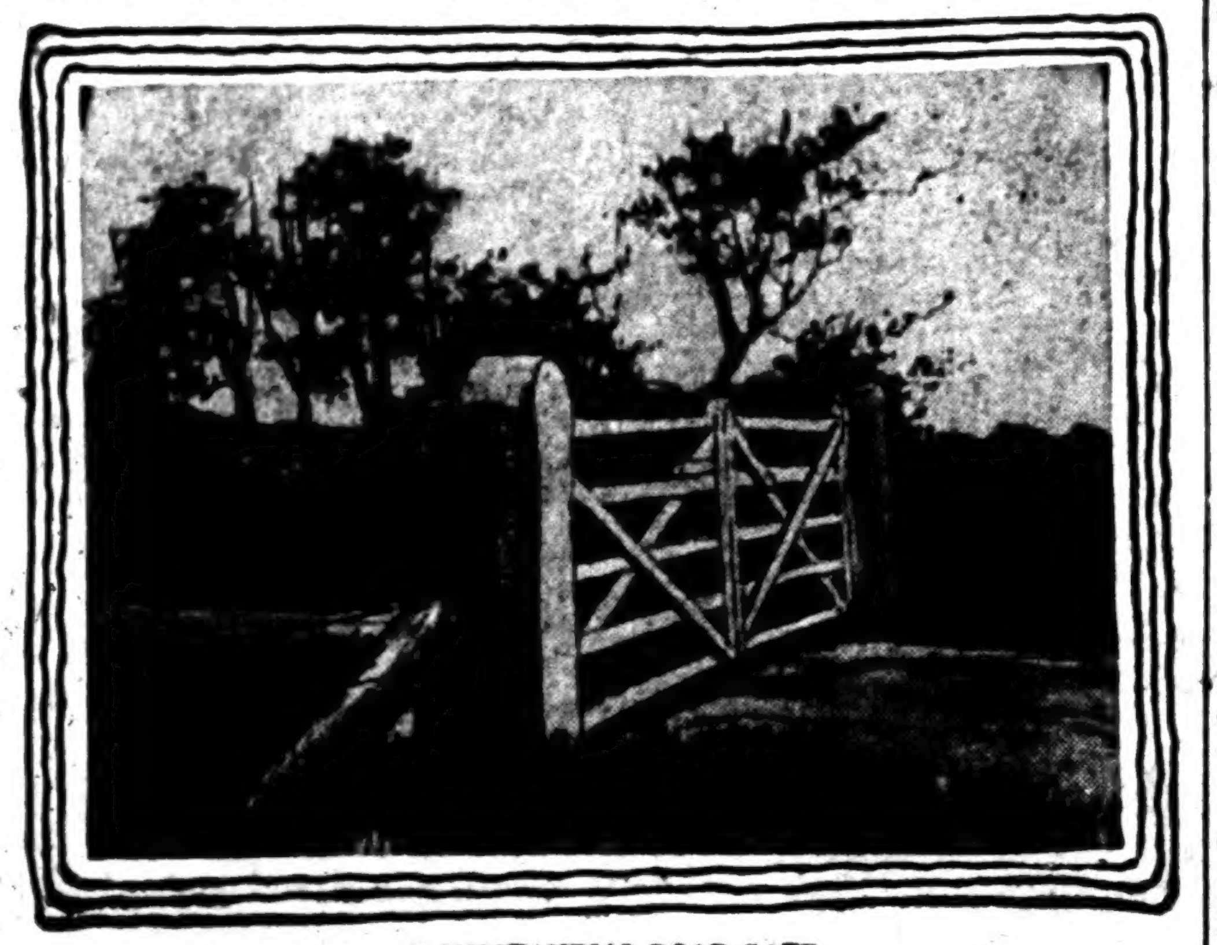
FENCES AND GATE POSTS.

GUY ELLIOTT MITCHELL.

The depletion of the timber lot and the gradual decrease in the supply of lumber, with the consequent increase in the cost of wood, make the erection of fences on the farm a matter of concern, for the landholder heretofore has looked upon wood as a proper material for the construction of an effective fence. Metal—that is, fence wire—has almost entirely replaced the rails which at one time were considered necessary to make a fence stock-proof. We still find, however, that timber is, in most localities, the cheapest material for fence posts, though the supply available is becoming scarcer each year, and it is possible that in the future it may be necessary in every section of the country to use posts made of iron or concrete, even as is now done in many places.



A SUBSTANTIAL ROAD GATE.

An essential feature of a rail fence is a comparatively short panel, but now that wire is, in the majority of cases, taking the place of the rail, it is questionable whether as many posts are necessary as was the case when rail were used. Recent tests were made at an English experiment station to determine upon the best method of constructing a fence. One point considered was whether a fence constructed with a dropper is as efficient and durable as one constructed entirely with posts. A second point under consideration was the minimum number of posts required in the construction of an efficient and durable fence when droppers are used and the character of the dropper required for best results. The dropper is a thin vertical brace used to strengthen the stretch of wire between posts. As metal is admittedly more durable than wood, an endeavor was made to obtain a suitable rigid metal dropper, but without success.

NOTCH THE CORNER POSTS LOW.

An error that farmers sometimes make in erecting a fence is that they place the corner supports or struts too near the top of the post, and consequently at too great an angle with the line of the fence, so that when the wires are stretched tightly the post is pulled out of the ground, notwithstanding that huge bowlders are piled against the post or hung on it, in an endeavor to keep it in the ground. One fence which has been found to prove very satisfactory consists of square posts and top rail, with three or four rows of plain wire fastened on the outside edges of the post, instead of through holes bored in the uprights. To these wires is fastened ordinary poultry netting with, say, an inch and a-half or two-inch mesh. This netting may be strained very tight and will lie as flat as a board, the appearance of the fence being thereby greatly improved.

While the use of barb-wire in the construction of fences is regretted, owing to the injury which it sometimes inflicts upon the live stock, there is no doubt that its employment under certain conditions prolongs the life of a fence, deterring stock from rubbing against it and unduly straining the plain wires. It has been argued that stock soon get to understand how dangerous barb-wire is, and when in a quiet condition are rarely injured by it; but once excited by panic or play they forget its danger and often suffer in consequence. While there may be some styles of woven fence which will enable the farmer to discontinue barb-wire, the new material must have sufficient elasticity to recover from occasional very severe and unusual strains and also sufficient to respond to our varied conditions of heat and cold, and so require no straining after its erection. The American fence manufacturers seem to be ahead of the Europeans in the production of wire fences, for it is possible to obtain from them fences constructed entirely of metal at small cost.

While the unprogressive farmer is content to have a few bars to let down in order to admit of the passage of teams or wagons, no fence is complete without an entrance, and therefore without a gate, for at best bars are only makeshifts and a loss of both time and temper. It is surprising how common they are when excellent and serviceable light gates can now be purchased very cheaply and even where the lack of money is an obstacle to this a handy man can, with the aid of an axe, a hammer and some nails build and hang a strong useful gate with no other outlay than the expenditure of a few hours' labor and certainly in less time than is required in the continual putting down and up of the bars.

Experiment has shown that it is advisable to have the openings of the farm gates 16 feet wide or thereabouts in order to admit of the transfer of the farm implements from one field to another. Where some fields are planted with small green crops from which the farmer desires to keep his poultry it is thought best that the bottom rail of this gate should be within an inch of the ground so that the poultry cannot crawl under. The gate posts should be quite separate and distinct from any posts used in the construction of the fence, as a better effect is obtained without additional trouble if they are slightly higher than the uprights in the gate and higher than the fence posts adjoining the gateway. The main entrance to the farm and also the gateways around the dwelling may be still further improved if a little additional trouble is taken to square the gate posts and round off the tops.

No gate can be said to be finished until it is painted, for not only does painting aid in giving a tidy appearance, but prolongs the life of the wood. It will be better and a saving of time if the timber after being cut up for the gates is given a couple of coats of paint before being put together. After the gate is completed and hung, it can be given a final coat. The first or priming coat should be very thin; in fact, may be nearly all raw linseed oil. The second and last coats will, of course, be a little thicker, and in order to dry hard, and with a little gloss, should contain a small quantity of turpentine and boiled oil. While tastes may differ as to color, results have shown that white seems to give the most satisfaction, while the iron work painted black will make a slight contrast, adding to the improved appearance of the gateway.

STILL USE DASHER CHURNS.

Even in this Day of Creameries, Butter is Made in the Good Old-Fashioned Way.

The chances are ten to one or better that the butter you buy at the grocery store now was made in a creamery, for the great bulk of the butter consumed in this country is made in milk establishments. But there is still some butter made by hand, and "we still sell churns right along."

The greater number of the individual churns now sold, said a churn manufacturer in Chicago recently, in speaking of the growth of the creamery business, are of the cylinder type, operated by a crank, turning within the churn a wheel with paddles, sometimes like the paddlewheel of a steamboat; but we still sell as well, churns of the old-fashioned type, such as our grandmothers used, and such as their grandmothers used before them. I might add that the old-fashioned dasher churn is still, as it has always been, painted blue.

Who still buys these old styles hand churns in the day of machine-made butter? Why, so to speak, the oldest people, and the most modern, too.

They are bought by small farmers keeping only one or a few cows, who naturally continue to make their own butter, and who make it, of course, with a hand churn. Some of these farmers might make more butter than they would require for their own use; and the surplus they would sell, as they would their surplus eggs, to the country store.

And you find larger farmers, too, farmers perhaps keeping many cows and selling the bulk of their milk to a creamery, still continuing to make the butter that they need for themselves and making it, as they have always done, in a hand churn.

Such churns are sold to people living in suburban or country homes and keeping cows, who make their own butter because they prefer to, anyway, and they are bought by various people everywhere who want sweet or unsalted butter and who make it for themselves in hand churns.

America exports churns to the West Indies and South America and to New Zealand and Australia and to dairying countries in various other parts of the world; but we still supply our own people with the old-fashioned dasher as we did twenty years ago.

TO TACKLE HAZERS.

The hazing trials at Annapolis, followed by the long discussion of the subject in and out of Congress, have served to widely advertise the Academy, and, as a result, there has been an unusual rush of applications from ambitious young men who aspire to become admirals. Many of the applicants breathe defiance to all hazers and recite instances of their physical powers to demonstrate their fitness for appointment. One of the letters recently received at the Navy Department ran as follows:

"I play football, have been captain of the basketball team these last two years. I am also an expert with boxing gloves, and would like to have some of the Annapolis fellows try their hazing tricks on me. I imagine they would have to get real busy if they tried to stand me on my head and make me eat soap."

CONSOLIDATED SCHOOLS.

Assistant Secretary Hays Points Out Necessity for More Thorough Farm Education. Is in Effect a Country High School.

The consolidated school question is a feature of the country school education problem which is rapidly coming to the fore, especially in the northwest, and it promises much for better farm education. The proposition is that six or seven or ten of the cross-roads schools in any rural district shall be combined into one larger school and were it not for the question of transportation of the scholars to and from the central school, it would undoubtedly meet with universal favor. From an educational point of view the advantages of the consolidated school plan are very great. Assistant Secretary of Agriculture Hays is an enthusiastic advocate of the plan and states that where the plan has been put into operation the beneficial results have been manifold. The question has been agitated to a considerable extent in his own State of Minnesota, due largely to his own efforts. Professor Hays is thoroughly alive to the fact that a better scheme of education is needed for the farm boy if he is to keep his foremost position among the world's agriculturists.

FOR BETTER FARM EDUCATION.

The time, Professor Hays says, has gone by when an "ordinary" school education will serve for the farm boy. The three R's are not sufficient to enable him to succeed in life. He must have special education for farming just as the young man or woman who is to enter professional life has special instruction along the lines he expects to follow. And so the consolidated school comes in, with its better educational facilities.

Canada has taken an advanced stand on this question and is consolidating her country schools. In a word the farmer's children are being given the advantages of a high school education.

As President Creelman, of the Ontario Agricultural College has pointed out, the system undoubtedly is, from a standpoint of dollars and cents, more expensive, for the first few years at least; but the rural ratepayer has it to decide for himself whether he would rather pay five dollars more per year and secure for his boy or girl such increased benefits as the consolidated school can give or leave them in the hands of an inexperienced girl teacher who perhaps does her best in a little one-roomed school, without facilities of demonstration of any kind.

PRACTICAL FARM SCIENCE.

One of the most important features of these schools is the school garden, where practical farm science is taught in a practical way. Such gardens are not, however, confined to the consolidated schools, but are now being kept in connection with a number of the more progressive district schools in various parts of the country. They are usually from two to three acres in area, divided into experimental and individual plots for each of the pupils, ranging in size from six feet square to six by ten or even twenty.

The general plan of laying out each garden involves (1) a belt of native trees and shrubs surrounding the grounds; (2) a half-acre playfield for the boys; (3) a lawn bordered with shade trees for the girls; (4) a shaded walk each for boys and girls, about a hundred yards long; (5) an attractive approach to the school, consisting chiefly of a piece of open lawn, with shrubs and flowers on either side; (6) a suitable reservation for individuals and class plots; (7) an orchard plot or border; (8) a forest plot in which the chief native trees are grown from the seed.

PLANTS GROWN BY PUPILS.

The ordinary range of vegetables and a selection of flowering plants are grown in these gardens, the pupils themselves furnishing the necessary work. In the large schools two hours each week are found sufficient for the garden work, and one hour in the smaller, in both cases under the supervision of the teacher or a special instructor. The school garden serves a double purpose, since it not only provides the most practical form of nature study but acts as a valuable incentive in the general school work. It is no uncommon sight during the summer season to see a public school in session out of doors, not with slate and pencil but with hoe and shovel. The pupils thoroughly enjoy it. They are allowed the proceeds of their plots as their own property and in addition may take home the plants left over from thinning out. The class plots are reserved as a source of revenue for the school and as a supply, in some cases, for the school lunches.

JOE, THE INDIAN DOG.

From Sunset.

"Did he ever make friends with the battery boys?"

"No," said Sergeant Wright, "he never did. I understand dogs, and I know that our dog Joe died of a broken heart at Fort Stevens, at the mouth of the Columbia, and we gave him a sort of informal military funeral and buried him where the moaning of the bar is always heard.

There had been a battle near the Yellowstone, and the Nez Perces had gradually had to give way and retreat as the dusk drew down to hide the damage of the day. But all the warriors did not go. Among the rocks up the cañon, nine of them lay in one heap, seven in another, at rest at last. Four dogs were there doing the Casabianca act, and a soldier lassoed one of them in form and color like a fox, and brought him into camp.

Joe was the name given him, and day after day he was led by some member of the company until the long fifteen-hundred-mile march was ended. He tolerated the portion of the rations handed him, but never smiled in return, and merely ate to live. He conformed to constituted authority as a matter of common sense, and on the long steamboat trip down the Missouri to Omaha, across by rail to the Pacific and up the coast to Oregon, he was the same dignified dog, always with an ear askance, anticipating the footstep of his Indian comrade.

But it never came.

No soldier had learned to love him, but all respected him for fidelity to his dead master.

IMMIGRATION LEGISLATION.

The Committee on Immigration of the House of Representatives has reported a bill raising the head tax on aliens from $2 to $5, requiring each male adult to possess not less than $25 and each female $15, providing that every immigrant over 16 years shall be able to read and write in some language, and placing in the excluded class imbeciles, the weak-minded and manual laborers of poor physique. The Department of Commerce and Labor is given discretion to admit or exclude immigrants under 16 years of age coming to this country alone. The proposed law, it is stated, would sift out a good many undesirable persons.

IMITATORS

5 REASONS 5

Why the Gigantic Sale Inaugurated by Damsky Bros. & Touro is a success

Reason 1. Because our advertising is honest.

Reason 2. Because every statement we make is correct

Reason 3. Because our prices make it expensive for you to buy elsewhere.

Reason 4. Because what we say today is not unsaid tomorrow.

Reason 5. Because you get your money back on unsatisfactory purchases and no questions asked.

The great crowds which daily attended the Bargain Carnival and the heavy buying indulged by shrewd shoppers has been something of a revelation in the merchandising annals of Clanton. It shows that the people appreciate bargains and they surely GOT 'EM.

The good natured crowds which attended the sale all went away loaded down with packages and smiling faces.

For the following days of the Big Sale we will endeavor to put forth such bewildering Bargains that they will entirely eclipse all former efforts in bargain giving. Odds and ends, broken lines, will be cleaned up, irrespective of cost conditions.

The stock is not quite as large as at the opening, but the bargains are more alluring.

Don't miss this golden opportunity. Saturday will be the Gala Day, the last Day. Bring the children and look for the

BIG RED CANVAS FRONT

P. S. This is the only bona fide sale presently in Clanton. All others are "fakes," got up to take advantage of our advertising.

Paint! Paint!

Now is the time to give your house a new coat of paint, and we have the paint that will wear well and please you.

Our Sun Proof has proven to be what we claim for it, a thoroughly good paint. The handsome school house in Clanton is painted with it; the new two-story hotel belonging to Mr. W. M. Wilson, will be an attractive building indeed when Mr. R. J. Lake finishes it with a few coats of Sun Proof Paint. The Capitol of Alabama is also painted with Sun Proof, just recently finished, and if this paint was not good it would not be used on the above buildings.

The old reliable Hammar Paint is too well known throughout the county to need further praise, has been sold in Clanton eight or ten years. So let us furnish you the paint you may need from time to time, will appreciate your trade.

HOSPITALITY OF THE WOOD.

Open your doors, O ancient Wood,
From Care and her vexing brood
To you I fly, and sore forspent
I yield me now to your intent.
Oh, take me in and grant me boon
To lay aside my staff and shoon.
From worldly soilure wash me clean,
And house me in your hostel green!

Fling wide your doors, O friendly Wood!
And bid me welcome to your good.
Spread forth on hospitable board
The cheer your centuries have stored,
Give me to drink the healing balm
Of your profound, primeval calm,
Plenish my soul, arm and sustain,
My faltering will and wearied brain!

Open your doors, O dreaming Wood!
I fain would take your mind and mood,
Till Nature's unnamed song I hear,
She croons when there is no one near.
Beneath your roof O let me dream
Till on my sight such visions gleam
As jocund Nymph and Faun beheld
In primal, golden days of eld!

Faith on Trial.

A SHORT STORY

WHAT is it makes you so glum, old man?"

The speaker was a young man of twenty-eight and the man addressed was about the same age. There was, however, a striking contrast between the two. The first was the less interesting of the two, his square face, firm jaw and solidly built frame seemed to proclaim him an admirable specimen of the average man, so full of common sense as to have no room for ideals. His companion was, on the contrary, a noticeable man. A man, it could be seen, filled with quixotic notions, a poetical and highly strung temperament, the chief visible sign of which was the finely formed nose and sensitive nostril. The friends, for such they were, walked slowly along the Thames embankment in full enjoyment of a surprisingly mild morning in March. When they reached Cleopatra's Needle, Martin Atock made the remark with which our record of a remarkable episode opens. His companion, Richard Lyon, replied somewhat gloomily, "Because I have lost all faith in womanhood."

His friend, surprised, exclaimed, "By Jove! What a loss."

"It is a loss, a very great loss," said Lyon with emphasis, and added as he grasped Atock's arm:

"I did not tell you I am engaged to be married."

"Married! By Gad, you surprise me. Not knowing the lady, I suppose I can't congratulate you, and knowing you so well, with your poetic fads and fancies, I'm afraid I can't congratulate her! That's the situation, I fancy. Seriously, dear boy, I'm delighted. But are you sorry that you're about to be tied up? Is that what's the matter? And where does the loss of faith in womanhood come in?"

"Let us take one of the seats in the garden for a moment, and perhaps when I tell you the facts you can help me."

They seated themselves, and Lyon, tapping the sole of his boot with his stick as he rested one leg on the other, said slowly:

"I am, as I told you, engaged to be married."

"And I have congratulated you on the fact," said Atock. "I hope you'll be very happy."

"Yes; but I've got myself into a horrid mess, in this way. I have been engaged now three months, and the day before yesterday I wrote a long letter to my fiancee."

"Well, that was not a very wrong thing to do."

"Will you listen? I wrote to her as one does to the girl one hopes to make one's wife. Naturally I used very strong terms of endearment, and I am worried to death by the fact that writing in my office, as I did, in a hurry I put my letter into an envelope addressed to a girl I have only seen once and never said more than 'It's a fine day' to."

"Well, there's nothing criminal in all this. The recipient may smile or laugh at you, but if she's a lady she'll return the letter, without a word, and by and by you'll both forget all about it."

"What worries me, Martin, is this: I wrote, as I told you, in a very strong strain. I let my feelings run away with me, and I even had the temerity to ask my wife-to-be to come alone to my rooms at 7.30 to-night and promised to take her to the theatre."

"Yes; well, you think you've given the show away, so to speak, to a stranger. Is that it?"

"No," said Lyon shortly. "I did not mention my fiancee's name at all, so the person to whom the letter is addressed cannot be identified——"

"Then what in Heaven's name are you groaning about?" cried Atock, interrupting.

"Can't you see that there is something worse than what I have yet told you?"

"Dear old chap, tell me what it is," said Atock, fully won at last to view the matter in a serious light.

"The tragedy lies here," said Lyon. "I write and ask a lady to come to my rooms alone. The letter is addressed with, of course, the most honorable intention to my fiancee, but it reaches the hands of a lady who is an utter stranger to me!"

"Yes," said Atock, keeping a very serious face with an almost superhuman effort, "and the tragedy?"

"The tragedy is that she has accepted my invitation! She is coming to-night, she writes me, and even adds that she does not mind whether we go to the theatre or not."

"Well," said Atock, "that is awkward, I must admit. You're in a beastly fix. I'll tell you! I have it. You did not say you'd be alone. I'll be there with you. That will settle the matter, eh, my boy?"

"If it could have been so easily settled I wouldn't have bother you about it," said Lyon with marked vexation. "I told you I wrote a very stong letter, an impassioned love letter, in fact, and I said over and over again what delight it would be to me to see her—I mean my fiancee—alone for five minutes, for her old cat of an aunt never gives her a moment's peace."

"But, by the way, you don't mind letting me know the name of the girl——"

"Let you know! Certainly not. I wouldn't reveal it for worlds."

"I mean dear boy, the name of the girl you are to marry."

"Oh, I don't mind telling her name to you, of course. You've met her—Bessie Biddulph."

There was another pause and then Atock cried: "I have it! Why not get Bessie—I mean Miss Biddulph—to meet the lady."

"Really, you're getting to be idiotic," shouted Lyon. "A nice time I'd have explaining how the whole thing happened! I'd have to admit that my letter to Miss Biddulph went astray, and there's nothing in the letter to prove to whom it was addressed! It commences, 'My Darling Girl——'"

"Oh, Miss Biddulph knows you've only got one!" laughed Atock.

"Hang it all, can't you have sense?" said Richard, thoroughly irritated.

Seeing that his friend was truly perplexed, Atock began again:

"It is worrying, but where, to revert to my original question, does your gloominess and loss of faith in womanhood come in, and is there anything very, very incriminating in the contents of your letter?"

"Nothing incriminating, but how can one have any faith in woman if you can invite an almost unknown girl of undoubted social position and blameless antecedents in the manner I have told you, and, discover to your horror that such a proposal is accepted with alacrity? If one girl does such a thing, why not all?

"I mean to meet the girl," he went on savagely. "I've gained a lot by telling you about my worry, haven't I? I shall meet her and tell her it is all a mistake. I don't want to compromise her or myself. I might have called upon her; perhaps I'd better wire, but on the whole I think I shall see her—though I've no respect for the brazen baggage."

"She's not a brazen baggage," said Atock, with sudden warmth.

"How in Heaven's name do you know?" cried Lyon. "I never mentioned her name."

"No, you did not," said Martin, "but I think you should be just to the poor girl; you're a very fascinating fellow, you know, old chap, quite a lady-killer, you know!"

"Well, thank Heaven, I'm not an exasperating idiot. Thank Heaven, I've got ideals and live up to them. Thank Heaven I've reverence left for true womanhood, though that reverence has been rudely shaken by this—this—disgraceful parallelogram in petticoats as I believe O'Connell called a particularly offensive piece of womanhood. Thank Heaven——"

"Thank Heaven that you've got a friend who can help you out of the mess your high-flown ideas have got you into," said Atock. "I happen to know the lady you are speaking so disrespectfully about."

"You do?" cried Richard. "Who is she, then—for I shall not tell you, even if you're right?"

"Her name is Ada Beatrice Purser," said Martin solemnly.

Lyon gasped.

"She is a lady, for whom I have a profound respect," continued Atock. "I was with her when your letter arrived."

"And you respect a 'lady' who can accept such an invitation as was mine?" asked Richard.

"Certainly I can," calmly replied Atock. "You're not the only one engaged to be married, my boy. I am engaged to Miss Purser."

"Then what on earth is the meaning of her conduct?" asked Lyon.

"Simply this: I dined with the Pursers on Tuesday. Ada's father has consented to her marrying me. She received your letter in the envelope which you had addressed to her in reply to the questions on English literature which I had asked her to put to you under pretext of being a soul thirsting for knowledge. I know you are fond of being consulted as a kind of watchdog of knowledge. Of course, she could make neither head or tail of your letter, and I—I made her write and accept your invitation, which appointment, of course, she never intended to keep; and I—well, I called to see you this morning just to see the effect her letter had had on you. Of course, I did not know then that you were engaged to be married! So your faith in womanhood is still intact!"

"One's faith is, I suppose, stronger after such tests," said Richard, gravely; but he added, with a smile, "in future no more ambiguously addressed letters for me!"—New Haven Register.

Beware the Gasoline Torch.

In these days of the gasoline torch, a not infrequent method of removing paint, indoors and out, is by burning. It is the quickest and in many cases the most effective method, particularly where paint is several layers thick. But before allowing this process consult the agent of the insurance company carrying the risk of your house. Some companies forbid this method of removing paint and others will allow it by special permit. While with proper care the risk is not great, there is always the possible element of danger due to carelessness. As a rule the danger is greater inside than out. Never allow the use of the torch until you know that your insurance fully protects you in the event of resulting damage.—Good Housekeeping.

MADE FOR A PITTANCE.

German Exhibition Which Shows the Wage of the Poor.

The beggarly compensation received by the maker of lace by hand is comparable to the wages earned by those whose work figures in a home industry exposition now in progress at Berlin, referring to which Consul Hurst, of Plauen, writes as follows:

Everything that one naturally connects with a great fair is strikingly absent. The products of tenement and sweat shop, small piecework evolved by the needy, are laid bare to the public. Each exhibit is ticketed, setting forth the pay for piece, time employed in making, and the profit per hour. If the object itself does not particularly attract the attention of the visitor, the descriptive tag certainly appeals to him. A few examples may be given: A boy's suit of clothes, three pieces, made for about 17 cents; artistic wooden crucifix, carved at less than 2 cents an hour; 144 toy menagerie animals for 11 cents; putting up 1000 needles for less than 1 cent for the lot; mounting hooks and eyes on 360 cards, with 24 pair on each, altogether 17,280 pieces, for 28 cents, and an extreme case is that of a bit of lace from Plauen worked at the rate of about one-quarter cent an hour. Progress and poverty are nowhere more abruptly contrasted than in this pitiful display. Expressions of amazement and sympathy, manifested by the highest classes of society, are echoed throughout the German press.

WISE WORDS

Be good, and if you can, be clever.

The greatest art of life is that of living.

Sow a small joy and reap a great happiness.

Gilding the wagon does not ease the springs.

Boasting of our strength may blight our sympathy.

The human heart cannot be whole until it is broken.

To gaze upon life we should borrow no man's spectacles.

Gladness and gratitude are pleasanter emotions than pride.

The reward of mastering one difficulty is to meet another.

The man who thrusts benefit upon another expects to send in his bill.

When a man brags of a good deed it is because he knows so few of them.

He who knocks only once should not expect to enter; there are few easy doors.

Be sure no man was ever discontented with the world who did his duty in it.—Southey.

If men knew all that women think, they would be twenty times more audacious.—Karr.

Fate has tricky moods. We begin to cower before an expected blow, and she pelts us with rose leaves.

Most of us would be contented with what we have if only our neighbors would be satisfied with a little less.

It's a sad mistake to misjudge our limitations. He is doomed to disappointment who aspires to pluck a star.

A heart which has been domesticated by matrimony and maternity is as tranquil as a tame bullfinch.—Holmes.

Though he may walk stumblingly, we should not judge harshly the soul that has only the light of a tallow dip.

If I succeed to-day in doing a thing that is hard, the same thing will be easier for me to-morrow. If I yield to a difficulty to-day it will be all the harder to-morrow to resist.—G. S. Merriam.

The mind that is capable of rising the highest is also the mind that can sink the lowest. It takes a well developed mind to sound the depths of human infamy, no less than to climb to the summit of human greatness.

May we accept with more joyful hearts the simple blessings that supply our daily needs, the unnumbered comforts that minister to us on every hand, morning, noon and night, rising up about us and beseeching us to let them bless us.—George Rudolph Freeman.

Knew Nothing About His Policy.

Two men were walking down Broadway in New York during the Armstrong investigation. One asked, "Are you insured?"

"Yes, are you?" came from the second.

"Yes," he replied.

The first man asked, "What kind of a policy have you?" The friend thought for a moment and replied, sheepishly:

"I don't know."

"Well, what do you remember about your policy?" he asked. "Chiefly," replied the friend, "that I took it to oblige the father of a friend of mine, and that I had to pay a certain amount of money every year for it."

This man's case is typical of thousands who know nothing about one of the most important investments they have.—The World's Work.

A Favored Instrument.

The story is told in the Youth's Companion of a newly rich woman, who on the occasion of her daughter's wedding gave a large reception, for which music was furnished by an orchestra of twelve pieces.

The leader of this orchestra was a violinist who had achieved a social as well as a professional success, and the rich woman evidently wished to recognise this fact and make clear her knowledge of it.

When the evening was half over, the butler approached the musicians, who were having a short intermission, and in his loftiest manner he said, after referring to a paper in his hand:

"The violin eats in the dining room, the rest of the instruments eats in the pantry."

THE PULPIT.

A SCHOLARLY SUNDAY SERMON BY DR. CHARLES EDWARD LOCKE.

Subject: The Universal King.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—Dr. Charles Edward Locke, pastor of the Hanson Place M. E. Church, preached Sunday in the New York Avenue M. E. Church on "Jesus Christ the Universal King." The sermon was the annual one before the New York East Conference. The text was from Revelation xi:15: "The kingdoms of this world are become the kingdoms of our Lord and of His Christ." Among other things Dr. Locke said:

With His own hand God wrote on the foundations of history, "The seed of the woman shall bruise the serpent's head." On the radiant advent morning the angel said to the bewildered shepherds, "Behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people;" and, later, the Great Teacher Himself announced, "I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto Me!" Though Confucius died of a broken heart, fearing he had spoken no truths which would survive him, and Socrates drank in despondency the hemlock in his cave overlooking Athens, yet Jesus Christ, the world's Great Optimist, cried out in triumph in the midst of the agonies of the cross—"It is finished!" and Paradise Lost became Paradise Regained. John, the Revelator, in the seraphic isolation of his exile, saw in his vision the fulfillment of all these prophecies, and exultantly wrote, "The knigdoms of this world are become the kingdoms of our Lord and of His Christ."

It was a long looked for psychological moment when Bethlehem's star appeared above the dimpled hills of Judea. Civilization had slipped down from the hoary highlands of Bactria to the lowlands of Hindustan; it then moved westward, tarrying long enough to build its towers in Persia, its temples in Greece, its tombs in Egypt and its thrones in Rome. At its birth Christianity encountered the fierce opposition of emperors and armies. Rome was mistress of land and sea. The founder of Christianity was a Roman subject, its chief apostle a Roman citizen. The whole Roman empire was hurled across the path of the progress of Christ. His followers suffered, but in the sign of the cross they conquered.

Our forefathers bravely followed the guiding star to the summit of the Alleghany Mountains and fixed the western boundary of the new republic; but the years pushed the frontiers westward, and when at last against the prophecies of American statesmen the plains were crossed by the intrepid pioneer, then autocratic lawmakers defiantly announced that the serrated peaks of the Rocky Mountains would outline the western boundary of the nation, but steadily and gracefully moved that point of light until at last it mingled its silver beams with the golden embroidery of the sunset coast. Then even the wisest of modern magi thought that the star of empire had become a fixed star, but faithfully it has pursued its noiseless tread until to-day it is brilliantly shining above eastern archipelagoes and continents. We are the creatures of that star and must keep up with its aerial flight, for wherever it lingers there is another Bethlehem's cradle and another advent hymn.

Within the lifetime of many here present the star appeared in the Asiatic heavens and the angel choir again sang "Glory to God in the highest, on earth peace, good will to men." The year 1858 has been called the Annus Mirabilis of modern missions, and truly it was a "year wonderful," for the doors were opened to one thousand million of the human race. In that year India was transferred from the clutches of the avaricious East India Company to the British crown and Queen Victoria became Empress of India. By the Treaty of Tientsin the ports and interior of China were opened and the people were permitted to accept Christianity without persecution, and Japan, after 200 years of exclusion, made its treaty with Great Britain. Now, let us see how these great kingdoms of the earth are becoming the kingdoms of our Lord and of His Christ.

India has a population of 250,000,000 and an area of 1,860,600 square miles. Suttee, infanticide and the voracious juggernaut are gone forever. Because of the huge reservoirs constructed by English foresight famine is rapidly disappearing, and the gradual elevation of women is taking place. India will be Christian from the Himalayas to Ceylon, from Bombay to Calcutta.

China has had continuous authentic history for forty centuries. The first real character in Chinese history was the Emperor Yu, who ruled 2204 B. C. The Chinese are supposed to be the descendents of Shem, the oldest son of Noah. They settled on the banks of the Yellow River and established a kingdom coeval with Babylonia and Egypt, and before Abraham came out of Chaldea.

Four hundred and six millions of people and 4,225,000 square miles, and has a coast line of 2500 miles. The climate is very much like our own. There are broad rivers, lofty mountains and valleys of extraordinary fertility. There is vast mineral wealth. Beside iron, gold, silver and copper there are immense coal fields; all of which lie almost undisturbed waiting for the coming of the higher civilization which will some day adorn this drowsy nation. China lies partly in the temperate zone, where the greatest nations have developed and where the possibilities of power and permanency are assured.

They are an industrious people, always busy, quiet and peaceable. Whatever lethargy characterizes the country as a government, the typical Chinaman is a shrewd, active, successful toiler. The Chinese invented printing and gunpowder; first used the magnetic needle; made the finest porcelain and to-day manufacture the finest silk and the most exquisite embroidery.

They are an educated people. All candidates for official position—which is said to be the universal ambition of all Chinese—must pass difficult examinations. Of course I do not need to remind you that their standards of education are low; their astronomy is picturesquely mingled with astrology and all their science is pathetically behind the studies of the West.

They are a reverential people. They can hardly be said to be a very religious people. Their religion consists in rites and ceremonies rather than in doctrines and principles. The basis of government and society is the fifth commandment—filial devotion. Obedience to parents and respect for old age are everywhere persistently inculcated and practiced. Herein lies the secret of whatever of virtue and permanency may be found among Chinese. When a man reaches eighty years of age his name is reported to the Emperor, and a yellow robe is presented to him as a mark of imperial respect on the presumption that his life must have been virtuous or it would not have been prolonged.

All that China needs to make it a progressive and useful nation is Christianity, with its Christ and His institutions. They are a more promising people than were our ancestors in Britain before their conversion to Christianity through the preaching of Augustin and the graceful influence of Queen Bertha, the wife of Ethelbert. They have won their way by venerable age to everything which Occidental nations can do for them. Confucianism, with its negative virtues, and Buddhism, with its intangible mysteries, have been tried and found wanting. May China not be a nation which is to be born in a day? There is a tradition that the Apostle Thomas carried the Gospel first to China. As early as 1288 Pope Nicholas sent missionaries to China. There is a God in Heaven who has not forgotten the Chinaman.

What shall I say of Japan, the land of little people and of great deeds; of culture and courtesy, with a population of 45,000,000 living among 4000 islands whose area is 162,000 square miles—about three times the size of the State of New York? A phenomenal nation. Only thirty years ago it was a crime to accept Christianity in Japan. In 1860 an English sailing ship just returning from the Orient reached the Thames. On board were two Japanese youths, who had worked their way before the mast. Disconsolate and alone, they went to bed supperless that first night because all the crew had gone ashore. A few months ago one of those Japanese boys again returned to Great Britain. This time he was welcomed by the Lord Mayor and a distinguished company of such men as the Duke of Argyll and Lord Rosebery. He came as the guest of the city of London, and was lavishly entertained at the Mansion House. He was Marquis Ito, who has been four times the Prime Minister of Japan. This is a romantic epitome of the nation of Japan. Many of its statesmen are Christians. Admiral Togo has a Christian wife, and is himself not a pagan. In the recent war the bravest generals were Christian men. Japan was pagan yesterday, it is agnostic today, to-morrow it will be Christian.

Doubtless among the kingdoms of this world which the ecstatic John saw becoming the kingdoms of our Lord and of His Christ was the great empire of Russia. The Russians are a mighty, mysterious, paradoxical, providential people. Their ancestors are found among the ancient Scythians in Southern Europe five centuries before Christ, worshiping a sword fixed in the ground as an image of the god of war. Under the reign of Vladimer, 1000 A. D., the Russians became Christians, getting their religion not from Rome, but from Constantinople; hence they are Greek Christians.

The Russian has clear religious convictions and is devoted to the rites of his church. Senator Beveridge says: "The religious side of a Russian is all sides of him." His faith is serene and steady; the holy icons are reverently protected, and the devotion of the soldier is marked. Like Cromwell's army they often rush into battle with sacred songs on their lips.

Russia is in process of evolution. She is not "a bear that walks like a man," as Kipling said, but she is a man who has been acting like a bear. But it will be remembered that another nation in its developing history behaved so much like a quadruped that it will probably always be referred to as "Johnny Bull." Russia's medievalism is being rebuked, and her virility, and integrity, and faith, and enterprise will yet bring her forth into a full-orbed Christian nation.

By their men ye shall know them! If there have been cruel and heartless rulers, there have also been epoch-making leaders. A nation must have permanent qualities of greatness which can claim among its master minds such men as Prince Kuropatkin, De Witte, Verestchagin and Leo Tolstoy.

The Anglo-Saxon and the Slav are to be the two great regenerating influences of Asia—the former moving westward, the latter moving eastward. The future of the world must reckon with the Russian. Other races have had their chance and failed. The two great peoples who could emancipate their own slaves are destined to teach the liberty of Christ to the nations at the ends of the earth. It is true of the Russian as it is true of the Anglo-Saxon that he not only conquers, but he assimilates.

At the end of the first century there were in the world 5,000,000 Christians; at the end of the tenth century 10,000,000; at the end of the fifteenth century 100,000,000; at the end of the eighteenth century 200,000,000, and at the end of the ninteenth century 500,000,000 Christians. In 1600 the inhabited surface of the earth was 43,798,000 square miles, of which only 3,480,000 was Christian. In 1906 the inhabited surface of the globe is 53,401,400 square miles, of which 44,619,100 is Christian and only 8,782,300 non-Christian. Truly, "the kingdoms of this world are becoming the kingdoms of our Lord and His Christ!"

Expect Blessings.

Begin to-day with the determination to find blessing. His tender mercies are about us on every side. Be on the lookout for them and you will find them. "The more we look for them, the more of them we will see. Blessings brighten when we count them. Out of the determination of the heart the eyes see.

"If you want to be gloomy, there's gloom enough to keep you glum; if you want to be glad, there's gleam enough to keep you glad. Say, 'Bless the Lord, O my soul, and forget not all His benefits.' Better lose count in enumerating your blessings, than lose your blessings in telling over your troubles. 'Be thankful unto Him and bless His name!'"—Rev. G. R. Lunn, in Christian Intelligencer.

I gained ten pounds and am in perfect health."

Miss Pearl Ackers, of 327 North Summer Street, Nashville, Tenn., writes:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"I suffered with painful periods, severe backache, bearing-down pains, pains across the abdomen; was very nervous and irritable, and my trouble grew worse every month.

"My physician failed to help me and I decided to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I soon found it was doing me good. All my pains and aches disappeared, and I no longer fear my monthly periods."

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the unfailing cure for all these troubles. It strengthens the proper muscles, and displacement with all its horrors will no more crush you.

Backache, dizziness, fainting, bearing-down pains, disordered stomach, moodiness, dislike of friends and society—all symptoms of the one cause—will be quickly dispelled, and it will make you strong and well.

You can tell the story of your sufferings to a woman, and receive helpful advice free of cost. Address Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass. The present Mrs. Pinkham is the daughter-in-law of Lydia E. Pinkham and for twenty-five years she has, under her direction and since her decease, been advising sick women free of charge.

The Largest Book.

The biggest book in the world has just been found in the British Museum, where, like Turners pictures in the National Gallery, it lay unnoticed many years. The huge volume is a Dutch tome containing maps and descriptions of the world as it was known to the Dutch geographers of 1660. It is as tall as the average man, bein five feet ten inches high and four feet eight inches wide. It is superbly bound and decorated with gilt tooling and gold clasps. The gigantic title-page is hand illumined, the initial letters being of gold. The great volume was presented to King Charles II before his departure from Holland to go to England to claim the throne in 1660. The book came into the possession of George III, who presented it, with his library, to the British Museum.

His Soft Snap.

Paris has an artist who decorates "art" stockings, and his charges are from $120 a pair to almost any amount, according to design.

Monk Invented Roulette.

Strange as it may seem, the roulette wheel, that alluring machine by which so many fortunes have been won and lost (mostly lost), was devised by a monk, Pascal, during a six months' "retreat" for meditation and prayer. He probably little realised the gigantic popularity as a gambling device his simple invention would in later years attain. In Monte Carlo, the greatest gambling resort in the world, more than $5,000,000 are lost by players every year. The Casino at Monte Carlo is controlled by a firm which styles itself "The Sea Bathing and Strangers' Club Company." Though no one was ever known to dip a toe in the surf at Monte Carlo during the winter season, the profits of this company in the winter season of 1904-5 amounted to $7,204,999.

Artificial Surf Baths.

German lake resorts and other inland watering places are interested in a novel artificial surf bath which was tried last summer in the Starnberg Lake, near Munich. A big tank is built, or a portion of a lake or river is enclosed. At the outer end is placed the wave-making machinery, which consists of an oscillating partition of a large plunger, which is dropped into the water at regular intervals. The result is a curious substitute for natural waves.

AWFUL SUFFERING

From Dreadful Pains From Wound on Foot—System All Run Down—Miraculous Cure by Cuticura.

"Words cannot speak highly enough for the Cuticura Remedies. I am now seventy-two years of age. My system had been all run down. My blood was so bad that blood poisoning had set in. I had several doctors attending me, so finally I went to the hospital, where I was laid up for two months. My foot and ankle were almost beyond recognition. Dark blood flowed out of wounds in many places and I was so disheartened that I thought surely my last chance was slowly leaving me. As the foot did not improve you can readily imagine how I felt. I was simply disgusted and tired of life. I stood this pain, which was dreadful, for six months, and during this time I was not able to wear a shoe and not able to work. Some one spoke to me about Cuticura. The consequences were I bought a set of the Cuticura Remedies of one of my friends, who was a druggist, and the praise that I gave after the second application is beyond description; it seemed a miracle, for the Cuticura Remedies took effect immediately. I washed the foot with the Cuticura Soap before applying the Ointment, and I took the Resolvent at the same time. After two weeks' treatment my foot was healed completely. People who had seen my foot during my illness and who have seen it since the cure can hardly believe their own eyes. Robert Schoenhauer, Newburgh, N. Y. Aug. 21, 1905."

Great Churches of the World.

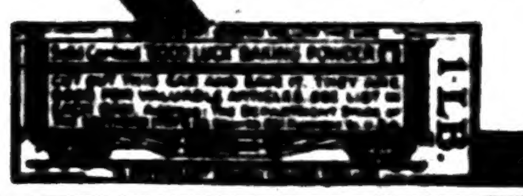
A Roman journal gives a list of the great churches of the world. The estimate allows four persons to every square yard of space available. Milan Cathedral stands at the head, with capacity for 37,000; St. Peter's hold 32,000; St. Paul's, 25,600. The capacity of San Petronio, Bologna, the Florence Cathedral and the Antwerp Cathedral is about 24,000 apiece; that of St. Sophia, Constantinople, is 23,000; that of St. John Lateran, Rome, about the same (22,900); that of Notre Dame, Paris, 21,000. These are the nine great churches of the world. The Pisa Cathedral comes tenth, with a capacity of 13,000. The cathedral of the City of Mexico and that of Notre Dame in Montreal are the two largest churches in North America, though they belong to the second class, with St. Stephen, Vienna (12,000), and St. Dominic, Bologna (12,000).

Marry and Live Long.

Marriage is an institution highly conducive to the health of both husband and wife. Statistics prove that among married men over 20 years of age and women over 40 the mortality rate is far less than among those who remain single. Among the widowed and divorced the mortality is exceptionally great. Suicides among the unmarried are much more numerous than among the married. The matrimonial state promotes temperance in every form. Furthermore, the probable duration of life of a married man of 30 exceeds that of his unmarried brother by five years, and the wife may expect to live one year longer than a single woman of the same age.

Japan Progressing.

A newspaper is now being printed in Tokio in Japanese, and English letters are being used. It is called the Romaji and seems to meet with approval among the Japanese.



A Double Saving

First: there's some money saved to your pocket every time you buy a pound of Good Luck Baking Powder—price only 10 cents per can. This is the purest and most reliable article on the market. Strength never varies. Every good cook who tries Good Luck becomes a steady user, but we couldn't sell such enormous quantities if we tried to make too much profit—therefore 10 cents a can.

A wonder of modern merchandising is GOOD LUCK Baking Powder

Second: you receive useful and elegant premiums for the Good Luck coupons (notice picture below), and there is a coupon on every can. Many clever women manage to furnish their homes and obtain handsome pieces of jewelry for themselves, all from these coupons.

Other baking powders claiming to be equal to Good Luck cost more, and bring you no premiums, either.

Discovery of Anthracite.

According to an article published half a century ago, anthracite coal aws discovered in 1791 around the Lehigh river in Pennsylvania. On the eastern side of the river in a log cabin lived a hunter named Philip Ginter, with his wife and child. After a poor breakfast in the year named he left his family in the cabin and sought to replenish his little store of food from the forest. His quest continued all day. As the shades of evening fell he found himself near the top of Sharp Mountain and many miles from home. A storm came on, and as he hastened on his way he stumbled over a fallen tree and a large black stone.

He had heard of "stone coal" existing in the mountains, and concluded this stone must be a specimen. He took a piece with him and later gave it to a Col. Jacob Weiss, who then resided near the site of the present Mauch Chunk. The latter sent the specimen for examination to Philadelphia, where it was passed upon by many alleged scientists.

It remained for Charley Cist, a printer, to declare that the specimen was anthracite coal. He asked Col. Weiss to reward Ginther and at the same time to secure as much land in the vicinity of the find as possible.

After the navigation of the Lehigh river had been improved by order of the legislature coal was brought down to some nail works at Fairmount. Even then it was only by accident it was discovered how to burn this hard coal. Such a fire as it made had never been seen before. The newspapers told the story and the character of the coal was established for all time.

The Sharp Mountain mine was an open quarry and enormous quantities of anthracite were taken from it. The veins of coal and slate were said to be seventy feet in thickness, and from it there were mined 850,000 tons. The Schuylkill region was opened in 1822, and soon proper grates were produced, and the hard coal trade became established. An era of speculation followed. Villages sprang up like mushrooms and adventurers flocked from all parts to Pottsville.

WASTED TO A SHADOW,

But Found a Cure After Fifteen Years of Suffering.

A. H. Stotts, messenger at the State Capitol, Columbus, O., says:

"For fifteen years I had kidney troubles, and though I doctored faithfully, could not find a cure. I had heavy backaches, dizzy headaches and terrible urinary disorders. One day I collapsed, fell insensible on the sidewalk, and then wasted away in bed for ten weeks. After being given up, I began using Doan's Kidney Pills. In a couple of months I regained my old health, and now weigh 188 pounds. Twelve boxes did it, and I have been well two years."

Oyster's Growth.

The oyster is not much larger than the head of a fair-sized pin at the end of a fortnight, and at three months about equal to a split pea. At the end of four years' growth it is fit for the market. Oysters live to the age of from twelve to fifteen years. According to one naturalist, these bivalves feed on monads—the most minute form of marine life.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever. Nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free. F. J. CHENEY & Co., Toledo, O.

THE MAN ON THE CORNER

Some of the Sights He Saw, and Some He Saw Not.

"Cyclone" Smith, after all, failed to appear on Wednesday, but in his place N. B. Williams of Montgomery made a good speech of about an hour's length on the cotton situation. He apologized for the non-appearance of Mr. Smith, who was in bed, sick, and spoke of the necessity of a thorough organization of the Southern people to get a fair price for the cotton crop. All are equally interested with the farmer—bankers, merchants and storekeepers, and with the help and assistance of all, the Association will proceed with the good work. Let the good work go on!

The Grand Jury, it is said, is doing good work, and lots of it. As regards the latter part there is no question, and it is much to be hoped that the first part will also be accomplished, for the county will have a pretty bill to pay. For days they have labored, and the end is not yet, although there are signs they may get through to-morrow (Thursday). Witnesses galore have been examined. "Many have been called and few chosen," and the "chosen" will wish they hadn't done it, for conviction will follow violations of law. This Grand Jury has, I believe, broken the record in the length of their being is session, but as long as it means an increase of respect for law and order, and redounds to the advantage of the county, it is well and good.

Billingsley, Ala., May 20, 1906

Dear Editor—I will give a few items from Billingsley. The health of this community is very good.

Mrs. W. W. Carter has regained her health and returned home from Montgomery, to the delight of her many friends.

We have two progressive Sabbath schools at this place and a great deal of interest is taken in the two schools.

We had a grand picnic at J. C. ...ne's mill Saturday last which was enjoyed by all.

The wedding bells will ring in Billingsley some time this week.

J. C. Grimes made a flying trip to Birmingham Tuesday.

The buzz of the Carter Lumber Co's saw can be heard every day.

Mr. and Mrs. W. A Gandy has returned from Chattanooga, where they went to attend the Baptist Convention.

Farmers are looking blue as crops are very backward around Billingsley.

I am glad that my lot has been cast among such good and generous people as I have found in Billingsley.

The political pot is beginning to boil in old Autauga There are 5 candidates for sheriff—all prominent men—all Democrats.

We have two turpentine distilleries here; both doing big business. The Carter Lumber Company is doing a big business. They pay good wages and pay off every Saturday.

VOL. XIV — Part One — CLANTON, ALA., THURSDAY, MAY 24, 1906 — Pages 1 to 8 — No. 32

THE MAN ON THE CORNER

Some of the Sights He Saw, and Some He Saw Not.

"Cyclone" Smith, after all, failed to appear on Wednesday, but in his place N. B. Williams of Montgomery made a good speech of about an hour's length on the cotton situation. He apologized for the non-appearance of Mr. Smith, who was in bed, sick, and spoke of the necessity of a thorough organization of the Southern people to get a fair price for the cotton crop. All are equally interested with the farmer—bankers, merchants and storekeepers, and with the help and assistance of all, the Association will proceed with the good work. Let the good work go on!

The Grand Jury, it is said, is doing good work, and lots of it. As regards the latter part there is no question, and it is much to be hoped that the first part will also be accomplished, for the county will have a pretty bill to pay. For [illegible] days they have labored, and the end is not yet, although there are signs they may get through by to-morrow (Thursday). Witnesses galore have been examined, "Many have been called and few chosen," and the "chosen" will wish they hadn't done it, for conviction will follow violations of law. This Grand Jury has, I believe, broken the record in the length of their being is session, but so long as it means an increase of respect for law and order, and redounds to the advantage of the county, it is well and good.

Billingsley, Ala., May 20, 1906

Dear Editor—I will give a few [illegible] from Billingsley. The health of this community is very good.

Mrs. W. W. Carter has regained her health and returned home from Montgomery, to the delight of her many friends.

We have two progressive Sabbath schools at this place and a great deal of interest is taken in the two schools.

We had a grand picnic at J. C. [illegible]'s mill Saturday last which was enjoyed by all.

The wedding bells will ring in Billingsley some time this week.

J. C. Grimes made a flying trip to Birmingham Tuesday.

The buzz of the Carter Lumber Co's saw can be heard every day.

Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Gandy has returned from Chattanooga, where they went to attend the Baptist Convention.

Farmers are looking blue as crops are very backward around Billingsley.

I am glad that my lot has been cast among such good and generous people as I have found in Billingsley.

The political pot is beginning to boil in old Autauga There are 5 candidates for sheriff—all prominent men—all Democrats.

We have two turpentine distilleries here; both doing big business. The Carter Lumber Company is doing a big business. They pay good wages and pay off every Saturday.

MAKE MONEY.

Here is an interesting study: Make out a list of all the people you know, and estimate the amount of money each one earns in a year. Total it up. The amount will be surprisingly large. Now, of all those people, only the few who SAVE SOMETHING really MAKE anything at all. Simply earning money isn't making it; what slips through the earner's fingers is finally "made" by somebody else. Don't forget to count yourself in on the list, and if you are not "making" money, begin now to save with us. One dollar will open your bank account.

Thorsby Wins

It being impossible for the entire ball team to go to Thorsby Friday, five of the boys got up a scrap team and went up and gave the Thorsby people one of the rottenest exhibitions of baseball they ever had the misfortune to witness, losing, 22 to 8. The Thorsby team also played a ragged game, and although they used four of Jemison's best players, they would have been easy for the regular Clanton team.

Fairbanks in Birmingham.

Birmingham.—Vice President Chas. W. Fairbanks, his wife and Mrs. C. H. Ackert, wife of Fourth Vice President C. H. Ackert, of the Southern railway, received a hearty welcome in Birmingham Friday from shortly after their arrival in a private car over the Southern until a late hour.

At 7 o'clock a number of prominent citizens representing the general conference of the Methodist Episcopal church, south, the Birmingham Commercial club and the Scottish Rite Masons, met the vice president and his ladies at the station, and in carriages and automobiles they were escorted to the home of Col. and Mrs. T. G. Bush, on Highland avenue, South Highlands, where breakfast was partaken of.

At 11 o'clock Mr. Fairbanks and the ladies repaired to general conference of the Methodist Episcopal church, south, in which the distinguished visitor is a fraternal delegate. The vice president was introduced to the conference by Bishop Hoss and the introduction was acknowledged in a few words.

When the vice president had concluded the delegates in the conference arose and began singing "My Country, 'Tis of Thee." Mr. Fairbanks remained at the conference until after 1 o'clock. The ladies in the party returned to the residence of Mrs. Bush, where luncheon was served. Later in the afternoon Mrs. Bush received in honor of Mrs. Fairbanks and Mrs. Ackert, the affair being one of the most splendid social functions of the season.

At 1:30 o'clock the vice president was driven in an automobile to the Country club, where a luncheon was served. A little reception was held before the luncheon. W. P. C. Harding, president of the First National bank, acted as toastmaster for the luncheon. The tables were set in the shape of an X, and flowers were used in profusion. The distinguished visitor was given a prominent position in the center, while on all sides were prominent members of the general conference who had been invited. Mayor George B. Ward extended a welcome in a few words. Mr. Robert Jemison, Jr., the recently elected president of the Commercial club, the youngest man of wealth in Birmingham, was next introduced and he extended a welcome in behalf of the commercial organizations of the city, paying a high tribute to Mr. Fairbanks as a high-class, Christian gentleman.

Hanson Buys Out Compress Company.

Montgomery, Ala.—Papers were filed with the judge of probate court recording the sale of the entire land holdings of the Alabama Compress and Storage Company, the corporation which now controls nearly all the large plants in that line of business in Alabama, and which is managed by C. C. Hanson, of Atlanta.

By the sale the Alabama Compress company goes out of existence, its trade and property being absorbed by the larger organizations.

Coal Company Incorporated.

Birmingham.—The Sepoy Coal company, with a capital stock of $25,000, has filed articles of incorporation in the probate court. A general coal mining business is to be carried on, headquarters being in Birmingham. H. W. Perry, G. M. Brown and Sam Perry, Jr., are the incorporators.

Birmingham.—W. B. Biddle, third vice president of the Rock Island and Frisco railroads, headquarters in Chicago, spent Saturday in Birmingham inspecting the terminals owned by the Frisco at this point. He was tendered a luncheon at the Country club, after which he left for Kansas City.

It is stated that the visit to the district is significant anad that early developments may be looked for. The Frisco is largely interested in terminal property in Birmingham, and it is understood that further development is proposed.

Cullman.—The county democratic executive committee, at its meeting last March, called a primary for state senator from this, the Third Senatorial district. This action was resented by the other counties in the district, Blount and Winston, and Judge John L. Kelton, of Blount county, presided over a meeting of the democratic committee of the district, which repudiated the action of the committee of Cullman county and called a primary from the district at large to be held at the time of holding the general state primary. In the county primary A. A. Griffith defeated F. E. St. John by about 400.

Scaffolding Falls.

The men were at work on the scaffold repairing the theatre building when the scaffold, erected at a height of twenty-five feet, collapsed without warning. Ruple and Underwood were caught by the falling timber and crushed by its weight. Stewart and Spencer jumped, clearing the debris, and were not injured.

Episcopal Meet Closes.

Selma, Ala.—The seventy-fifth annual meeting of the diocesan council of the Alabama Proetstant Episcopal church came to a close Friday afternoon. Huntsville was selected as the next place of meeting. The board of missions chosen consists of B. H. Marshall, E. C. Andrew, C. C. Grayson, Luke F. Matthews and J. H. Fowlkes. The report on the state of the church showed a total number of 8,414 communicants, an increase of 9 per cent. during the year. The chancellor of the council was instructed to endeavor to secure the passage by the legislature of a law allowing an increase from $50,000 to $100,000 in the bishop's fund. A committee of twelve was named to take up the matter of disposing of the church property in Mobile. The home mission fund was apportioned as follows:

Birmingham, $2,025; Huntsville, $700; Montgomery, $1,500; Selma, $1,200; Mobile, $1,536.

Sensational Robbbery.

Birmingham.—One of the most sensational robberies that has occurred in the Birmingham district in many a day was that in which Thomas L. King, a merchant of Palos, was compelled to hand over $636 in cash to two white masked desperadoes.

The bold hold-up occurred about half way between Flat Top and Palos. Mr. King had been to the former place, and having collected a large sum of money, was returning to Palos. Unexpectedly the two men confronted him and two revolvers were pointed threateningly at his head. Instantly his hands went into the air and a few seconds later the highwaymen had extracted $636 in cash from his pockets. Three hundred dollars of the money was in $20 bills and the remainer was in smaller bills, ranging from $1 to $10.

Land Office Transfer.

Montgomery.—Gen. R. D. Johnston, of Birmingham, who was appointed some time ago register of the United States land office in Montgomery, failed to appear to be sworn into office in this city Saturday.

Owing to a tecnical difficulty in the filing of General Johnston's bond for the office the return of the commission from the land department in Washington has been delayed, and was not received in time for the appointee to come to the Capital City. It is expected that he will report to take charge Monday.

Maj. Robert Barber, the outgoing official, continues in office until his successor is sworn in. Major Barber was reported last evening as being seriously ill at his residence.

Quake in Marengo County.

Selma.—The train crew of the Louisville and Nashville railroad, running between Myrtlewood, in Marengo county, and this city, reported that a perceptible earthquake shock was felt in Myrtlewood. The shock is said to have lasted for what seemed a half minute and the houses rocked to such an extent that many ran out into their yards in their night clothes Myrtlewood is located upon a hillside and it is argued that if an earthquake shock really struck that section it would be felt at such a point more than any other. So far as known no reports have been received of the shock having been felt anywhere else in the neighborhood.

Cotton Crop Injured.

Hamilton, Ala.—The reports from almost everywhere seem to verify the rumor that the cotton crop is injured to a certain extent almost everywhere on account of the cold weather and frosts.

Oscar Orgain Dies.

Huntsville.—Oscar Orgain, a popular young man of the city, died at the home of his father, W. B. Orgain. He was ill less than a week with peritonitis. The young man was 19 years old.

Dothan, Ala.—Solicitor Parks in an impassioned appeal for law and justice made the closing speech in the case of the state against E. L. Cowan, concluding just at nightfall Friday night, and Judge Perce ordered an adjournment until Saturday morning, at which time he charged the jury, and another one of the most important cases in the criminal history of Southeast Alabama entered upon its last stage in the courts.

BIG FOREST FIRE

Flames Sweep Over Great Area of Forest Lands. Ten Towns Destroyed.

MILLIONS LAID WASTE.

Wires Are Down and News of Most Meager Nature Reaches the Outside World.

Escanaba, Mich.—At least thirty lives are believed to have been lost, eight towns have been destroyed and seven summer tourist resorts laid waste in a raging forest fire that has already consumed $2,000,000 worth of timber and is still eating a terrific path of devastation in the Northern Michigan woods.

Already the burned area is thirty-five miles square, and within this flame-fanned territory a number of lives are known to have been cut off, and it is feared that many persons have been cut off in their efforts to escape from the perils of the blazing forests.

These towns are reported flame-scourged:

Talbot, twenty-five miles north of Menominee, 300 population; destroyed.

Quinnesec, 1,000 population; reported to be on fire.

Saunders, in Iron county, swept by flames; loss of life reported.

Shaffer, in Dickinson county, wiped out; loss of life reported.

Daggett, fire within half a mile and burning directly toward the town.

Powers, reported to be in danger; fire only a short distance away.

Ralphis, north of Escanaba, 300 population; destroyed.

Salvoie, north of Escanaba, 200 population; wiped out.

Cornell, north of Escanaba, 500 population; wiped out.

Woodlawn, north of Escanaba, 200 population; wiped out.

The first appeal for aid reached Escanaba from a small lumber camp in the center of the burned district. The news was contained in a brief message to the authorities, stating that a raging furnace of fire was destroying timber lands to the west and that unless fire fighting apparatus could be rushed to the scene miles and miles of timber would undoubtedly be destroyed.

A few minutes later an effort was made to get into communication with the camp, but without avail.

Since that time several reports have been received from small Michigan towns, but all rural telephone communication was cut off. It is now believed that the fire has spread over an area of more than fifty miles.

Within the burned district, which lies about seventy-five miles from here, are known to be at least seven popular resorts for early summer tourists.

Several parties left Escanaba last week in wagons to make an overland drive through the dense forest to various resorts. In each of these resorts are hotels that have undoubtedly been consumed.

A stretch of territory over 250 miles in length, from Newberry on the east to Bessemer on the west, and north and south between the shore line of Lake Superior and the southern boundary of the upper peninsula, is dotted with settlements, and farm houses have been burned, timber lands destroyed, and hundreds of persons rendered homeless.

The loss in the immediate vicinity of Marquette is more than $50,000, involving only the destruction of personal property, and not including the devastation of the timber lands or damage to railroad property.

The towns of Quinnec and several hamlets on Menominee iron range are reported wiped out at this time, but it is impossible to ascertain the details. Northwest of Marquette, the town of Birch, where the Northern Lumber companay has fully a half million dollars worth of property, was threatened with destruction, and men were sent from Marquette by special train to fight the flames. Unless rain falls soon much havoc will be wrought, as the woods are very dry.

Mad Cow Kills Man.

Wooster, Ohio.—A mad cow charging through the streets here drove pedestrians in terror to places of safety. The cow had previously gored to death William Hines, who was leading the animal to pasture. The cow suddenly became obstreperous and attacked Hines with her horns, which she plunged into his body several times, inflicting fatal wounds. The animal was killed by a policeman.

Will Support British Protest.

Pekin, China.—At a meeting of the representatives of the foreign powers here it was announced that all the governments would support the British protest against the changes in the Chinese customs service. Further steps are withheld pending China's response to a second note from the British charge d'affaires on the subject.

Hill Wiped Away. Pope Stricken.

Rome, Italy.—The pope was stricken with a sudden attack of heart failure and Dr. Lapponi, physician to the vatican, was hurriedwly summoned. The physician administered restoratives, after which the pope revived. Dr. Lapponi has ordered his holiness to take complete rest.

The pontiff's condition, while not alarming, is causing his entourage some uneasiness. His holiness has been suffering since Thursday from an attack of the gout in the right knee. Notwithstanding his illness, he received a number of Dominican friars in audience that day.

The attack of heart failure is not initself dangerous, but the pontiff is run down generally, because of over work. His engagements for the next few days have been cancelled and the pope will probably remain in bed until the middle of the week. The pontiff has promised to attend the ceremony of the beatification of the Dominican martyrs, who lost their lives in Tonquin, but this engagement has been cancelled with the others.

Rate Bill Passed.

Washington.—After seventy days of almost continuous deliberation the senate passed the railroad rate bill by the practically unanimous vote of seventy-one to three. The three negative votes were cast by Senators Foraker, republican, of Ohio, and Morgan and Pettus, democrats, of Alabama. There was an almost general sigh of relief among the senators.

The bill has received more attention from the senate and from the country at large than any measure that has been before congress since the repeal of the purchasing clause of the Sherman act in 1898. It was reported to the senate on February 26, and was made the unfinished business on March 12. From March 12 to May 4 the bill was under general discussion without limitation on the duration of speeches, fifty-eight of which were delivered.

For twelve days the bill has been under consideration under a rule limiting speeches to fifteen minutes each. The debate has at all times been earnest and animated, but for the most part devoid of personality as between senators. The past few days, however, has called out some caustic criticisms of the president and of some newspaper correspondents by Senator Bailey.

In addition to passing the bill the proceedings consisted in concluding the consideration of the amendment as such and the delivery of a number of speeches on the bill. The only amendment adopted was the one offered by Senator Teller, eliminating the words "in its judgment" from the power given to the interstate commerce commission to fix rates.

Dowie Lived Gay Life.

Zion City, Ill.—In a cross bill filed at Waukegan, the Voliva faction of Zion City declares that under the administration of John Alexander Dowie the Zion industries lost approximately $2,500,000. In affidavits accompanying the cross bill incidents are related tending to show that the "first apostle" has been afflicted with mysterious hallucinations, which finally reached reached their climax in a strange trance into which he fell while at La Chappela, Mexico.

Revelries at sunrise prayer meetings and orgies in and about the grounds of Ben Mac Dhui, the summer home of Dowie at White Lake, Mich., are charged against the "first apostle" by John Jensen, former Dowieite and for two years manager of the summer estate.

Jensen today departed for his former home in Millbrook, N. Y., but before he left he made charges against the deposed "prophet."

"Dowieism is rotten," was the comment of Jensen. "Last summer there were too many scandals for me. I saw something one night that is not fit to be explained. It is no wonder that Voliva deposed Dowie. The old schemer while at his summer home seemed to live to kiss and embrace the pretty female members of the white-robed choir.

Deadlock May Be Broken.

Dover, Del.—Seven Kent county union republican members of the Delaware legislature met in conference with United States Senator Allee and signed a petition asking Governor Lea to call a special session of the legislature for the election of a United States senator. THE RE-AWA

BY PHIL CONANT

(Copyright, 1906, by

Young and charming Mrs. Curtis sat in the extreme corner of the big double box which was slowly filling with Mrs. Potter's guests and looked over the great audience with languid interest. A great part of the audience returned the inspection with evident relish. It really was a very select box party and the people out in the body of the house found a delight even greater than watching the play in identifying the members of the exclusive set whose names so regularly adorned the society pages of the newspapers.

Among all the distinguished folk in the box none was so charming an object upon which to gaze as young Mrs. Curtis. The gods had endowed her with great beauty and that subtle charm which may be called personality or a half dozen other things. Her expression was bright as a May morning, albeit inscrutable.

"I wonder if she ever had a care beyond the selection of her gowns," whispered a wan little woman in the balcony to her husband.

"And I wonder how she would look if she had some downright trouble and worry," she added with a sigh at her own fading youth.

The box was now all but filled. One lone seat remained and it happened to be beside Mrs. Curtis.

"Oh, dear," said Mrs. Potter, a little impatiently. "How dreadful. Here is Mr. Curtis and the only seat left is beside Mrs. Curtis. I did not expect you, sir, and had arranged that seat for Baron Sternhold. Now you appear unexpectedly and I this moment receive a note from the Baron that he is unexpectedly detained. I was sure Mrs. Curtis said you would not be here. Well, of all things—that a man and his wife should be seated vis-a-vis at a box party."

And there was a ripple of laughter as Mr. Curtis gravely seated himself beside his wife. He was a handsone fellow with his finely poised head so at variance with the almost boyish effect his curly black hair gave. Unlike his wife, there were lines of care in his face and touches of gray about the temples.

"Ed. Curtis looks as though he had been up against some trouble," whispered a ruddy faced old beau back in the box.

"Or else he's been going the pace a little harder than usual," retorted the lady beside him carelessly. "Oh, you men cannot go scot free from your revels."

In the meantime as Curtis seated himself the color partly faded from his wife's face. Her fan trembled just perceptibly and the eyes still scanning the audience were unseeing eyes. Without looking at him she felt rather than saw that his hand resting so gracefully upon his knee was shaking.

"Inasmuch as we are on dress parade and in full public view," he said, leaning over and whispering in her ear, "it might be best to act it out and display enough decent interest in each other so as not to gratify the fierce longing for scandal which pervades the kind hearts about us."

"You are quite right," she replied coldly. "I did not expect you. I

THE RE-AWAKENED SPARK

BY PHIL CONANT

Young and charming Mrs. Curtis sat in the extreme corner of the big double box which was slowly filling with Mrs. Potter's guests and looked over the great audience with languid interest. A great part of the audience returned the inspection with evident relish. It really was a very select box party and the people out in the body of the house found a delight even greater than watching the play in identifying the members of the exclusive set whose names so regularly adorned the society pages of the newspapers.

"You are quite right," she replied coldly. "I did not expect you. I thought you started for Mexico today."

Young Mrs. Curtis.

"I decided to defer it until to-morrow," he replied. "If it were possible for you to smile pleasantly—not at me, you know, but at somebody in the audience, it might serve to lessen the interest of the dear friends about us."

She flashed a dazzling smile at a golden figure of Cupid over the stage—a smile which drew an expression of agony to his face.

"If you could think of one subject for sustained conversation it might be easier," she said.

"I will," he answered, sharply, turning toward her, "I will tell you the story of a great love and its unhappy end.

"The hero was but an unformed boy, thrown into the realities of life early because he happened to have been born into the hot-house atmosphere of money and society. He thought he was mature, experienced and even blase, when really he was more ignorant himself than the commonest clod."

"Was there a heroine?" she asked,

"And why did he not go?" asked the woman.

dropping her eyes from the flare of the great theater to the grateful darkness of the carpet.

"There always is a girl," he replied, quietly. "For goodness sake, Mabel, don't look solemn. Remember our kind friends all about."

She raised her head and swept the house with the regal manner so characteristic of her.

"Go on," she said.

"Well, this pathetically unequipped hero fell in love with the heroine of course. Yes, he truly fell in love. He hardly knew it at the time, for he was a selfish young animal and little understood what love really meant. Perhaps it was more desire than love. Anyway he pursued the heroine and won her for his very own.

"And then, you see, trouble began. He was a primitive sort of animal and his real civilization only began to be foreshadowed when he married the heroine. Up to that time the whole scheme of the universe rested on the cornerstone of what he wanted. After a bit it began to percolate his selfishness that there were desires and needs on her part."

"Couldn't you manage to laugh or look bored or something," she interrupted. "Our dear friends are becoming interested."

He did his best, but it was more a grimace than a smile. She flashed full upon him that marvelous smile of hers.

"Go on," she said, softly.

"Oh, well," he said, wearily, "it is a dreary story. He demanded everything gave little, and thought less. And all the time he knew that she loved him. And he loved her, too, more blindly and passionately every moment that he did the very things to kill her love.

"Of course the end was bound to come. There were bickerings and scenes and there was brutal indifference and exasperating slights—heavens, there were scenes between them, disgusting, inexcusable—and it was all his fault. He was forming his character at her expense, and he was killing her love, which all the time he was learning to value the more.

"And finally the crash came. The bitter things she said in answer to the bitter things he said rankled in his heart until he no longer could stand it, and he determined to go away and forget. So the hero and the heroine agreed to disagree and the hero was to have left for Mexico today—and never trouble the heroine more."

"And why did he not go?" asked the woman, flashing the ghost of her dazzling smile at the golden Cupid over the stage.

"He went to the train and boarded it," the man replied, regarding her steadily, "but the flood gates of his memory opened and the tide of his great love swept over him and the knowledge that there was to be this box party came to him, and he knew she would be here—and the hunger of his heart drove him to leave the train to come here and see her once more, if only from a distance. And he is a boy no longer, but a man who has put away boyish things forever."

"The heroine," said the woman very softly, "was also very young and had never been taught many things she should have known. She never knew about tact and—and—that sort of thing. She also had a great love which grew with the years, but did not know how to express it."

A great light filled the eyes of the man.

"Don't you think the hero might have another chance—that they might start over again?" he said eagerly.

The smile she turned toward him was not the dazzling one sent to the golden Cupids, but so soft and womanly that the face of the woman was transformed.

"Look here, you two," cried Mrs. Patton, leaning over and tapping each with her fan. "Pay attention to the play. Positively, you haven't heard a word yet. Anybody would think you were lovers instead of a blase married couple of five years' experience."

HAD SEVERAL GOOD EXCUSES.

South Dakota Man Really Unable to Invite Traveler to Dinner.

Along about noon as I was riding horseback along a South Dakota highway, I came upon a settler at his gate, and, after he had brought my horse a pail of water, he asked.

"Stranger, did you meet a strapping young man with a set jaw between here and Ellendale?"

"Yes, I believe I did," I replied.

"Wall, that was my son Jim, going to town to marry a widder woman 12 years older than he is. Durn his hide, but he wouldn't listen to me. Did you also meet a gal about twenty years old between here and town?"

"Cross-eyed and her nose turned up?"

"Yep. That's my gal, Sal, who's gone to town to sue a feller for breach-of-promise. Dog her cats, but nobody ever asked her to marry him or ever will."

"I also met a woman about fifty years old," I said.

"Red hair and freckled face?"

"Yes."

"That's my old woman. I told her this morning that if she didn't like my ways she could take the outside of the house, and drat her antics, if she didn't walk off. I was going to as ask you to stop to dinner, but as things are as they are—"

I assured him that I wasn't a bit hungry, and that his excuses were all right, and lent him a chew of tobacco and left him trying to whistle up his spirits.—Rochester Democrat and Chronicle.

Why He Had a Grievance.

Half-time had been called, and, as usual, the sides were fraternizing. The goal keeper was talking earnestly to one of the backs.

"George," he said, "will you do me the favor of going into the goal, while I play out in the first ten minutes?"

"Whatever for?" asked the back. "You're doing very well."

"Yes; that's all right. But I've been looking over the opposition lot, and—and—"

His voice broke for a moment; then he continued rapidly:

"Many years ago their center forward and I were rivals for the hand of a beautiful maiden, and for what I have suffered on his account I—I should dearly love to come to an understanding with him."

"Poor old chap!" murmured the back. "You seem to feel it badly. I suppose he married her and left you out in the cold—eh?"

"No, he didn't!" snapped the goalkeeper. "He stood aside for me, and I married her!"—Answers.

Chance for a Profit.

The artistic temperament often leads toward poverty but it frequently compensates its victim with a saving grace of humor which makes even the poverty a source to fun.

A young woman who was possessed of the temperament and had given up everything else for it suddenly sold a picture for a considerable sum and made haste to apply the proceeds as a first payment on a small cottage she had long desired. The former owner attempted to advise her about the neighbors.

"Now that couple next door," he said, warningly, "they're all right—good neighbors, friendly, and all that. But keep your eyes open. If they see a chance to make a hundred dollars out of you they won't hesitate to do it."

"Fine! Fine!" cried the young woman. "I'm going over now and see if I can't get them to do it on shares."—Youth's Companion.

A Limit.

At the University Club banquet a night or two ago Secretary Wilson of the Department of Agriculture told about the greatness of the American hen and eulogized the farmer as the producer of the nation's wealth, says the Washington correspondent of the New York World. He said he is looking for men to help him in the work of investigation.

"If I can find a man who will discover a plant that will bind desert sands together so the winds won't shift them, or who will tell me how to plant a hundred thousand acres of trees in a year," he said with fine enthusiasm, "I will pay him—I will pay him"——

"How much?" asked somebody.

"As much as the government will allow me to," he concluded rather lamely, and everybody groaned.

The man on the street car with a newspaper happened to observe that the old lady next to him on the right seemed interested and he laid the paper aside and said:

"Madam, you have, of course, heard of the Panama canal enterprise?"

"I—I think I have, sir," she replied.

"Think of it, madam—think of digging a great ship canal eighty miles long, and some of the way through hills fifty miles high!"

"Yes, sir."

"Think of the largest ships afloat passing through that canal!"

"Yes, sir."

"Think of the $200,000,000 it will cost to complete the canal. Think of the stupendousness of the whole enterprise! Can you grasp it, madam—can you grasp it?"

"Well, no, sir," she replied, as she hitched around some more. "No, I can't say that I can, but I've got half a dollar and am on my way to market, and if you'll please tell me whether 'taters have gone up since yesterday I shall be a thousand times obliged to you."—Washington Post.

Judge Not.

When some one sings a little song,
And asks you what you think about it,
Do not reply, with face drawn long,
"It may be good, but yet I doubt it";
For every simple note that swells
With hope, and joy, and gladness ringing,
Will reach some heart where sorrow dwells,
And echo there its voice of singing.

When some one does a little deed,
And you, perchance, observe the action,
Do not conclude with thoughtless speed
That it will gain no sweet attraction;
For blessed deeds, like balls of snow,
Kept rolling on through life's rough weather,
Enlarge their fullness as they go,
Until they bind the world together.

When some one lifts a whispered prayer
From the mother's knee, or gilded altar,
Doubt not that God is waiting there
To hear the lips that lisp, or falter;
But know, O man, so proud and blind,
So full of doubt and cold misgiving,
These little gems, which all may find,
Make earth a heaven, and life worth living.
—John Philo Trowbridge, in Boston Transcript.

"I'm sorry you don't like your new visiting cards," said the engraver. "What's your principal objection."

"Oh, the type's too narrow, for one thing," replied Adam Nuritch.

"But that's fashionable, and it's pretty, too. Take the A, for instance; now, the narrow, graceful—"

"The A's what I object to most. I always understood it was swell to use the broad A."—Philadelphia Ledger.

Patrice—Why, certainly!

"And some southern birds come north in the winter, don't they?"

"I never heard that."

THE MODERN BLACKSMITH

TO BLACKSMITHS in country towns important positions are allotted nowadays. Since the times of which early poets wrote the business of the horseshoer has broadened out to such an extent that he is recognized as running a shop second in importance to no other in town.

In thousands of instances the blacksmith wields an influence in the town council; frequently he is the mayor. It is a common thing to find him an alderman, and in some instances at least, the residence of a village blacksmith in a prosperous town is as fine as that of the banker. In a great many instances he has a good store of books; there are fine pictures on his walls. The earnings from his trade are invested in shops that are equipped with every modern appliance and in many other ways his general prosperity is made plain to the world.

Men in the country now are more particular about having fine horses on their farms and naturally more careful about the way they are shod. There has been almost as much improvement in fitting a shoe on the foot of a horse as there has been in the work of a dentist in repairing the human teeth.

And all this change despite the invasion of the equine field by the automobile!

FIGHTING OPIUM IN PEKIN

Pekin, the capital of China, is fighting the "opium-shop evil." Efforts are being made to reduce the number of dens and to restrict the smoking of the drug and to curtail the loafing and vice that accompany opium smoking by compelling each shop to take out a license and to pay a tax according to the lumber of "lamps" in each shop. The shops are divided into four classes and the fees are graded accordingly from $1 a month to twenty cents for each lamp, payable on the 10th of every month. The recent proclamation of the Pekin sanitary department reads as follows: "Opium smoking is extremely harmful to the health and the shops where opium is smoked are the retreats of loafers. Such places should really be altogether prohibited, so that the people might enjoy more prosperity, and dens of thieves would thus be done away with. But as opium smoking has become such a habit it cannot be got rid of entirely and at once. The evil can only be removed gradually.

"There are in the outer city of Pekin many opium shops, and it is evident that the smokers are increasing every day, which is very bad. The department has taken into consideration the matter and arrangements have been made for those who will abandon the habit. In addition, the opium shops opened in the outer city of Pekin have been divided into four classes and are to be taxed after certain regulations. They are to register themselves according to their classes and the number of lamps for the payment of taxes so that inspection can easily be effected.

"Shop owners are hereby informed of the regulations and that they are to come to this department for registration beginning from the 30th day 1st moon 31st year of Kuang Hsu. If any one dares to make a false declaration as to his class or the number of lamps, opens shops without license or refuses payment of the tax, if discovered, the building used for smoking opium will be confiscated and the owners strictly fined as a warning to these private dealers in opium shops. All must respect this order and not disobey."

HAD TO BE IMPRESSED

The driver of the Oaktown stage was a person of much amiability and a large fund of anecdote, but his memory was by no means of the best. The inhabitants of his native town made many excuses for him, but summer visitors found his failing a particularly trying one.

"That man should be complained of and should lose his position as express agent and mail carrier!" said one exasperated man who had been obliged to remain in Oaktown over another night, owing to Ranny Peet's forgetting to call for him.

"Well, now, I guess you didn't impress it on Ranny that he was to take ye," said an Oaktown man, moved to mild remonstrance.

"Impress it on him!" echoed the summer visitor. "I wrote my name on his order book in the postoffice. I should like to know what more I could have done."

"Well, now, it's like this," said the farmer, with a half-apologetic air. "Sometimes there's a number of orders on that book, and Ranny might happen to forget one of 'em, so what folks most generally do is just to write their names in the book, and then speak to Ranny about it when he's up on the trip before the one they want to go on. And then they ask Lemu'l, the postmaster to kind of remind Ranny when he stops for the mail. And then we always deem it wise to be all ready to start in time enough so's we can walk down to the cross-roads and head Ranny off, just for fear it might slip his mind, allowing time to go back for a trunk in case there's one to be lugged."—Youth's Companion.

TRAVEL BY STAGE COACH

It was in 1658 that the first regular stage coach began running between the two capitals, London and Edinburgh. It ran once a fortnight and the fare was £4, which would be a good deal more than $20 to-day. The time taken to the journey is not accurately known, but between York and London it was four days. This lavish system of communication was not, however, kept up, as in 1763 the coach ran between London and Edinburgh once a month only, taking a fortnight, if the weather was favorable, to the journey. In 1754 a heroic effort was made to improve the London and Edinburgh coach. The Edinburgh Courant for that year contained the following advertisement:

"The Edinburgh stage coach, for the better accommodation of passengers, will be altered to a genteel two end glass coach, being on steel springs, exceeding light and easy, to go in ten days in summer and twelve in winter, to set out the first Tuesday in March and continue it from Hosea Eastgate's the Coach and Horses, in Dean street, Soho, London, and from John Somerville's, in the Canongate, Edinburgh, etc. Passengers to pay as usual. Performed, if God permits, by your dutiful servant, Hosea Eastgate."

In the days of stage coaches people sometimes clubbed together and hired a post chaise for their journey as being quicker and less expensive, and Scottish newspapers occasionally contained advertisements to the effect that a person about to proceed to London would be glad to hear of a fellow "adventurer" or two bent on the same journey to share the expense.

THE ONE NEEDFUL THING

Acadia College, Wolfville, N. S., had as its president for many years a very able New England divine, the Rev. A. W. Sawyer who was not given to much smiling or joking. On occasion, however, he knew how to press wit and even sarcasm into his service with great effect, and he was very popular with his students.

When the large female seminary building erected near the college was nearing completion, the financial committee, of which Dr. Sawyer was a member, if not chairman, was charged in stentorian tones by a minister, fluent in speech, but without college training, with being guilty of deeds of darkness that needed to be uncovered.

This charge of misappropriation of funds was made at the Baptist convention for the maritime provinces, held at Truro, N. S. The speaker resumed his seat, and for a little there was a painful silence. Then the comparatively slender form of Dr. Sawyer was seen to rise and move slowly and quietly out to the front of the platform.

The dry old doctor brought down the house by looking up over his glasses and quietly remarking: "The good brother thinks there are some awful works of darkness that need to be uncovered. About the only thing I know of that needs to be uncovered is a gold mine."

REALM OF THE MIND

I walk with Plato through the storied grove
Of Academus; climb Horeb's mystic mount
With Israel's leader; with Salathiel rove
The changing world, and the swift centuries count.

And you would bid me to a narrow hall
To hear you boast this day the all in all!

I hear the mighty music of the spheres,
The chorus of the worlds that grandly sing
The story of the ages, and the years;
A paean to the universal king.

You fancy I would find it great delight
To hear your pretty Diva sing to-night!

Look where Antares blazes, dully red—
The Scorpion's splendid star—in the [illegible] sky;
By many worlds like this his flames are fed.
Behold a mighty solar system die!

O creature of an hour and a day
You ask me to a "firework display!"

In this, my star-ship through the vasty deep
Of space, I make the mighty cycle of the sun.
A million miles in one brief hour I sweep,
And scarcely is the race of worlds begun!

Must I, then, marvel at the snail-like pace,
At which your engines crawl the world's small face?

Peace, peace, O fool! Go on your petty way,
Nor chatter of what your life's [illegible] brings;
I have to do with [illegible]
Upon my business with eternal things.

TAX SALE.

The notice of sale of land for taxes will appear next week, some delay having occurred.

Several correspondents are unavoidably held over this week. Recent rulings of the post office department at Washington make it rather uncertain as to what constitutes a "Supplement," or we would get over the difficulty by issuing one.

The announcement of Hon. S. M. Adams for the important office of Commissioner of Agriculture and Industries is an agreeable one for the Democrats of Chilton, and we are satisfied it will be well received throughout the State. Few men are better known than Judge Adams, and his rugged honesty has made him many friends. Outspoken, and strong in his convictions, that which he thinks is right, he is going to advocate, and, if possible carry into effect. As Commissioner of Agriculture he is the ideal man, a thorough, practical farmer, whose sympathies and ambitions are all with the tillers of the soil, and whose every effort would be made for their benefit. His political experiences enable him to know what is needed, and how to get it.

Judge Adams will, we understand, make a complete canvass of the State, and as a forceful speaker will arouse enthusiasm in the Democratic party. That which is worth doing, is worth doing well, and one of the Judge's characteristics is thoroughness. He goes into this campaign heart and soul, and we hope and believe will come out at the head of the poll.

CIRCUIT COURT.

Henry Davis, (colored) selling liquor, guilty, and fined $75.

Henry Davis, (colored) selling liquor, fined $50.

OLD AGE

DEPENDS NOT UPON YEARS, BUT UPON VITAL FORCE.

In Clanton lately there has been a good deal of discussion in regard to old people. Some at fifty years call themselves old, and really appear so, while others at seventy years seem active, vigerous and young.

It is not years, but it is loss of vital force that makes a person old. Weakened digestion, thin blood and poor circulation soon start functional powers and vitality on the wane, and then the symptons of old age quickly appear.

A member of the Upchurch Drug co. says, "that old feeling may be warded off, and we wish every person in Clanton who feels old, whether they are so in years or not, would try the great discovery, Vinol. We know that it has vital principles which will in a natural manner strengthen digestion, send rich, red blood coursing through the veins, and give new life and strength to every organ of the body, and this is what makes the old feel young again.

Mrs. H. W. Avery says:

"At the age of eighty nine I felt the need of a tonic, something to strengthen and build me up. For some time I have been taking Vinol, and I have found that it brings vigor and renewed vitality to the aged as nothing else will."

Vinol repairs worn tissues, checks the natural decline and replaces weakness with strength. It is an ideal body builder for old folks.

We promise you that Vinol is, first of all, agreeable, because it contains no fishy oil. Second, that it is a genuine cod liver medicine, containing all the medicinal curatives and strength making elements taken direct from fresh cod livers; and third, we will return your money if it does not do exactly what we claim for it." Chattanooga, Tenn., May 12, '06

Editor Banner—I am away from home again, and, as usual, I think of you and the old girl I left behind, and I'll just write to you and her both in one.

I came by the Mobile & Ohio and Queen & Crescent route, thereby meeting a good many Baptists from Southeast Alabama on the way to Chattanooga to attend the same Convention I was making my way to. Some of the brethren I had met in Savannah at the last meeting I attended. One of them told me that they all remembered me well, that I had made an impression on them that would not be soon effaced, that anyone who had ever spent the night in the same room with me and had heard that beautiful snore of mine, filling the room from ceiling to floor, would never, no, never, forget. So Mr. Crichton, you see everything has a good side, even to our faults and failings. If I had not entertained those brethren three years ago in the small hours of the night in Savannah they would have forgotten me.

When we got to Tuscaloosa and were switched on the Q. & C. limited for Chattanooga I found Mr. Comer aboard. I got him into our Baptist car and introduced him all the way through, and when me and Mr. Comer told them what we were going to do for them and these railroads when we got "up there," we got the whole Baptist train (notwithstanding Mr. Comer is a Methodist) except one rusty old preacher, who doubtless had a pass in his pocket, or we would have had him too. I told Bro. Louis Pounds four years ago it was a dangerous thing to take a pass, and I hope he will see this and how a pass tied that poor old fellow and kept him away from Comer and the right way of life.

BEAUTY MORE THEN SKIN DEEP.

A Good Complexion Must Come From Within

The natural desire of every ambitious woman is to have a clear skin and a beautiful complexion. Not every woman can be a Diana or Juno, but the beauty of freshness and the bloom of a clear skin are within the reach of every woman who will make the effort.

It is all a matter of intelligent trying. If the bowels are inactive, if the liver is not working properly, if the poisonous waste and refuse are not expelled promptly from the system the complexion is sure to show the effects.

The only right way to remove pimples, moth spots and blotches and clear up a muddy, cloudy complexion is to go right to the root of the trouble with the proper remedy.

The one remedy that will cure constipation, improve the complexion, brighten the eyes, tone up the liver, cure sick headache and insure a clear, velvety skin is Laxakola Tonic Tablets.

CHAMPIONED PAUL JONES.

MRS. DONALD McLEAN FOUGHT FOR BURIAL OF NAVAL HERO AT ANNAPOLIS.

As President-General of Patriotic Daughters of the American Revolution She Was Invited Guest of Honor at Ceremony.

When the annual convention of the Daughters of the American Revolution was in session in Washington a few weeks ago the meetings were presided over by Mrs. Donald McLean. She enjoyed the unique distinction of being the first presiding officer of the congress who was not the wife of some man prominent in official circles. She had been a candidate for this high woman's office for several years, and the opposition to her election was plainly stated because she could not bring to the office high "national" prestige, which the Daughters of the American Revolution felt was necessary to the varied traditions of the society.

FROM LONG LINE OF PATRIOTS.

Mrs. McLean has half a yard or so of ancestral bars on her revolutionary ribbon, and hails back to some very distinguished citizens, both men and women. She was born in Prospect Hall, Frederick, Md., the city made famous by Whittier's poem, "Barbara Fritchie." The ancestral hall is a big, beautiful old place of colonial architecture, and it is only a few years since Mrs. Ritchie, mother of Mrs. McLean, died. She also had been prominent in D. A. R. matters ever since the organization of the society. Judge John Ritchie, father of Mrs. McLean, served in Congress and was subsequently elevated to the bench of the Court of Appeals of Maryland. He was an orator of renown, and Mrs. McLean seems to have inherited this attribute of her father.

MRS. DONALD McLEAN, President-General of Daughters of the Revolution.

Mrs. McLean's grandfather was Judge William P. Maulsby, and her grandmother, Emily Nelson, for whom she was named, was the daughter of Gen. Roger Nelson, who was a boy of sixteen in college when the Declaration of Independence was signed. He ran away and joined the revolutionary forces. He rose in rank to Brigadier-General for conspicuous bravery on the field of battle. He was left for dead on the battlefield of Cowpens, and a British officer in passing his body wantonly struck his hand with the flat of his saber, breaking the bones of every finger. To his dying day, which occurred many years later, Gen. Nelson carried a stiffened hand. He became a member of Congress and later was made a Justice of the Supreme Court of the State.

DATES BACK OF REVOLUTION.

Mrs. McLean's ancestry began back of the revolutionary period; however, Judges Lynn and Beattie, two of those twelve Judges known as "The Twelve Immortals," who first signed a protest against the British stamp act in 1765, ten years before the battle of Lexington, have in Mrs. McLean a descendant who is not unworthy of the illustrious example of fearlessness of spirit set by them. Lieut. James Lackland was also an ancestor of Mrs. McLean, as was also Deputy Governor Burgess, of colonial Maryland history.

Mrs. McLean was educated at what was at the time known as the Woman's College. She was graduated at the age of fourteen, receiving a diploma which is one of her proud possessions to-day. She continued her studies in history, music and the languages until her marriage, in 1883, to Donald McLean, a man of a long line of revolutionary ancestors like herself and a brilliant lawyer in New York city.

Mrs. McLean has made a practical study of parliamentary law, and in the long years of battling for chapter rights on the floor of the Continental Congress and her own big chapter has become a finished expert in thrust and parry in parliamentary tactics.

At the Fourteenth Continental Congress of the Daughters of the American Revolution, when Mrs. McLean was Regent of the New York Chapter, she assisted in introducing a resolution looking to the burial of Paul Jones in Annapolis, Md., that being her native State. Besides having a local pride, she thought the first naval hero of the nation should be buried near to the great naval school.

There was tremendous opposition to the proposition, and the congress voted to "lay the resolution on the table," an expression used in parliamentary proceedings to defer action on the subject. Later it was taken up, but the congress voted against taking the body of the naval hero to Annapolis and favored bringing it to Washington for burial in Arlington. Mrs. McLean has now, however, seen one of her dearest wishes carried out, and, as head of one of the greatest societies of patriotic women in the world, she was a guest of honor at the recent burial ceremonies of Admiral Paul Jones at Annapolis.

Made a Good Speech.

Senator Morgan the venerable statesman from Alabama, has that valuable sense of humor which enables the possessor to enjoy a joke when the laugh is on himself. The other evening, as he tells about it, he picked up an old copy of the Congressional Record while at home, and opening it at random began to read. "Very soon," says the Senator, "I became interested, and as I proceeded I said to myself, 'This man is making a very sensible talk.' I found myself quite in accord with his views and read along with a good deal of approval until I finished two pages. I was wondering who could have made such a speech but was too much interested to look back to find out. But as I turned the page I came upon an interruption, and there was my own name given as the Senator making the reply. It was my own speech I had been reading."

A Bad Memory.

Senator Knox's physician advised him to give up smoking a few days ago and put him in the same class with Senator Spooner, also smokeless, after forty years of it. The next morning Senator Knox's physician happened up at the Capitol and went into the Senator's committee room to pass the time of day. He found Knox smoking a cigar.

"Here, Senator," he said, "I thought I told you to quit that."

"Quit what?" asked Knox, in mild surprise.

Sun Movements.

Standing on the seashore at a well-known Atlantic Coast resort, watching a beautiful sunset, with its rays piercing the clouds, were two Jews.

"Look!" said one of the followers of Moses, "see the sun rays."

"No," replied the other, "dere is vhere de sun sets."

STANFORD UNIVERSITY.

ALMOST COMPLETE DESTRUCTION OF THE PICTURESQUE CALIFORNIA COLLEGE.

Built in Spanish Architecture and Cost of Buildings Alone was Thirty Million Dollars—Will Probably be Rebuilt.

One of the mose serious results of the Pacific coast earthquake disaster is the destruction of Stanford University, near Palo Alto. More than $30,000,000 had been expended on the buildings alone, and the damage has been so severe that it will mean practically an entire loss. This group of buildings was planned and built on a prearranged scheme and has been accounted the finest group of structures for educational purposes on this continent, if not in the entire world. The buildings were all in the picturesque Spanish mission style, with the arch as the principal architectural feature. This fact, which was so much a source of beauty, has probably been the largest source of destruction, because, while the arch undisturbed is one of the most secure of building forms, when thrown out of plumb it must fall.

IRREPARABLE ART LOSS.

The main buildings are built around an inner quadrangle, which contains the offices of administration and some class rooms. These buildings are all one story in height. The outer quadrangle, which comprises the principal architectural features of the university, has as main points of interest the memorial arch, with its wonderful frieze, by St. Gaudens, representing the progress of civilization in America, and directly opposite this, through the inner quadrangle, the Stanford Memorial Church, with its mosaic front depicting the "Sermon on the Mount." This building cost, in construction alone, $1,000,000, exclusive of the mosaics and carvings inside and out, and its marble statues and art treasures from Europe.

Perhaps it may be said that the loss of the buildings and equipment, in spite of their great value, is the least part of the disaster, because since the university was started on Senator Stanford's Palo Alto ranch it has been a marvelous incentive toward higher education on the Pacific coast. Not only has it gone ahead with great strides on its own account, but it has carried the State University at Berkeley along with it in healthy rivalry, until the two gave an equipment for higher education in California that was not rivaled by that of any other State.

MRS. STANFORD'S GENEROSITY.

If it were not for the indomitable spirit which seems to have enabled the university to triumph over many difficulties it might be said that its career has been particularly ill-starred. For in spite of its great endowment, said to exceed that of any other institution of learning in the country, it has been unfortunate from the beginning. Vexatious litigation arose at the time of Senator Stanford's death, in 1894, and the claims put forward by those who had received personal bequests, to have them settled first, seriously impaired the finances of the university because it was impossible to realize upon its property. After that the Pacific railroad suits tied up the university money for a couple of years, until the Supreme Court decided in favor of the Stanford estate. But Mrs. Stanford, with wonderful courage and singleness of purpose, unselfishly turned all of her property over to the university, saw it through its crises until her recent tragic death in Honolulu, when the Leland Stanford University was again thrown in despair. Its present destruction by the earthquake seems to come as a culminating disaster, yet it is probable that it will rise again superior to the conditions which seem in league against it, though it has practically been set back to an absolutely new beginning.

It is already understood that plans have been considered for the rebuilding of the university, as the statement has been made by President David Starr Jordan to the students of the university, asking them to remain and aid in bringing order out of the chaos resulting from the earthquake. President Jordan has been mentioned to succeed the late Professor Langley as Secretary to the Smithsonian Institute in Washington, but those who are in a position to know state that it is believed that he will remain at the helm of the Stanford University and see that the magnificent buildings are erected again.

Stanford University had its conception in Italy in 1884. There a fourteen year old American boy tossed on his bed, struck down by a malignant fever. His fond mother knelt at his bedside and as his young life passed out, she arose filled with an inspiration that he might live again.

To her husband, Senator Stanford, she said: "It was his wish and desire that indigent young men should have an equal advantage in obtaining education. For his sake let us erect a university where all shall have an equal chance." From that day the Senator and Mrs. Stanford devoted their entire energies toward planning the Leland Stanford, Junior, University.

Government Positions.

As "distance lends enchantment," so perhaps are many people affected who, living in the remote States, are desirous of holding an appointive office under Uncle Sam at Washington.

Lured by the short hours, light work, and comparatively large salaries, the young man or woman is likely to look upon department service as a beautiful life of "Do Little and Draw Your Pay" and watch the passing show. But it has its seamy side and carries both advantages and disadvantages in its train.

There is the danger of fossilization; of becoming a leaf in the sere; with energies gone and aspiration dead. This danger is great and seems almost inevitable to him who has many years of service in the departments. Though all will not agree with the Hon. Champ Clark in a recent article in the Saturday Evening Post when he says "Over the doorways of the Departments should be inscribed in letters so large that he who runs may read:

"All Hope Abandon Ye Who Enter Here."

Yet to the young man and woman who would keep the fires of their ambition burning, government service should be entered only as a stepping stone to a more strenuous life of higher and better things.

FIRE VERSUS DYNAMITE.

TONS OF THE EXPLOSIVE USED AT SAN FRANCISCO TO FIGHT FLAMES.

Three Men of Navy at Risk of Their Lives Place Compound in Teeth of Oncoming Fire—Whole Blocks Razed to Prevent Disaster.

Through the destructive agency of dynamite the section of San Francisco still standing was saved at a cost of more than a million dollars. This powerful compound was scientifically wielded by three men of the U. S. Navy, sent by Admiral McCalla from Mare Island with orders to check the conflagration at any cost of life or property. With them they brought a ton and a half of gun cotton, the terrific power of which was equal to the maniacal determination of the fire.

Capt. MacBride was in command of the squad, Chief Gunner Adamson placed the charges, and the third gunner set them off.

The thunderous detonations to which the terrified city listened all that dreadful Friday night meant the salvation of many lives. A million dollars' worth of property, noble residences and worthless shacks alike, were blown to drifting dust, but that destruction broke the spirit of the fire and sent the raging flames cringing back over their own charred path.

DYNAMITE A BLOCK DEEP.

The whole east side of Van Ness avenue, from Golden Gate to Greenwich, was dynamited a block deep, though most of the structures stood untouched by flame or cinder. Not one charge failed; no one building stood upon it foundations. Unless some second malicious tantrum of nature reversed the direction of the west wind the whole populous district to the west, blocked with fleeing refugees and unilluminated except by the disastrous glare on the water front, seemed safe by 9 o'clock.

Van Ness avenue is flat as the earth on the east side. Every pound of gun cotton did its work, and, though the ruins burned, it was but feebly. From Golden Gate avenue on the north the fire crossed the wide street in but one place—the Claus Spreckels' residence, on the corner of California street. There the flames were writhing up the walls before the dynamiters could reach it; yet they made their way to the foundations, carrying their explosives despite the furnace-like heat. The charge had to be placed so swiftly and the fuse lit in such a hurry that the explosion was not quite successful from the trained viewpoint of the gunners. But though the walls still stood, it was only an empty victory for the fire, as bare brick and smoking ruins are poor food for flames.

EFFECTIVE WORK OF WEEK.

Capt. MacBride's dynamiting squad realized that a stand was hopeless, except on Van Ness avenue. They could have forced their explosives further in the burning section, but not a pound of the terrible guncotton could be or was wasted. The ruined block that met the wide thoroughfare formed a trench through the clustered structures that the conflagration, wild as it was, could not leap. Engines pumping brine through Fort Madison from the bay completed the little work that the guncotton had left, but for three days the haggard-eyed firemen guarded the flickering ruins.

The desolate waste straight through the heart of the city is a mute witness to the most heroic and effective work of the whole calamity. Three men did this—three, simply, because they would not trust their work to others—and when their work was over and what stood of the city for the first time rested quietly, they departed as modestly as they had come. They were ordered to save San Francisco; they obeyed orders, and Capt. MacBride and his two gunners made history on that dreadful night.

Elephants Going Up.

"A five-foot elephant costs this spring," an importer of animals is stated to have remarked, "$1,400, as against $1,200, for which such elephants could be bought two years ago.

"Elephants, like all other wild animals, are growing scareer with the settlement of the globe, and their prices tend upward. More small elephants than big ones are imported because they cost less to begin with and because they are easier and safer to transport, and showmen like them, too, for the reason that young elephants are more tractable and easier to train. And small elephants are attractive anyway.

"Then, the elephant is a hardy animal in captivity and he is naturally long lived, and the young elephant increases in value with his growth. So that even with their prices tending upward, young elephants are good property, though even they are rather large for family pets."

Best Dressed Man in the World.

The majority of men believe that the best and most fashionable in men's clothes comes from London; and that the best dressed man in the world is the American turned out by a London tailor.

An American who spends a great part of his time in London, and is rather a stickler for the correct thing, was recently hailed on Broadway by a friend with the remark, "So that's what they're wearing in London, eh?" The man addressed shook his head. "Suit made in Washington, overcoat in New York," he said. "Thought you were togged out from Bond Street, sure," in a disappointed tone. Then the man who lives much in London made this radical announcement: "They can't make a sack suit in England. You ask a Bond Street tailor for an American business suit with an American fit, and he turns out a coat that gives you a caved-in chest when it's buttoned up and a decidedly open front when it's unbuttoned."

NEW FRENCH MOTOR RAILROAD TRUCK.

Yet some West End tailoring establishments in London depend for their very existence on American trade, not alone the trade of Americans traveling abroad, but a mail order business which entails making on measurements and forwarding by express, likewise payment of duty. So important is this business that a cable code has been arranged. With this code, a complete catalog and full directions for self measurement, a man may cable his order to London, and feel reasonably certain that the clothes he wants will leave England by the next westward bound steamer.

One traveler from a firm in London making a specialty of cable orders recently visited New York and booked orders to the amount of six thousand pounds sterling. But this class of business is all in "semi-ready" clothing, a system which has been adopted from American tailors.

Yet the American "ready-made" has been a subject of laughter on the other side; and the New Yorker's claim to be the, "best dressed man in the world," has been received with jeers. To the foreigner the idea of a man who has literally "no time" to devote to matters sartorial being well dressed is absurd—and the New Yorker has no time. He can't wait for clothes to be made by a "custom" tailor.

When he needs a suit he dashes into one of those immense haberdasheries that dot both sides of Broadway from the Battery to the Bronx, where thousands of "ready for service" suits and overcoats are piled on long tables in stacks that rise above a man's head. Here are found prices and sizes to fit every customer. Sack suits from $3 to $50 advertised for cut and smartness. They are smart, too, are better cut and sewn than the English cheap suit, but the latter is made of better material. It is just this difference that makes the American crowd look smart and prosperous, while the English crowd looks merely comfortable.

The New Yorker must look prosperous. It is part of his stock in trade. His clothes must not appear old any more than his face. This demand for youth and freshness is what makes it possible for some firms to sell as high as 7,000 suits in a day. Hats and shoes get even more attention than clothes. The ancient saw, "When broke buy a new hat," is so thoroughly appreciated by the New Yorker that he receives without even a grin such advertisements as that which puzzled Count Witte as he walked down Broadway. "Fall Lids for Faded Faces," it read. "Fall," muttered the Russian diplomat with a look of weary amazement, "fall, that means to tumble down, does it not?" Some one explained that "fall" was the American for the season which all other nations know as autumn.

Last winter a leading London daily gave a column every morning to the discussion of "The Fetish of the Black Coat." Every clerk and salesman in London wears a frock, or Prince Albert, during his work, and, like the English artisan, he wears the costume of his trade after hours. For weeks members of Parliament and celebrities in many lines argued in the public press as to which system was better: the American custom which ordained the sack suit in business and a change of raiment for laborers after hours; or the English custom which set the frock coat up as the emblem of respectability among tradesmen, a mark distinguishing them from the laboring classes and kept the latter in blouse and hobnailed boots during his hours of rest. In England they talk a lot of what seems awful rot to this side of the water, and they take clothes very seriously. Each class has its garments and each garment its use.

In London the Tuxedo is still a lounge coat, something to be slipped on during the early evening and discarded for the formal "swallow tail" before starting for any entertainment. But the American has forced it into public life, has ordained a black tie and gold shirt studs with it, in place of the white tie and pearl studs that must be worn with the tailed coat. The American speaks of his Tuxedo suit and his dress suit. The Englishman talks of his evening clothes, and would as soon think of changing his trousers to match his smoking jacket, as of changing his studs and tie to accord with his Tuxedo.

While the vast majority of men buy their clothes "ready" or "semi-ready" made, most men regard with envy the one who has time and money to have his clothes made and fitted. The Englishman of means considers it his duty to have his clothes made by the very best tailors and to wear them as badly as possible. As he can rarely remain long at a time within his own country, London custom tailors have stored in their safes measurements of hundreds of wandering Britons who usually cable from various parts of the world when they need new clothes. These measurements are a valuable asset and insurance on them frequently amounts to several thousand pounds sterling.

As a matter of fact, the best dressed man in the world is neither the New Yorker nor the Londoner, but the man who gets his frock coat, cutaway and evening clothes from the Bond Street tailors, who have made these styles of masculine dress for centuries, and his sack suits and overcoats from Fifth Avenue, where one might say they were invented.

New Clothes for Easter.

The flowers with which many churches are ornamented on Easter Day are most probably emblems of the Resurrection. There are people today who think that unless something new is worn on Easter Day no good fortune will come to them during the year. The Dorsetshire poet, Barnes, gives us this quaint little verse in regard to this custom:

"Laste Easter I put on my blue frock coat, the vust time, very new;
Wi' yaller buttons aal o' brass
That glittered in the zun like glass;
Bekaize 'twer Easter Zunday.

ANIMAL HEROES.

The Thrilling Story of "Snap" the Bull Terrier.

Ernest Thompson Seton's last book, "Animal heroes", is, if possible, more than ever up to the standard of his intensely interesting wild-animal tales. To the animal lover this new collection will be read with absorbing attention. Mr. Seton has been subjected to considerable criticism by other naturalists, notably, John Burroughs, for endowing his animal characters with unusual intelligence and powers, which, it is claimed, are not possessed by any dumb creatures. Very likely, as a class, but, as Mr. Seton himself admits in his preface to "Animal Heroes", these histories, while in each case founded on the actual life-doings of a real animal, are more or less composite. What novelist, indeed, does not combine the most striking characteristics of several individuals to construct his human hero, who shall appeal to the reader as an exceptionally fine character? So has Mr. Seton taken the record of a number of wood or other animals and embodied their most striking "kills" or foilings of the pack into one sagacious, brave and gigantic specimen.

Like all of his books, "Animal Heroes" is delightfully illustrated by some two-hundred drawings and sketches from his own and his wife's pencils. Interest is stimulated by a constant succession of marginal drawings, liberally interspersed with full page paintings of thrilling incidents. The story of good-hunting, of fierce pursuit, of fatal closing in—sometimes to the pursued, sometimes to the pursuer—is told by an eye-witness wielding a master pen in depicting animal adventures, and at all times runs through the story the love which the writer bears for all animals—of the proud, indomitable, fearless beast even though he be the scourge of the country, a killer of cattle or sheep or even dogs, of which latter the author is passionately fond, be they good ones.

Nothing he discusses has ever been written which is better worth the reading, and withal sadder in its finale than is the account in this volume of the little dog, "Snap." This "Snap" is a bull-terrier, which was sent the author as a sort of Hallowe'en joke—he was so vicious and unapproachable. He kept Mr. Seton, on the top of the table most of the night, where he smoked cigars until his pocket-supply ran out and then, shivered. However, he finally made friends with his little pup—a youngster absolutely without fear. A year later, the two found themselves near Mendoza, North Dakota where the wolves had been playing havoc with the live-stock, evading poison and traps and actually scorning the attempts of the ranchers and the wolvers to exterminate them. The following is a recital of the hunt in which "Snap" figured most gloriously:

From a high point we caught sight of a moving speck of gray. A moving white speck stands for Antelope, a red speck for Fox, a gray speck for either Gray-wolf or Coyote, and each of these is determined by its tail. If the glass shows the tail down, it is a Coyote; if up, it is the hated Gray-wolf.

We got a momentary view of the pursuit; a Gray-wolf it surely was, loping away ahead of the Dogs. Somehow I so fast as they had after the Coyote. But no one knew the finish of the hunt. The Dogs came back to us one by one, and we saw no more of that Wolf.

Sarcastic remarks and recrimination were now freely indulged in by the hunters. "Pah! scairt, plumb scairt," was the father's disgusted comment on the pack. "They could catch up easy enough, but when he turned on them, they lighted out for home—pah!"

"Where's that thar onsurpassable, fearless, scaire-o-nort Tarrier asked Hilton, scornfully.

"I don't know," said I. "I am inclined to think he never saw the wolf; but if he ever does, I'll bet he sails in for death or glory."

That night several Cows were killed close to the ranch, and we were spurred on to another hunt.

It opened much like the last. Late in the afternoon we sighted a gray fellow with tail up, not half a mile off. As we rose to the upland and sighted the chase half a mile off, Dander, the greyhound, came up with the Wolf and snapped at his haunch. The Gray wolf turned round to fight, and we had a fine view. The Dogs came up by two and threes, barking at him in a ring, till last, Snap, the little white one rushed up. He wasted no time barking, but rushed straight at the Wolf's throat and missed it, yet seemed to get him by the nose; then the ten big Dogs closed in, and in two minutes the wolf was dead. Snap had lived up to my promises for him.

Now it was my turn to crow, and I did not lose the chance. Snap had shown them how, and at last the Mendoza pack had killed a Gray-wolf without help from the men.

There were two things to mar the victory somewhat; first, it was a young Wolf, a mere Cub; second, Snap was wounded—the Wolf had given him a bad cut in the shoulder.

As we rode in proud procession home, I saw he limped a little. "Here," I cried, " come up, Snap." He tried once or twice to jump to the saddle, but could not. "Here, Hilton, lift him up to me."

"Thanks; I'll let you handle your own rattlesnakes," was the reply, for all knew now that it was not safe to meddle with his person. "Here, Snap, take hold," I said, and held my quirt to him. He seized it, and by that I lifted him to the front of my saddle and so carried him home. He had shown those Cattle-men how to fill the weak place in their pack; the Foxhounds may be good and the Greyhounds swift and the Russians and Dane fighters, but they are no use at all without the crowning moral force of grit, that none can supply so well as a Bull-terrier. On that day the Cattlemen learned how to manage the Wolf question.

Next day was Hallowe'en, the anniversary of Snap's advent. The weather was clear, bright, not too cold, and there was no snow on the ground. The men usually celebrated the day with a hunt of some sort, and now, of course, Wolves were the one object. To the disappointment of all, Snap was in bad shape with his wound. He slept, as usual, at my feet, and bloody stains now marked the place. He was not in condition to fight, but we were bound to have a Wolf-hunt, so he was beguiled to an outhouse and locked up, while we went off, I, at least, with a sense of impending disaster. I knew we should fail without my Dog, but I did not realize how bad a failure it was to be.

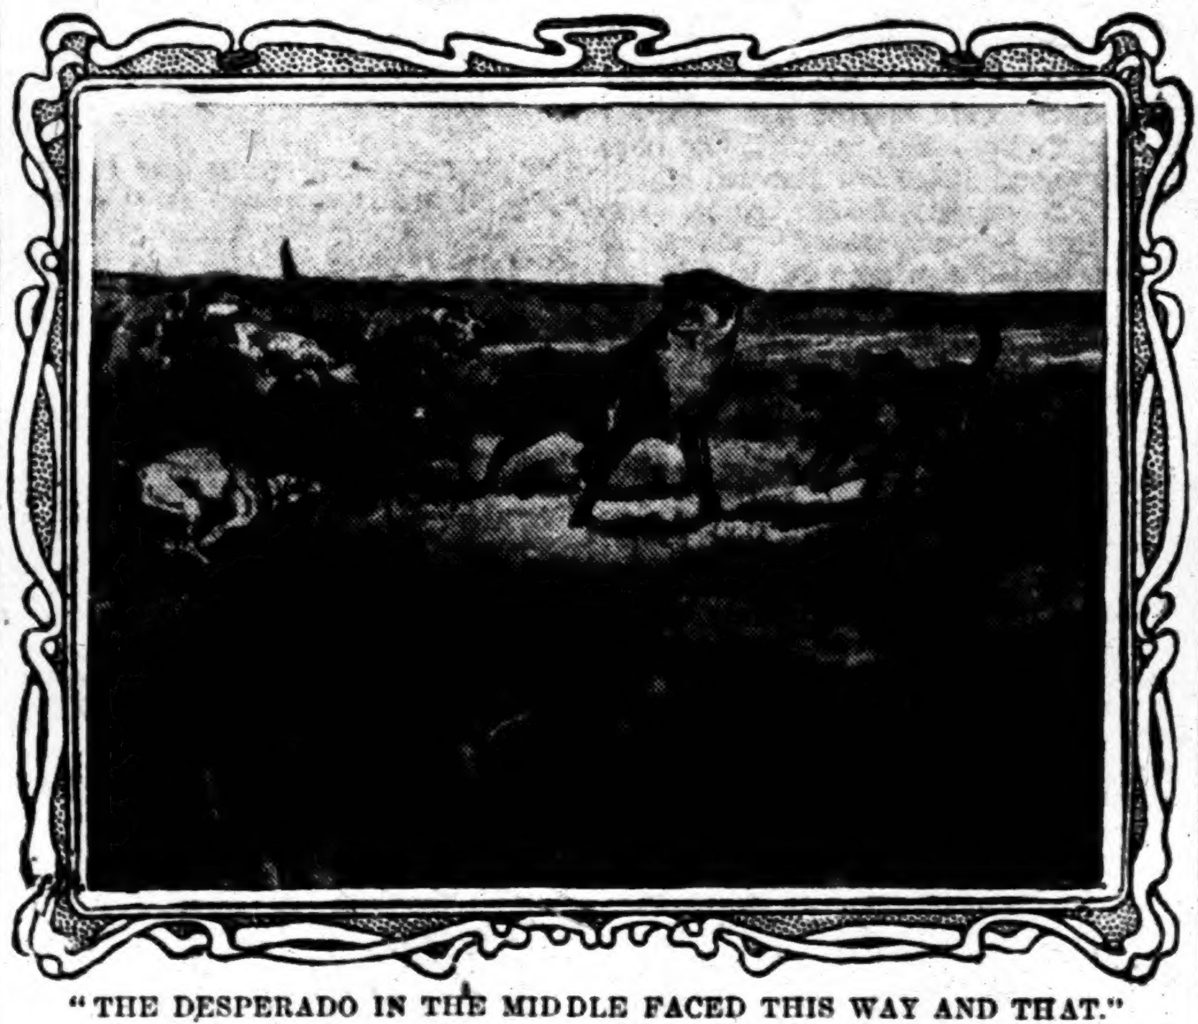
Afar among the buttes of Skull Creek we had roamed, when a white ball appeared bounding through the sage-brush, and in a minute more Snap came, growling and stump-waggling, up to my Horse's side. I could not send him back; he would take no such orders, not even from me. His wound was looking bad, so I called him, held down the quirt, and jumped him to my saddle.

"There," I thought, "I'll keep you safe till we get home." Yes, I thought; but I reckoned not with Snap. The voice of Hilton, "Hu, hu," announced that he had sighted a Wolf. Dander and Riley, his rival, both sprang to the point of observation, with the result that they collided and fell together, sprawling, in the sage. But Snap, gazing hard, had sighted the Wolf, not so very far off, and before I knew it, he leaped from the saddle and bounded zigzig, high, low, in and under the sage, straight for the enemy, leading the whole pack for a few minutes. Not far, of course. The great Greyhounds sighted the moving speck, and the usual procession strung out on the plain. It promised to be a fine hunt, for the Wolf had less than half a mile start and all the Dogs were fully interested.

"They've turned up Grizzly Gully," cried Garvin. "This way, and we can head them off."

We galloped to the top of Cedar Ridge and were about to ride down, when Hilton shouted, "By George, here he is! We're right onto him. "A great Gray-wolf came lumbering across an open plain toward us. His head was low, his tail out level, and fifty yards behind him was Dander, sailing like a Hawk over the ground, going twice as fast as the Wolf. In a minute the Hound was alongside and snapped, but bounded back, as the Wolf turned on him. In a few seconds the next Greyhound arrived, then the rest in order of swiftness. Each came up full of fight and fury, determined to go right in and tear the Gray-Wolf to pieces; but each in turn swerved aside, and leaped and barked around at a safe distance. After a minute or so the Russians appeared—fine big Dogs they were. Their distant intention no doubt was to dash at the old Wolf; but his fearless front, his sinewy frame and death-dealing jaws, awed them long before they were near him, and they also joined the ring, while the desperado in the middle faced this way and that, ready for any or all.

Now the Danes came up, huge-limbed creatures, any one of them as heavy as the Wolf. I heard their heavy breathing tighten into a threatening sound as they plunged ahead, eager to tear the foe to pieces; but when they saw him there, grim, fearless, mighty of jaw, tireless of limb, ready to die if need be, but sure of this, he would not die alone—well, those great Danes—all three of them—were stricken, as the rest had been, with a sudden bashfulness: yes, they would go right in presently—not now, but as soon as they had got their breath; they were not afraid of a Wolf, oh, no. I could read their courage in their voices. They knew perfectly well that the first Dog to go in was going to get hurt, but never mind that—presently; they would bark a little more to get up enthusiasm.



"THE DESPERADO IN THE MIDDLE FACED THIS WAY AND THAT."

And as the ten big Dogs were leaping round the silent Wolf at bay, there was a rustling in the sage at the far side of the place; then a snow-white rubber ball, it seemed, came bounding, but grew into a little Bull-terrier, and Snap, slowest of the pack, and last, came panting hard, so hard, he seemed gasping. Over the level open he made, straight to the changing ring around the Cattle-killer whom none dared face. Did he hesitate? Not for an instant; through the ring of the yelping pack, straight for the old despot of the range, right for his throat, he sprang; and the Gray-wolf struck with his twenty scimitars. But the little one, if foiled at all, sprang again, and then what came I hardly knew. There was a whirling mass of Dogs. I thought I saw the little White one clinched on the Gray-wolf's nose. The pack was all around; we could not help them now. But they did not need us; they had a leader of dauntless mettle, and when in a little while the final scene was done, there on the ground lay the Gray-wolf, a giant of his kind, and clinched on his nose was the little white Dog.

We were standing around within fifteen feet, ready to help, but had no chance till we were not needed.

The Wolf was dead, and I hallooed to Snap, but he did not move. I bent over him. "Snap—Snap, it's all over; you've killed him." But the Dog was very still, and now I saw two deep wounds in his body. I tried to lift him. "let go, old fellow; it's all over." He growled feebly, and at last let go of the Wolf. The rough cattle-men were kneeling around him now; old Penroof's voice was trembling as he muttered. "I wouldn't had him hurt for twenty steers." I lifted him in my arms, called to him and stroked his head. He snarled a little, a farewell as it proved, for he licked my hand as he did so, then never snarled again.

That was a sad ride home for me. There was the skin of a monstrous Wolf, but no other hint of triumph. We buried the fearless one on a butte back of the ranch-house. Penroof, as he stood by, was heard to grumble; "By jingo, that was grit—cl'ar grit! Ye can't raise Cattle without grit."

THE FIGHTING INSTINCT.

Story of a Desperate Hand to Hand Encounter Against Heavy Odds.

Now and then among the brutalities and crimes that form the chief subjects of daily journalism in this country, there comes an item that not only appeals to our morbid nature but gets in close to the primal love of fight which springs eternal in the human animal. Most of us have no feeling except of loathing in the case of the secret assassination of six Italians in Minneapolis, because their modes of fight are Latin in a country of Anglo-Saxon prejudices. But just a week before, the press dispatches from Bristol, Tennessee, told of the sudden demise of seven Italians who with others had conspired to murder their section foreman, because he was a "hard boss." Doubtless he was! Nevertheless, the old fighting blood tingles at the bare account of the battle that the foreman, Haverly, whose name suggests his nationality, waged single-handed against the body of laborers that "rushed" him. Had he been armed with a revolver, he would have no sympathy, but he depended on the first weapon at hand—a crowbar. Backed against an embankment, he withstood the combined attack of the entire gang of laborers, all bent on his murder, and armed, against him, with picks, axes, and spades, in addition to their knives. Repugnant as the idea of killing may be, one can scarcely help a thrill at the thought of the foreman, Haverly, at bay like a knight of former days, fighting for his life, and so sturdily and valiantly laying about him, weapon for weapon, steel against steel, until he stretched seven of his assailants dead before him and routed the rest. Haverly may be a brute and a bully; he may have deserved what the laborers, rising like desperate slaves against a tyrant, had in store for him. Yet, somehow, that is hard to believe because the innate love for combat in our nature challenges admiration for a man who displays desperate courage and physical prowess.

Little Cannibals.

Every once in a while we hear of breeders complaining of the cannibalistic habits among growing fowls, especially among those still in the days of their early babyhood. This pernicious habit, when once the young birds become thoroughly addicted to it, is rather difficult to control and suppress. Usually it finds its chief expression in flocks confined to close quarters, where the ground is bare and the feed is wanting in animal matter. Bird life under natural conditions finds opportunity for work and play in the hunting of insects for food and in the careful selection of such vegetable matter as its system may demand. Young chicks, when confined, are obviously deprived of these opportunities for a healthful exercise; the result is that they become idle, which engenders vicious habits and a craving for something to do as well as for animal food. When in this condition if a member of the little flock shows a wound or effects of blood, the chances are that one or two will at once commence to peck at it, which leads the others on, and soon the whole flock will be rending the little one into shreds, devouring it before one has opportunity to relieve its misery or to isolate it from the flock. The remedy, of course, is obvious, namely, afford the young chicks a wider range and be more careful in your feeding by making it a point to keep them busy by throwing the food into litter or suspending a head of lettuce or cabbage where they can peck at it; also supply in one form or another animal food. A good way to do this is to take the underground scratching chick feeds, which of themselves are a balanced ration, and scatter the same in a litter of chopped straw or hay, about one and one-half or two inches deep. In fact, anything that will make a litter may be considered available.

A Sudden Change.

Two commercial travelers, one from London and one from New York, were discussing the weather in their respective countries.

The Englishman said that English weather had one great fault—its sudden changes.

"A person may take a walk one day," he said, "attired in a light summer suit, and still feel quite warm. Next day he needs an overcoat."

"That's nothing," said the American. "My two friends, Johnson and Jones, were once having an argument. There were eight or nine inches of snow on the ground. The argument got heated, and Johnson picked up a snowball and threw it at Jones from a distance of not more than five yards. During the transit of that snowball, sir, believe me or not, as you like, the weather suddenly changed and became hot and summer-like, and Jones, instead of being hit with a snowball, was—er—scalded with hot water!"

PERILS IN COLD STORAGE.

Frozen Bacteria Active—Government to Make Experiments.

The Agricultural Department is following up a line of scientific investigation of the effect upon perishable goods in cold storage for an unlimited time, and Dr. Wiley believes that he will develop the fact that legislation is needed fixing the period for which such articles as meats and milks may be stored.

In one of the Philadelphia cold storage houses space has been set aside for the experiments and a like arrangement has been made in Washington for storing birds and milk.

The stored articles will be taken out from time to time and examined to ascertain whether or not deterioration has begun, and at what period the point has been reached when the articles can be no longer stored and remain good food.

It already has been demonstrated, Dr. Wiley says, that the bacteria that occasion decay remain in the meat while frozen, and that they carry on their work, although at a greatly reduced rate.

In one of the cold storage plants in Cleveland some meat was recently found which had been mislaid and forgotten for a period of eleven years. It was sent to the department and a portion thawed out and examined.

Decay had gone on to such an extent that the meat was entirely unfit for use. The greater portion of it was again placed in storage and the observation will be continued. The fact that the meat, having been frozen for eleven years, was in a condition of decay, is held to conclusively prove that the bacteria can work in the meat while frozen. The object of the investigation is to ascertain at what point the decay has progressed to such an extent as to injure the food value of the article stored.

There is at present no law prohibiting the storage of any article for any length of time. The only law upon the subject is one that requires fowls to be drawn before they are placed in storage.

The Oregon's Big Pennant.

When the Oregon left Hongkong recently, after her long period of service on the Asiatic station, she was flying a homeward-bound pennant over 500 feet in length. It was necessary to support this long streamer by two small balloons tied to the end to keep it out of the water. The pennant was made of silk thread and attracted much attention in the Asiatic port.

In the old days it was the custom to have a foot of pennant for every day of the cruise. That of the Oregon is probably one of the longest displayed from the mast of a home-coming ship, although it is on record that the old Brooklyn, on one occasion upon her arrival in New York, displayed a pennant 700 feet long.

Directly beneath me a series of dark objects, all black smoke. They were of sizes, and by the formation I conclude only one thing—that were the ships of a fleet, a naval dron. Then I recalled the words Kaiser that moonlight night at Chateau Lagunay:

to a feeling of elation that I here, in the air, in position to wit the greatest naval battle of years, I regretted the necessity for of arms. I observed that the was headed northeast, and desiring view I ran ahead a mile or and descended, until I had a fair The ships were French, by their Beautiful and stately were the vessels; grimly beautiful, too, when one took note of their enormous turret guns—twenty-inch, without doubt, capable of hurling a ton or more of metal every five minutes. I counted ten battleships, five or six torpedo-boat destroyers (recognized by their quadruplicate funnels) and several cruisers. Two huge coal barges were being towed several miles to the rear. This much was visible to the naked eye. Looking through my glass I could see a swarm of torpedo boats, only their conning towers showing above the water, hovering around the flanks and leading the advance.

The fleet was proceeding very slowly in a great curve to the north, evidently not desiring to advance nearer the coast. By late afternoon it had turned and was heading west at the same pace.

As the sun drew near the horizon and the wind freshened I turned the nose of my airship to the east and prepared to spend the night aloft. I had been sailing leisurely back and forth over an area of perhaps fifty miles, in hope of seeing the German fleet. Except for the many passenger steamers coming and going there was nothing to be seen.

I was leaning over the edge of my basket smoking idly. I had just christened my ship "L'Aimee," and was wishing I had the original with me, when a voice came down upon me from the clouds.

"Who are you," it called, in French.

I looked up in astonishment, and there floated the strangest airship I had ever seen. It was merely an aeroplane, supported by great saucer-like metal contrivances, with a small basket-car hung by slender cables. It swept by, some hundred feet above me, and I had a glimpse of a white face looking down upon me. I sped up the motor, and rising as I advanced soon drew up alongside my fellow traveler. Then ensued a brief conversation.

"Where are you going?" I shouted. He was not more than a hundred yards away.

"I don't know. My steering fans won't work, and I cannot turn. I suppose I shall have to consider myself bound for America."

"Can you descend?"

"Yes."

"Drop to the sea, then, and I will pick you up. My ship steers perfectly." We were now far beyond the fleet. I descended by degrees. The other tipped his planes slightly and started down on a long slant, like a boy coasting down a hill. When within twenty feet or less of the water he tipped the planes sharply in the other direction, and his ship stopped with a shudder, hovered for a time like a brooding gull, and settled slowly into the sea. I was close behind him with a small rope-ladder, and a minute later, dripping wet, but cheerful, he clambered into my car. Then we rose again to the two-thousand-foot level and with just enough headway on to overcome the wind, lay as in a calm.
